Miss Bassett has many friends among us who will congratulate her upon the completion of her course, her high standing in the graduating class and who will follow her with best wishes.

—At the residence of the bride's father on Jefferson street, Wednesday afternoon, took place the marriage of Miss Isabel N. Cole, daughter of Mr. Henry Cole, and Mr. Joseph N. Palmer of Boston. Rev. F. B. Hornbrooke officiated. Owing to the death of Mrs. Cole, which occured recently, the ceremony was made very simple. Mr. Palmer is a son of ex-Mayor Palmer of Boston. Mr. and Mrs. Palmer will make their home in Boston.

—Notwithstanding the efforts of the police and court officials to suppress information regarding the subject, it is well known that a young man, whose favorite pastime on dark evenings has been to accost unescorted ladies on the streets, and cause them annoyance by his talk and actions, has been brought into court, and given a trial before the local justice. Whether or not he is the young man about whom so many complaints have been lodged the police are unwilling to say. In fact they are loth to talk upon the matter. The young man in question, it is said, admits that for a year he has been giving several evenings of the week to the pursuit of this pleasure. He is a well known resident, the son of parents who are eminently respectable, and maintain a high standing in the community. The trial was held last Saturday morning behind closed doors.

Anthems, "Holy, Holy, Holy,"	Gounod's "St. Cecilia"
"Hallel jah chorus,"	Handel
Retrocessional, "Holy, Holy, Holy Lord God Almighty,"	Dykes

Seats free.

—A correspondent calls attention to the poor work done on the roadway of the bridges, which is especially noticeable on the Centre street bridge. The grading was so poorly done that pools of water stand in the roadway after every rain, and the water has no chance to run off. It is surprising that the Boston & Albany should accept such faulty work. If they had had such a firm as Simpson Brothers do the work, there would have been no trouble.

—Miss Annie M. Pressey, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. J. F. Pressey, and Mr. Fred A. Tandy were married, Wednesday evening, at the residence of the bride's parents on Hunnewell terrace. The ceremony took place at 8 o'clock and was performed by Rev. W. H. Davis. The bride was attended by Miss Minnie M. Haskell of West Newton and Mr. Frank French of South Boston acted as best man. At the conclusion of the ceremony a small reception was held. After a wedding tour Mr. and Mrs. Tandy will reside on Pleasant street, Watertown. Mr. Tandy is a son of Mr. Myron W. Tandy, formerly of Hollis street, but now of Los Angeles, Cali.

—The highway department will, in a few weeks, begin the laying out of the Boyd's pond parkway and playground at Nonantum. The work has been planned for some time, but actual operations have been delayed on account of the flooding of the old pond bed. As soon as the water can be drawn off, active operations will be begun. The brook is to be stoned in, and driveways are to be laid out on either side. The remainder of the old pond bed will be grassed down, planted with ornamental shrubs and trees, and converted into a park and playground. An effort is being made to induce the town of Watertown to replace the bridge at the lower end of the pond with an elaborate stone structure. Newton is prepared to cooperate in this improvement, although the bridge is in Watertown.

—The lawn fete given by the ladies of the Baptist church, June 17th, is expected to be one of the events of the summer season.

—In the different police stations throughout the city oakchests containing medicine and surgical instruments have been placed for use of the city physicians in emergency cases.

—Mr. Dana Estes is to build a brick apartment house on Commohwealth avenue, near the Reservoir, 50 by 96 feet, heated by steam and to cost $21,000. Angus McDonald is the builder.

—Permits have been granted for two new houses on Waverley avenue, to cost $7,500 and $7,000 respectively. C. Winthrop Smith is the owner of one and W. S. and F. Edmunds the agents for the other.

—A number of persons interested in the care of orphan children met, at the request of Dr. Shinn, last Thursday, in the parish house of Grace church, to discuss the desirability of incorporating the Williston Home at West Newton. Views were freely expressed as to the merits and the defects of that institution, but after a full consideration of all sides of the question it was unanimously agreed to proceed with the incorporation and to correct any features which have laid it open to criticism. The meeting adjourned to 4 p. m., Saturday, June 4th, at the Home on Eliot place off Lexington street. All persons favorable are invited without further notice.

A NEWTON HIGHLANDS SENSATION.

PROPERTY IN A DWELLING HOUSE HACKED AND SMASHED BY SOME MYSTERIOUS ENEMY.

Considerable excitement has been caused in Newton Highlands by a malicious outrage, unequalled in the police history of Newton. It was the ransacking of a house and the destruction of everything within doors, causing a damage of more than $3000. The facts are said to be as follows:

For a number of years Miss Lillian K. McKenzie has occupied a substantial house, handsomely furnished and located on Walnut street, opposite Lake street, in the choicest section of the village. She is possessed of means and her estate is one of the most attractive in the vicinity. Last Thursday she was married to Mr. Henry T. Schwaar of Boston. Immediately following the ceremony the house was closed and left without an occupant, and the couple went away for a wedding journey. On Tuesday, neighbors in the vicinity thought the house looked peculiar, and an investigation revealed a rear window broken and that the house had been entered.

Mr. and Mrs. Schwaar were summoned home. When they arrived and opened their home they found that almost everything in the house had been destroyed. From top to bottom, not a whole piece of furniture remained. Some malicious individual had gone through the house, demolishing everything possible. Evidently the parlor was the starting point. There a costly Steinway piano was broken into splinters, a sofa was smashed, pictures cut, curtains and rugs as well as portieres ripped into strings, and tables and chairs broken beyond repair.

In the dining-room the sideboard and tables were broken into kindling wood. The china closet was entered, the china and cut glass reduced to powder, and the silver damaged beyond repair. All of the rooms in the house were visited and the contents similarly treated. In the chambers the linen was torn, mattresses ripped and contents scattered about, bedsteads broken, pictures destroyed and furniture ruined. Bureaus were opened, clothing taken out and ripped to pieces. Silk dresses were spoiled and a sealskin sack was cut into inch pieces.

Evidently the crazed individual was armed with an axe, and, not content with destroying everything possible, started to cut down the house itself. The doors and woodwork are hacked, so that much of the interior finish must be replaced with new. The plumbing is hacked and cut and the plastering all over the house, from cellar to attic cut and broken. Especial vindictiveness appeared to be directed toward a portrait of Mrs. Schwaar, and it was cut and punctured, clearly showing that a feeling of spite actuated the outrage. The lady's jewelry and personal adornments were reduced to minute particles and her ornaments and bric-a-brac were broken into the smallest possible pieces.

It appears that Mrs. Schwaar has at least one enemy of long standing. Some months ago her residence was set on fire and she had a narrow escape from suffocation. An entrance was gained to the house at that time in precisely the same manner as this time, and this leads to the belief that the incendiary and the person who perpetrated this latest outrage to be the same individual. As far as is known, Mrs. Schwaar has no enemies, and she does not suspect the identity of the guilty person. The police are equally mystified.

Newton District Nursing Association.

On May 9th this association, having received enough subscriptions to warrant one permanent employment of a single nurse, began its work. During the remaining days of the month this nurse has been called by 13 of the physicians of Newton, and has made 147 calls beside supplying bed linen and clothing for the sick.

She has attended many cases which could not be taken into the hospital because of the incurableness of the disease, while other cases have been sent to the hospital where the physicians so desired. When this association was started many believed there was no need of such a charity. The 147 calls already made in a part of a month prove its value and many calls have gone unattended because one nurse could not find time to make them. The physicians, who have availed themselves of her services, are unanimous in their belief in the good work which has been done.

If our funds in the treasury warranted, a second nurse would be immediately employed, for there is more than enough work for two nurses, but the managers of the association are unwilling to engage a second nurse until they are in sufficient funds to warrant a permanent employment.

Those who have had occasion in their own homes to employ a trained nurse can easily understand the value of calls from such a nurse in homes unaccustomed to such advantages. In this city there ought to be no failure for lack of funds to supply all necessary nursing and a mere statement of the above facts, we believe, will be sufficient to cause enough new subscriptions to be sent to the treasurer, Mrs. John F. Heckman, Newton Highlands.

To warrant the employment of a second nurse, the management do not deem it advisable to add to the force unless it is assured of enough money to make such addition permanent.

During the month, the Masonic Minstrels have given for the benefit of the association an enjoyable entertainment in Bray's hall, Newton Centre, which netted a considerable sum, and in another column will be found a card from the management acknowledging its indebtedness to those who so gave their services.

THE BEST CLOTHES

MADE IN CLEAN WORKROOMS IN THIS BUILDING.

FOUR HUNDRED
WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON.

ON BEACON HILL.

(Special Legislative Correspondence.)

Beacon Hill, June 1.

Although it was never the intention of those who have the most to say in the councils of legislation to have the general court in session at the present time, these honored individuals are doing all in their power to make their prophecies of an early prorogation as nearly true as they generally are, by beginning this morning the double sessions each day which usually come early in May, and by arrangements for evening sessions on Mondays and Thursdays. Most, if not all the members of the legislature detest evening sessions, and will not come to them except unwillingly, and will not stay after they come, unless closed doors and the terrible majesty of the sergeant-at-arms awes them into preserving the quorum supposed to be necessary for business. As a matter of fact, there generally is no quorum, and the consummate tact of the speaker is used to persuade those disposed to call attention to this fact to refrain, for as long as the absence of a quorum is not noticed, whatever the minority present does is legal.

The intention now is to close up proceedings on Friday evening of next week. This decision is contingent on the Boston aldermanic bill as much as anything, though there are other matters which may interfere. Mayor Quincy seems determined to have some sort of a bill passed this year, but he must have first the aid of the Boston Republicans in the legislature and second the consent of the committee on rules, and a big majority in the house, for the governor when appealed to declined to reopen the matter by sending in a message, when there was nothing to indicate that there was anything like unanimity on the question among the members. The general feeling is that to begin on this aldermanic bill again will prolong the session just about a week. There is likely to be a big rush on the home stretch if this issue can be disposed of.

The senate has settled the sewerage question for a year at least and after having substituted a bill for a single metropolitan sewerage commissioner, took the opposite view on the second reading of the bill and killed it. Of course Senator Harwood, representing the Newton sentiment, protested against any such action when the important problem of the building of a high level sewer for the Charles and Neponset river valleys was pending. I understand the effort of Senator Roberts of Chelsea to get the commission abolished has its root in private grievances, suffered not by him, but by others with whom he is friendly, and whose cause he took up a year ago and made his own. He particularly stated during the discussion that he had no personal feeling against either of the commissioners.

The bill for a million dollars in addition to former appropriations for the metropolitan park commission will become operative this year in the minds of some people and will not, according to the opinions of others. Chairman Casas of the metropolitan park commission says he has no fears but any man going into the market with one million dollars for the purchase of real estate will find plenty of chances to spend it, which is undoubtedly true, but that isn't the point. The governor has to sign all the bonds which are issued for this or any other purpose, and in the light of the demands which will be made upon the state treasury for war and other purposes, it is believed he will withhold his signature to bonds of this nature, although the fact that the legislature authorizes this expenditure will of course make it available at any future time. Of course with this amount of money behind it, there will be nothing to prevent the bonding of land or the making of arrangments to take it when the time comes.

A matter which is pending and which may come in under suspension of the rules is the establishing of another state normal school in Boston. There is a normal school here already, which is under control of the Boston school board, which has recently voted to discontinue it, with the understanding that if this is done, the state will build one, which will be available not only for future Boston teachers, but for those of Cambridge, Newton, and surrounding places, who now have to travel to Framingham, Lowell or Salem. The subject is arousing a good deal of controversy in Boston, but I judge the sympathy of Mr. Aldrich and the members of the board of education generally will be with the proposition to establish the state school. The committee on rules gave a hearing on the matter of admitting the petition of the school board, yesterday, at which there was a great difference of opinion, the result being that the probability of securing the admission of the petition was rendered very doubtful indeed.

Senator Dallinger revived the Malden bridge bill in the senate yesterday, through the substitution of the bill introduced by the late Senator Hayes early in the session for an adverse report. This bill provides that the bridge shall be built by Boston and Everett, and the expense shall be divided between Boston, Middlesex County, and the Boston Elevated Railway Company. Doubtless the bill if enacted, will be so changed as to bring the expense upon those communities in Middlesex which are specially benefitted.

The mooted question of wide tires has gone its usual way this year. After being substituted for an adverse report in the senate, it was refused engrossment in the house by the decisive vote of 27 to 104. There seems to be merit in the idea that if we are to have good roads in Massachusetts they shall not be continually cut up by narrow tires on heavy wagons; but a great many considerations enter into the matter, chief of which, in Boston, is the feeling that it will be a hard thing for the teamsters to have to change their tires.

The work of gilding the Bulfinch dome has been resumed. The state house construction commissioners will open the bids already filed for reconstructing the state house fountains, and at the same time will open bids for the illumination of the dome.

Tomorrow the house will take up the bill making the general appropriation for the Metropolitan Park Commissioners $1,000,000 instead of $500,000. This will give Mr. Pickard of Newton a chance on a favorite topic of his.

Notwithstanding the adverse reports by both Mr. Pickard's and Mr. Hayward's committees, the house has substituted bills giving consequential damages to citizens of Berlin, Clinton, and elsewhere, owing to losses from the metropolitan water system. This action will prolong the session; I do not imagine that it means the final enactment of legislation.

A bill has finally been engrossed, increasing the salary of the assistant register of probate for Middlesex county.

Newton should be congratulated on the fact that the "mill tax" school bill has been referred to the next General Court.

MANN.

D. R.

The Memorial Day exercises of the Sarah Hull Chapter were of a very impressive character. A goodly company assembled in the Centre street burying ground, before the graves of Gen. and Mrs. Hull, three lineal descendants, Mr. Charles Read, Mrs. Sarah Fuller Read and Mrs. Annie Fields Vila being of the number. The G. A. R., friends, and relatives had left their loving remembrance and the Sarah Hull Chapter added its tribute.

The regent, Mrs. Alexander M. Ferris, spoke with deep feeling. She said before another Memorial Day, hundreds of fresh graves might testify again to the devotion of our soldiers. Now is the time for the women to show their patriotism by following the noble example of such women as Sarah Hull. She introduced Mr. Samuel Curtis Smith, who made a stirring, patriotic address.

Dr. Calkins offered prager, and the company united in singing "America."

At an executive committee meeting, it was voted that every member of the chapter be assessed, to secure a fund for articles needed by our soldiers in the present war. Arrangements are also to be made to raise money for the Massachusetts Hospital Ship.

Pickard-Gould.

Mr. Edward L. Pickard, Jr., of Auburndale, was married at the Evangelical church in Westboro, Wednesday afternoon, to Miss Gertrude, daughter of Mrs. William R. Gould of Westboro. The wedding was a very brilliant affair, as both the bride and groom are very popular in society and some 1200 invitations were issued, many friends being present from Newton, Boston, New York, and other cities. The church was beautifully decorated in green and white, palms and lilies being used. A quartet, assisted by the organ, furnished music, the Episcopal choral marriage service being used.

The ushers were George Pickard of Auburndale, Albert W. Little of Auburndale, Samuel Walker of Northboro, J. Harry Fayerweather of Westboro, Arthur Pierce of Amherst, and Frank Fayerweather of Westboro. They were followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Bertha Aldrich, Miss Ethelind Corey, Miss Edith Wood, Miss Nelli Brittain, Miss Blanche Davis, and Miss Bertha Thayer, all of Westboro. Then came the matron of honor, Mrs. Albert Little of Auburndale, cousin of the bride, and the bride, leaning on the arm of her grandfather, Mr. John A. Fayerweather.

At the chancel the party was met by the groom and his best man, Mr. Charles Pickard of Auburndale. The bridesmaids, who carried Easter lilies, formed an arch of lilies, under which the bride passed.

The gown of the bride was white satin trimmed with chiffon, and the bridal veil was caught up with orange blossoms. She wore a diamond crescent, a present from the groom, and carried lilies of the valley. The matron of honor was dressed in her own wedding gown of heavy corded silk. The bridesmaids were gowned in white muslin and wore large picture hats trimmed with lilies of the valley. The gifts from the bride to the bridesmaids were diamond heart lockets.

After the ceremony a reception was held in the vestry of the church. Mr. and Mrs. Pickard were assisted in receiving by the bridesmaids, as well as Mrs. Wm. R. Gould, Mr. John A. Fayerweather, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Pickard, Sr., Mr. Fayerweather, grandfather of the bride, and who gave her away, is over 90 years of age. The church parlors were beautifully decorated by the young people of the society, and flowers were in profusion.

A large number of handsome and costly presents were received by the bridal couple. They left for a short wedding tour, after which they will reside in East Northfield, where Mr. Pickard is in business.

Prohibition Caucus.

The Prohibitionists of Newton held a caucus at the City Hall, May 26th, for the election of delegates to their state convention to be held at Y. M. C. A. hall, Worcester, June 9th.

The following were elected delegates:

H. A. Inman, Wm. H. Cobb, E. D. Conant, Wm. M. Lisle, Geo. S. Houghton, F. F. Davidson, E. O. Burdon, C. H. Woodworth, E. C. Lewis, Chas. S. Morris, W. H. Partridge, J. Luther Roll, Capt. J. H. Howes, E. E. Towne, Luther Paul, Prof. C. C. Bragdon, Geo. W. Blodgett, Mrs. G. S. Houghton, Mrs. E. E. Burdon, Mrs. Richard Rowe, Mrs. S. N. Waters, Mrs. E. N. L. Walton.

DEAD HEROES HONORED.

NEWTON CITIZENS DECORATE GRAVES OF DEPARTED CIVIL WAR VETERANS—FITTING TRIBUTE PAID TO THEIR MEMORY BY HUNDREDS OF RESIDENTS ON MEMORIAL DAY.

Their minds inspired by the spirit of the times, their hearts moved by love of the departed heroes, Newton citizens were out in unusual numbers to honor the memory of the dead veterans of the Civil War, last Monday.

In all previous observances of Memorial Day in Newton, it is doubtful if there was ever such a demonstration of patriotic feeling and sentiment as that shown by the hundreds who watched the afternoon procession, and gathered about the graves in the Newton cemetery.

The display of red, white and blue decorations on public buildings and private residences was remarkably brilliant. Flags were flying from every staff in the city, while gay festoons of bunting were tastefully draped on many houses.

The weather was perfect. Although the clouds gathered threateningly, there was no rain, and before half the afternoon had passed the sun was brightly shining.

Along the line of march were seen many, who carrying their country's colors, applauded loudly, and waved their flags as the procession passed.

Such crowds as lined the streets in the different villages could only have been drawn out on such a day as this. There was no disturbing element, no noise or disorder, simply the people of Newton and their families, who had come to witness the observance of that day which always marks an event of more than common interest in the city's history.

It was a fitting tribute that Newton, through the members of Charles Ward post 62, G. A. R., paid to these heroes whose lives were lost in the war of '61. The order of exercises, while not elaborate, were especially impressive, and gave to the observers a clear understanding of Newton's deep regard for those who had sacrificed their lives for their country.

DECORATION OF GRAVES.

As has been customary for several years the ceremony of decorating the graves of deceased soldiers about the city took place in the morning. Details made up of members of Charles Ward Post visited Newton cemetery on Walnut street, Mount Auburn cemetery, Cambridge, and the smaller burial lots at Evergreen cemetery, Newton Highlands, West Newton cemetery, St. Mary's cemetery, Lower Falls, and the old Centre street burying ground.

At noon all members of the post gathered in Temple hall, Newtonville, and together with invited guests, associate members, and a delegation from Tent 2, Daughters of Veterans, enjoyed a banquet. At its conclusion formed in Newtonville square. At 2.30 o'clock the line having been drawn up, the command "forward march" was given, and the procession moved in the following order:

Mounted police, Chief Tarbox commanding.
Chief Marshal, Frank L. Nagle, Esq.
Adjutant General, Col. I. F. Kingsbury.
Chief of Staff, Maj. S. A. Ranlett.
Aids.
Carter's Band, T. M. Carter, Leader.
Claflin Guards, Co. C, 5th Reg't, M. V. M., Capt. E. R. Springer.
Charles Ward Post, 62, G. A. R., Commander Henry D. Degen.
Associate Members Charles Ward Post and Citizens.
Boys' Brigade.
A. E. Cunningham Tent, No. 2, Daughters of Veterans, Miss Florence H. Kieser, President.
High School Battalion.
City Government.

The route of the procession was through Walnut and Lowell streets to Crafts, thence through Central avenue to Washington, and Walnut street to Newton cemetery, where memorial exercises were held at the Soldiers' Monument, after which the march was resumed through Walnut, Beacon and Centre streets to Commonwealth avenue, thence through Grafton street to the playground, where a dress parade took place, and the parade was dismissed.

SCHOOL AND SUNDAY SERVICES.

Last Friday morning and afternoon, several members of the post spoke before the school children in the different buildings of each village. On Sunday the post attended divine worship at the Auburndale Methodist church, where Rev. W. T. Worth, the pastor, delivered a patriotic sermon.

Our Record Not Blameless.

[From the Boston Watchman.]

No man can tell wheather or not our possession of the Philippine islands would advance their population as a whole in the scale of civilization. We have thus far not shown any particular skill in dealing with alien races. Who can forget the long and terrible chapter of our dealings with the North American Indians? The worst about Helen Hunt's "A Century of Dishonor" was that it was true. It was an indictment that makes every American citizen who knows what justice and mercy and freedom mean, blush for his country. Our complaint against Spain is that she has conducted her colonial governments on principles that resemble those we have applied to the Indians. If we propose to carry those principles over to the Philippines, it would be so hard to strike a balance of advantage for the inhabitants that the prospect of our rule would be a doubtful blessing. Our success in dealing with our own negro population has not been so conspicuous as to give us much ground for encouragement, and yet 35 years have passed since emancipation. And when even in the very centers of our civilization a Tammany hall, and a Quay machine, whose iniquities Mr. Wanamaker is relentlessly exposing, are our examples of good government, there is little reason for encouraging the eagle to strike too high a note.

Y. M. C. A.

The Junior department Sunday meetings have been discontinued for the summer.

A Boy's Cycle Club has been organized in connection with the junior department.

Two hundred and fifty persons attended the patriotic meeting last Sunday afternoon. A collection was taken to aid in carrying on Y. M. C. A. work among the military camps.

Rev. N. T. Whitaker, D. D., of Chelsea, a pulpit orator of well known ability and reputation, will deliver his celebrated patriotic address on "America, her Mission and Destiny," at the 4 o'clock meeting Sunday afternoon. Men and women invited.

The Association Cycle League will meet at the Watertown Y. M. C. A. at 8 o'clock, next Monday evening. The Newton Y. M. C. A. divisions will leave Nonantum square at 7 o'clock and enjoy a short run, via:—Norumbega tower and Waltham to Watertown.

The first meeting of the new board of directors will meet Wednesday evening, June 8th, for the election of president and vice president.

NEWTON'S FIRST DEFEAT.

YALE WINS BY A VERY NARROW MARGIN.

Yale defeated the Newton Club A. A. last Saturday, 9 to 8, pulling out in the 8th inning what looked like a sure thing for Newton.

Yale was in fine condition, and Dowd's pitching did not seem much of a puzzle to the Elis, whose good hitting drove in the needed tallies. Following is the score:

NEWTON DEFEATS WILLIAMS.

Newton A. A. defeated Williams in a close and interesting game at Williamstown Monday afternoon. Jansen pitched a fine game and the Williams team hit surprisingly well. Goodrich, first baseman on last year's Williams team, knocked out a single in the ninth, when two were out and brought in the winning run. The score:

Some Notable Paintings.

In the lobby of the Boston Theatre the American Art Syndicate is exhibiting some paintings of rare interest and merit. Among them are Koroskofsky's "Judith," Aime Morot's "Temptation of St. Anthony," de Marini's "Francesca da Rimini" and Ballavoin's "Nana at the Bath."

"Judith," a semi-historical painting finds its motive in the story of how Judith went by night into the tent of Holofernes and slew him as he slept. The picture shows Judith, sword in hand, standing over the dead body while an old follower slips the bloody head into a bag.

De Marini's picture is illustrative of the sentence passed upon Paolo and the faithless Francesca that they float eternally through space clasped in each other's arms. The strength of the picture and the originality of the artist's conception are generally admitted. Morot's conception of the temptation has been exhibited in Boston but not within the last five years. "Nana at the Bath" is a pleasing study of the perfect female form in its virgin loveliness. Twelve smaller but noted canvasses are also shown free of charge.

The exhibition is here for a limited period. It is said that $258,000 is invested in the four large paintings.

The Vote on Sloyd.

To the Editor of the Graphic:—

By what looks on the outside like a piece of "politics," a close vote was passed by the school board refusing to provide for the teaching of sloyd the coming year in our city schools. If these gentlemen wish to put the Newton schools in the rear of the educational column, they have taken one of the most effective means to carry out such a purpose. But that is not their object. They doubtless wish well to the schools, and I am acquainted with all their arguments against manual training in the public schools. In the present case, they are simply asked to talk with the parents of the children who have enjoyed the benefits of this course at the Hyde school, to go to the school itself and observe, to go to Brookline and see for themselves the value of manual training.

To scout the highest educational experience, as this vote does, seems past belief in the city of Newton.

Newton District Nursing Association.

The following letter was sent by the Newton District Nursing Association to Mr. Charles J. Buffum, who acted as musical director of the Masonic Minstrel entertainment given at Bray's hall, on May 19, in aid of the association:

Newton, May 30, 1898.

Mr. Charles J. Buffum,
Musical Director.

Dear Sir:—The Newton District Nursing Association desires to tender through you its sincere thanks to those members of the Masonic Minstrel Company, who took part in the entertainment of May nineteenth at Bray's Hall, in aid of our Association; the services rendered by you and your associates resulted in substantial assistance to our society, and will do much to promote a charity, the influence of which is already being appreciated among the needy sick of our city.

"I DO MY OWN WORK."

So Says Mrs. Mary Rochiette of Linden, New Jersey, in this Letter to Mrs. Pinkham.

"I was bothered with a flow which would be quite annoying at times, and at others would almost stop.

"I used prescriptions given me by my physician, but the same state of affairs continued.

"After a time I was taken with a flooding, that I was obliged to keep my bed. Finally, in despair, I gave up my doctor, and began taking your medicine, and have certainly been greatly benefited by its use.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has indeed been a friend to me.

"I am now able to do my own work, thanks to your wonderful medicine. I was as near death I believe as I could be, so weak that my pulse scarcely beat and my heart had almost given out. I could not have stood it one week more, I am sure. I never thought I would be so grateful to any medicine.

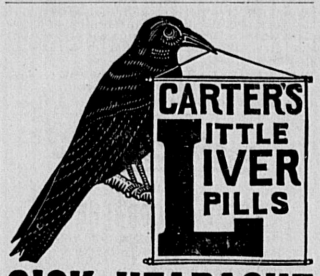

"I shall use my influence with any one suffering as I did, to have them use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Every woman that is puzzled about her condition should secure the sympathetic advice of a woman who understands. Write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and tell her your ills.

TOLD BY THE CIRCUS MAN.

How They Made Use of the Giraffe as a Walking Flagstaff.

"Sometimes," said the old circus man, "we used to h'ist a flag on the big giraffe and make a walking flagstaff of him. We never did this unless there was a pretty fair breeze blowing and in the right direction and never except in street parades. Standing, as he did, 18 feet high, he made a pretty altitudinous kind of a flagstaff, and it used to please the people mightily to see the flag flying from him. And you can set it down with entire safety that we always made the most we could of it when we did h'ist the flag.

"If the morning was right, we used to put a headstall on him with a small block attached, and flag halyards rove through that and carried down and made fast around one of his fore legs. It was something like the arrangement we had for h'isting his medicine up to him that time when he had a stiff neck—in fact, I think it was that that suggested the idea of h'isting the flag on him.

"We used to get the halyards all ready before we lined up in the street, but we never bent on the flag till just before we were ready to start. The big giraffe used to march at the head of the procession. The band wagon was up pretty near the head, with just a few horsemen ahead of it, between it and the giraffe. A man would walk up to the giraffe and cast the halyards loose and bend on the flag, and you can bet it was always a bright and handsome one. There used to be about a million people standing looking on at this, and when everything was all ready the old man would give the signal.

"The signal to h'ist was also the signal for the band to play. The leader of the band was always standing up in the band wagon ready. The minute the signal came, and the man started the flag, down came the leader's baton and the bass drummer's drumstick with it and every horn came in on time. As the flag soared up the giraffe's neck to the head you could hear the calliope coming in, down the line. The flag would always float out gayly, and that was inspiriting, and then away we'd go, with the flag a-flying, the band a-playing and the calliope a-screeching, and all the people on the sidewalk hollering like mad!

"Dear me! I'd like to see the old times back again!"—New York Sun.

BESSIE'S WAY OUT.

A Four-year-old's Solution of a Problem Presented by a Careful Mother.

Bob and Bessie are brother and sister. Bob is 3 and Bessie is 4 years old. They have played together all their short lives, and a perfect good comradeship had been established between them.

Every night before going to sleep Bob rushes into his sister's room for a pillow fight or some other high old time. But of late their mother has thought that, as they are now beyond their babyhood, it were wise to teach Bessie some little reserve. Accordingly the other day she called the small daughter to her and said:

"Now, Bessie, you are growing up to be a big girl, so you must not let your brother see you in your nightgown any more."

Bessie looked wise and dutifully promised.

That night Bob was heard vigorously pounding at Bessie's door; to his surprise and indignation he had found it locked, and he made so much noise that it brought his father and mother up to him. "Let me in, Bess," he shouted.

"I can't let you in, Bobbie," Bessie was heard explaining, "mamma says that I musn't let you see me in my nightgown, but wait a minute."

Her mother, hearing this conversation, felt pleased that her lesson had been heeded. Then the door opened. Bessie stood proudly looking at her father and mother and at Bob. She was receiving in due state. She was not in her nightgown. She had settled that difficulty by taking it off.—New York World.

An Old Blue Book.

"The 'Blue Book,' as the official register of government employees is known," says an old timer, "becomes quite an interesting book on comparison with the volume of less than 100 pages issued half a century ago. Why, the mere sight of the official register for, say, 1846, and the two large volumes of late years will make an object lesson to young and old, to say nothing of what may be learned by inspection. Where a few hundred officials were sufficient then for the transaction of the business of the government, many thousands now are required. The total force of some of the present bureaus exceeds by hundreds the grand total of that period, and some of the departments could then muster less than half a hundred. The state department at that period included the home bureau of 16 employees and the patent office of 21, and with these had but 45 on the rolls. The postoffice department had 55 employees, the navy department, including 21 at the observatory, 85; the war department, including the pension office of 12 and Indian office of 13, had 113, and the treasury, including 77 in the general land office, 387. The 'home' (afterward named the interior) department had not then been organized, and the patent office and home bureau under the state department, the general land office under the treasury, and pension office under the war department a few years after formed the nucleus of the interior department."—Washington Star.

A Medico's Mistake.

A good story comes from Erlanger, Bavaria. Recently a wine merchant of Nurnburg, who had reached an advanced age, was operated upon by a specialist at Erlanger. So successful did the operation prove that the patient was able to be present at an evening party given on the night following the operation.

Imagine, therefore, his surprise on receiving early in this month a letter addressed "to the heirs of the merchant M. M." On opening the letter he found it contained the professor's account for the operation. The professor, while satisfied that the operation itself had been a success, did not believe that the old gentlman would survive.—Pearson's Weekly.

Foreign Clerks In London.

Of the leading business houses in the city, according to evidence collected by the London chamber of commerce, 35 per cent employ foreign clerks, who are almost always Germans. The reason given is that 99 per cent of English clerks have no serviceable acquaintance with French and German.

It is told of Lord Norbury that when passing sentence of death on a man convicted of stealing a watch, he said to the culprit, "My good fellow, you made a grasp at time, but you caught eternity."

It is said that in the German army the soldiers commit suicide at the rate of 65 per annum in each 100,000 men.

ALLEGED EMBEZZLER.

STORY OF FRED T. MOORE'S DEFALCATIONS—SAID TO HAVE GONE WITH $50,000—WAS A RESIDENT OF NEWTON CENTRE

The story of the alleged embezzlement of $50,000 by Mr. Fred T. Moore, a resident of Newton Centre, from the National Bank of Commerce of Boston, was first made known last Saturday morning, and has since been the cause of considerable talk throughout the city.

Mr. Moore is a native of Waltham where he was born about 31 years ago. His father, John M. Moore, his mother and sister are residents of that city at the present time.

After finishing his education, he entered the office of National Bank Examiner Magruder, and nine years ago went to work in the Bank of Commerce, being promoted until he became assistant teller. He was quick, active, energetic, polite, diplomatic, and his friends thought he had a future in his vocation. He was fond of yachting, which is an expensive pastime; he knew a great deal about Sheepshead Bay and Saratoga, and lived in pretty good style for a man dependent on the salary of a bank clerk. How long he might have continued the practice which had become habit is a question which can never be answered. The bank officials did not suspect him. It needed a hint from the police to bring about the investigation which resulted in the application for the warrant granted Friday night. When he was approached by his superiors in the bank and charged with speculating in bucket shops, he admitted that the charge was true. He was asked it his accounts were straight, and stated that they were. He was then informed that it would be necessary to make an investigation of his books, and that he would be suspended in the interim.

The suggestion was made by the police that it would be wise to "shadow" Moore if he were suspended and given an inkling of the charge against him, but his superiors were so confident of his innocence of any guilt, and so loath to adopt such a system of surveillance, that they rejected the proposition. Moore took advantage of this lofty sentiment to put a long space of land and water between himself and Boston.

He intrenched his speculations behind his sundry bank account, so it is said. Moore told his wife that he had been suspended for dickering in stocks, but said that he was innocent, and suggested that while the investigation which was to prove him innocent was going on they should go over to New York and see a friend on whom he wanted to call. They went to New York a week ago Friday, and he left her on Broadway. Just how much money Moore took with him no one knows It is proven that he speculated in the bucket shops, but it is not known that he was a loser. On the contrary, he is said to have been ahead of the game.

Moore is 5 feet 7 1-2 inches tall, weighs 150 pounds, has dark brown hair, a short black mustache, a round face, and round, full eyes. He wore a light overcoat, a black derby hat, and a light gray suit. Circulars containing a full description and a picture will be issued and sent broadcast.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore are not very well known in Newton Centre. They came to the village about two years ago and took up their residence on Oxford road. They had previously lived in Waltham. About two months ago they moved into a new house which was built for them near the corner of Homer and Pleasant streets. The house is one of the best in this neighborhood and is furnished in expensive style.

Although well liked by those who had made their acquaintance, Mr. and Mrs. Moore mingled little in Newton Centre society. Most of their amusements have been found in Boston, and there are few people in Newton Centre who claim more than a calling acquaintance with them.

Their departure from Newton Centre was evidently somewhat hurried. The house was left in disorder, and an accumulation of milk cans and other family supplies on the steps show that there was no time to notify tradesmen of their departure.

Those who have had business dealings with Mr. Moore in Newton Centre speak of him in the highest terms.

NEWTON UPPER FALLS.

—There will be a baseball game on Dudley's field tomorrow afternoon.

—Beginning this week the eastern mail, which formerly left the postoffice at 12.15 o'clock p. m., will leave at 12.45 p. m.

—Many from this place went up to Camp Dewey, South Framingham, last Sunday to visit their friends of the 9th regiment.

—Children's day, Sunday, June 12, will be observed with an elaborate musical program at the Methodist Episcopal church.

—The regular meeting of Echo bridge council, Royal Arcanum, was held Wednesday evening in the lodge hall on High street.

—Mr. Frank Proctor rode to Providence on his wheel Memorial Day. Returning he covered the entire distance in 12 hours and 15 minutes.

—A sermon appropriate to Memorial Day was delivered by Rev. F. J. McConnell at the Methodist Episcopal church last Sunday morning.

—Delegates from Echo bridge council, Royal Arcanum, attended the meeting of the Boston Four council, in that city Thursday evening of last week.

—Julius Peterson, a local wheelman of considerable ability, raced at Wayside Park, South Framingham, last Monday, capturing several minor prizes.

—Several drinking fountains have been placed in position at the Hemlock Gorge Reservation this week. This new feature will be greatly appreciated by the many visitors to this popular park.

—The funeral of Mrs. N. P. Gould was held Friday afternoon from her residence on Rockland place. Rev. Nathaniel Fellows of Lynn officiated. The interment was in the Newton cemetery.

—The newly organized Newton Upper Falls golf club played an 18-hole handicap match on the Chestnut street links Memorial Day. A business meeting of club members was held Tuesday evening.

—Alfred Shuker, the 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Shuker of Eliot street died last Saturday at the home of his parents, after a six weeks illness of brain fever. The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon.

—The Newton & Boston street railway company is placing telephone boxes on the poles at the different turnouts along the line. These will be of great value when a tie-up occurs, as it will give the conductors means of communicating with each other, and locating the break.

—A public flagraising in which all the citizens of the village will participate, is being talked of among prominent residents. It is quite probable that a large sum for the purchase of a flag could be secured, and the exercises made to equal similar demonstrations in the other villages.

—A lively baseball game was played on Dudley's field Monday afternoon between the Newton Upper Falls team and the Marions of Cambridge. The home boys were easy winners, as the visitors were outclassed from the start. "Bob" Dresser's pitching was too much for the Cambridge youths, and all around good work on Newton's part was loudly applauded by a large crowd of admirers. The score was: Newton 19, Marions 9.

—There are letters in the postoffice for Thomas Cunningham and Thomas Kenney.

—The Ladies Benevolent society met yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Henry H. Fanning on High street.

—Mr. Charles Trask of Medford has been in town this week the guest of Mr. George A. Billings of Central avenue.

—John B. Sullivan has been appointed a special police officer for duty at Hemlock Gorge Reservation on Sundays and holidays.

—Mr. Harvey Estabrook has enlisted in the United States Marines, and been detailed for duty on board the U. S. S. Columbia.

—Ohio street residents displayed their patriotic feelings with a flag raising on that throughfare last Saturday evening, which quite eclipsed any like event in the village. There was a large gathering of Upper Falls citizens who participated in the ceremonies, and they were not the least slow in demonstrating the spirit of the times. Mr. John Meskill was master of ceremonies, and made a stirring patriotic address.

—Prof. George Bender's popularity was clearly shown Monday evening when a large number of his friends tendered him a farewell reception prior to his departure for Austria. Prof. Bender recently returned from Washington, and his arrival here furnished both as a home welcome, and farewell. He was given a substantial present, and received many good wishes for his future good luck and hapiness.

—The Newton Upper Falls Courier is the name of a famliy paper published by Mr. B. Billings the druggist, and which he is distributing free to his customers. It contains twenty columns of very interesting reading. Mr. Billings has added to his stock of confections by the purchase of an excellent line of Columbia bonbons. These candies are the best on the market, and most popular among lovers of up-to-date confectionery.

By Absorption.

Catarrhal sufferers should remember that Ely's Cream Balm is the only catarrh remedy which is quickly and thoroughly absorbed by the diseased membrane. It does not dry up the secretions, but changes them to a limpid and odorless condition, and finally to a natural and healthy character.

The Balm can be found at any drug store, or by sending 50 cents to Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., New York, it will be mailed.

Full directions with each package.

Cream Balm opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays inflammation, thereby stopping pain in the head, heals and protects the membrane and restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is applied directly into the nostrils.

Water on the Bridges.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC:—

Can it be possible that the Boston & Albany, which usually does things so well, will accept the bridges as they now stand? The footways, which were done by the local firm of Simpson Bros., are fine, being well drained, but the carriage way is anything but fine. After a rain the water stands in great pools, until it evaporates. There are apertures through which the water is supposed to escape, but as the roadway is not properly graded, they are useless. The result is that a bicycler meeting a carriage on the bridge, has to go through these miniature lakes. I have seen several riders get their clothing much damaged, especially one lady, and saw one rider get a severe fall, owing to this standing water. Will not some one be responsible for injury thus received, and should not the city act in the premises if the railway officials do not? Y.

The woman who is weak, nervous, tired and exhausted; who has a poor and variable appetite and no strength or nerve; who suffers from pains and aches, dragging down and burning sensations; and who recognizes herself, that she has become irritable, cross, blue and despondent, is in almost every case suffering from weakness and disease of the delicate and important organs that bear the burdens of maternity.

Thousands of women suffer in this way and do not recognize the cause, or if they do understand their condition, neglect it rather than submit to the obnoxious examinations and local treatment insisted upon by the average physician. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a wonderful medicine for women who suffer in this way. It does away with the necessity for these trying ordeals, and may be used in the privacy of the home. It acts directly on the delicate organs concerned, and makes them strong, vigorous and healthy. It banishes the discomforts of the expectant period and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It transforms weak, nervous, petulant invalids into happy wives and mothers. Thousands of women have testified, over their own signatures, to this fact. The "Favorite Prescription" may be procured from any good medicine dealer. Any woman who will write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y., may have the advice of an eminent and skillful specialist without charge.

Mrs. Cora M. McLaurin, of Rockport, Copiah Co., Miss., writes: "I had displacement and inflammation of the uterus. I was under the treatment of our family physician for a long time, but received no benefit. I had falling of internal organs with ulceration and enlargement. I commenced using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, 'Golden Medical Discovery,' 'Pleasant Pellets' and 'Extract of Smart-Weed.' From the first day I began to improve, and in a short time I was able to do all my housework. If it had not been for your medicines I would have been dead long ago."

Stomach and liver troubles with sluggish action of the bowels are cured by Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

THE IMPERIAL POLICY.

The sober second thought is coming to the people of the country, and the intoxicating prospect of turning the American Republic into a world-wide empire is losing favor the more it is studied. The imperial party, as it is called, is made up mainly of the thoughtless, the selfish, the speculative and the ambitious. They see a chance for personal aggrandizement in the events that may follow the war with Spain, and they haste to take advantage of it. They desire to turn the war in behalf of the oppressed people of Cuba into a war of conquest. Their leaders are Senator Lodge and Senator Elkins, two about as untrustworthy leaders as could be found, and the party is a small one, and does not include men like Senator Hoar, or others who are capable of taking a statesmanlike view of the results of such a policy.

To enter into a contest with European powers for the grabbing of land in all parts of the globe might mean great wealth for the few, but it would mean oppressive taxation for the many. Men with a political pull would be appointed as governers, just as such men have been appointed Indian agents, and consuls, and the scandal would be the greater, as the scene of extortion would be in a remote territory.

The Imperial policy would call for an immense navy, a great standing army, the building of the Nicaragua canal and a great cable system, all at government expense. This would take many millions a year, all to be raised by taxation. Add these hundreds to the hundreds of millians we are now paying in pensions, and the present war will swell the pension list to a large extent for fifty years to come, and any one can see how oppressive taxation must be. All this the mass of the people would have to pay, in order to provide officer's for the favored few, and a chance for wealthy syndicates to grow more wealthy by seizing upon the undeveloped resources of the conquered territory. Unscrupulous adventurers would drive out the natives who now own the country, as they have done with our native Indians, and as has been done in Hawaii, and it is for this that the country is asked to adopt the imperial policy.

The more the people think over it, the more unpopular such a policy will become. Students of history know that a republic has never been successful with a colonial policy, from the days of Rome down to the present time, and this country would not be an exception to the rule. Look at the men who are appointed as consuls, see the removals on every change of administration, and then reflect upon the men who would be sent to govern our foreign possessions, men whose only qualifications would be their usefulness to some political boss. That is the way Spain has governed her colonies, the Weylers have made immense fortunes, but under the present system of our political appointments, the hope would be very small that our government of these colonies would be any improvement.

THE new L. A. W. road book is out, with all the routes brought up to-date, new maps, and the latest information about the condition of the roads. The revision has cost several thousand dollars, and every wheelman who takes even an occasional tour should have the book, but the only way to get it is to join the L. A. W. The book alone is worth the cost for the first year, two dollars, and there are many other advantages, such as reduced rates at hotels and repair shops, and other places.

MAY is said to have been as cold and wet a month as was ever seen in this region. The temperature has been below the average for 51 years, and the rain fall was nearly an inch greater than the average for the same time. June does not yet offer much hope of better weather.

GOV. WOLCOTT seems to have lacked the courage to veto the Omaha legislative junket bill. The Boston Pilot explains that the difference between the junketers and the famous party in the Arabian Nights' tale, is that the bill provides for forty two men.

IT is rumored that the directors of Boston Banks and other corporations have advised their employes residing at Newton Centre to remove to some other place where the temptations are not so irresistible.

Sunday Concert.

The Newton and Boston Street Railway is to give a grand concert at Echo Bridge Park, Upper Falls, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The First Regiment band will furnish the music, and the park has been much improved this year and is a very beautiful spot. No admission fee will be charged.

Newton Education Association.

The Newton Education Association closed the season with an interesting meeting last evening in the parlors of the Central Congregational church. The president, Rev. F. B. Hornbrooke, presided. The record of the last meeting was read by the secretary. The treasurer's report, submitted by Mr. George A. Walton, showed a balance in the treasury. The nominating committee appointed at the last meeting to prepare a ballot reported as follows: Pres., H. E. Bothfeld; Vice Pres., Rev. William E. Huntington; Treas., George A. Walton; Sec., F. H. Tucker; Ex-Com., Rev. B. F. McDaniel, Mitchell Wing, J. P. Tolman, Rev. S. W. Dike, Prof. Rush Rhees, Mrs. G. G. Phipps, Mrs. C. W. Richardson, Mrs. F. N. Peloubet and Mrs. G. W. Blodgett.

Following the election of officers Prof. Cole of the New England Conservatory of Music was introduced and gave an enthusiastic talk on "The Possibilities of Music in the Public Schools."

Prof. Cole said that music was the most neglected study in the public schools of the country. It is not so many years ago that both music and drawing were abolished for the sake of economy, but in the state of Massachusetts this is happily a thing of the past. At the same time it is a much neglected study. It is neglected by the school board, by the superintendent, by the school music supervisor and by the regular teachers.

We have not reached that point of culture that considers the ability to sing a necessity. In selecting a school music supervisor good musicianship is not the only requisite. Ability and love for teaching are necessary. A man who teaches because he loves it will by his enthusiasm overcome the neglect of board, superintendent and teacher. The possibilities of music in our public schools is just as great as the desire.

An outline of the practical work done in some schools was given by Prof. Cole: In the first grade the foundation for a musical vocabulary was laid, simple songs on one and two notes were taught and then the scale; in the second year the significance of signs and keys is shown and harder songs; 3d year two part singing; 4th year rhythm and time; 5th, continuation in all branches of ordinary choir singing; 6th year three part singing; 7th, the more difficult; 8th and 9th, boys' voices change and four part music may be taken up, also the difference between the major and minor keys is taught. In the High school much good music may be sung by the pupils, as has been shown in several county High schools. An orchestra may be formed with much profit and pleasure. Music in the public schools is not to make musicians of the few but to teach all to sing intelligently.

A spirited discussion followed Prof. Cole's remarks. Among those who participated were Rev. F. B. Hornbrooke, Mr. George A. Walton, Mr. George I. Aldrich, Rev. B. F. McDaniel, Rev. H. J. Patrick and others.

A pleasing musical program was presented under the direction of Mrs. Phillip W. Carter, as follows: duet, Mrs. Scully and Mrs. Grew; songs, Mrs. Buffum and Miss Bowersack; trio, Mrs. Scully, Mrs. Grew and Mrs. Lockett.

Light refreshments were served and a pleasant social hour passed at the close of the musical program.

Camp Alger.

Falls Church, Virginia.
May 31, 1898.

After spreading carelessly over ten miles of country "the world forgetting and by the world forgot" for more than a century, Falls Church, Virginia, has awakened to find itself a town of note, having had thrust upon it the honor of furnishing the camping ground for the National Guard.

The village though of prerevolutionary origin is not a typically southern town. The influx of northern office-holders, who have sought their homes here, has given it a more up-to-date appearance than is usually characteristic of a Virginia town.

Passing through the village it is easy to distinguish the birth places of house holders, as standing side by side, in marked contrast to the modern houses freshly painted, and with well-kept lawns, are those weather stained, and rambling old mansions.

Camp Alger itself, is becoming very popular with the young people, who are welcoming the excitement and variety it brings in place of the usual Sunday quiet. Not so with older people for they realize too well what the presence of those blue coats meant thirty-five years ago, and can scarcely forget those days.

The colored people welcome the Yankees, however, and the boys apparently are fully appreciative of their colored friends hospitality. White residents feel somewhat worried about the fate of their chickens and "truck patches" and comfort each other with thrilling stories of the probable misbehavior of the troops.

To reach Camp Alger, which is situated about a mile from the centre of the village you must take the Fairfax Co't house road, which passes the Old Falls church. This building, from which the village takes its name, was built in 1767, and is constructed of English brick. Washington, it is said, took a great interest in the little parish, and served on the board of vestrymen for several years. He frequently attended services there, and until blown down in a recent storm, a large tree standing in front of the edifice, was said to have been that used by the Father of His Country, as a hitching post.

During the Civil War both sides used the church building as a hospttal. At the close of the war the Federal Government repaired the old structure.

Camp Alger is very picturesquely situated in a field surrounded by dense woods. These trees form a very pretty background to the picture, yet being useful as well, they can be used for fire wood. On a large knoll commanding a splendid view of the entire camp is situated the old Washburn Manor, used as headquarters for the superior officers.

The only fault with the camp is the meagre water supply which obliges the soldier to visit the village for drinking water. The earlier arrivals from Penn., Ohio and Illinois have had very little to eat as well, the only food supplied by the U. S. government being a small quantity of hard tack and fat bacon.

They have had to ask for food from the residents, who have been very kind to them when the number has not been too great to supply. Uniforms too are scarce. Many of the men are poorly provided with uniforms, some wearing civilian's clothes and a U. S. hat, while with others army gaiters serve to distinguish them from citizens. To such an extent does this condition of things exist that the Pennsylvania troops have been likened to Coxey's army.

It is very gratifying to see the Massachusetts boys looking so well. In fact they make the best appearance of any of the troops in camp. The young men say "We are all right, Massachusetts is looking after us."

BERTHA MARION BENTLEY.

61,500 Electric Car Passengers.

Over sixty thousand fares were "rung in" on the different trolley lines throughout the city on Memorial Day. Such a figure is without a precedent, and is a conclusive fact of a popularity of Newton's electric car service especially that of the Commonwealth avenue line. The figures of the numbers of riders are given as follows: the Newton street railway carried about 12,000 passengers; the Bemis & Nonantum about 4000; the Wellesley & Boston about 5500; the Newton & Boston line, about 10,000; the Commonwealth avenue street railway 30,000.

AUBURNDALE.

—Ivers & Pond pianos, Farley, Newton.

—Mr. William Cosmay is visiting here this week.

—Hugh Halewood has returned from a vacation trip in Maine.

—Mr. C. E. Hickox has removed from Walcott to Freeman street.

—Patrolman John Quilty is enjoying his annual two weeks vacation.

—Mrs. Dodge of Owatonna street is visiting relatives in Gardner, Mass.

—Mr. F. W. Jones and family have removed from Ashland to this place.

—Miss Bartlett of Boston is the guest of Mrs. F. M. Conner of Melrose street.

—Mr. Frank Cunningham is slowly recovering from his recent severe illness.

—Riverdale Lodge, N. E. O. P., will hold its regular meeting next Monday evening.

—Engineer Wilson of the Boston & Albany has taken a house on Prairie avenue.

—Mrs. Gordon and family are expected from the West tomorrow and will open a house on Grove street.

—The engagement of Miss Bertha Isabelle Jennings of Weston and Mr. Lester D. Marsh of Boston is announced.

—There are letters in the postoffice for Miss Jennie Spaulding, Miss Mabel Stults, Rev. G. W. Mansfield and I. H. Scott.

—Miss Iva B. Johnson has returned from Maine where she has been visiting her parents. Miss Johnson is a student at Lasell.

—The clerks and carriers at the post office have displayed their patriotism by decorating the interior of the office with flags and bunting.

—The mother's meeting at the Hancock street Congregational church Wednesday afternoon was well attended by a large number of members.

—Mr. C. F. Wisner and family have this week removed from George L. Johnson's house on Walcott street to George Mann's house on Freeman street.

—At the regular meeting of Auburndale Lodge, A. O. U. W., held Wednesday evening in Good Fellows hall on Ash street, two candidates were admitted.

—Several matters of importance came up for consideration at the meeting of the executive committee of the Riverside Gun Club held Tuesday evening. The club's plans for the coming season are soon to be announced.

—On the afternoon and evening of June 9th, the Girls' Friendly Society will give a Gypsy party and cake sale in the parish house and grounds, corner of Auburn street and Commonwealth avenue, Church of the Messiah. Admittance free.

—There will be a house warming at the new Methodist parsonage, 304 Central street, corner of Fern street, Thursday evening, June 9, from 8 to 10 o'clock. All the adult members of the Methodist church and congregation are cordially invited.

—While J. G. Forbes of Freeman street was driving through Lexington street about 7 o'clock Wednesday evening, a portion of the harness broke, and caused the horse to run away. Mr. Forbes and his coachman were thrown out. The later had his leg and head injured. He was attended by a physician.

—Mr. George True of Newton Highlands, a conductor on the Commonwealth avenue street railroad, while standing on the running board of his car as it was passing through this place Memorial Day, struck against a pole, and was knocked off. He was removed to the Newton Hospital, where it was found that his collar bone had been fractured.

—Last Monday at her residence on Woodbine street occured the death of Mrs. Adelaide Dodge Torrey, wife of Mr. Geo. W. Torrey, and daughter of the late Jonah and Susan Dodge of Blue Hill, Maine. She was 55 years old, and had a large circle of friends in this place. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at her home, and attended by a large number of relatives and friends.

—The Em See held its third meeting at the house of Mrs. Turner Saturday evening. A very enjoyable program was given and the following board of directors was elected. Mrs. H. A Pemberton, Mrs. J. S. Dillingham, Mrs. H. R. Turner, Miss May Davidson, Miss Marjorie Marble, Master John Norton. Mrs. Pemberton was elected to serve as secretary during the next year.

—The procession last Monday was unusually interesting, but the ensemble was somewhat marred by our seeing the boys of the school regiments smoking cigarettes. One young man was so overcome by the long march from the Newtonville station that he was obliged to lie down on the grass and light a paper cigarette. "Can such things be and not excite our special wonder?"

—Mrs. Mary P. Braman, widow of the late Rev. Milton P. Braman, died last Saturday at her residence on Hancock street. Mrs. Braman was 93 years old and had made her home in this place for many years, removing here 28 years ago. She was a member of the Congregational church and held in high esteem by her fellow church-members. The funeral services were held Monday afternoon at the house, Rev. Mr. Southgate officiating, assisted by Rev. Mr. Cutler. Tuesday the remains were taken to Georgetown, Mass., for interment.

—The license committee of the city government will report on the petition of James Ford at the meeting of the board of aldermen next Monday evening. Ford has asked permission to erect a wooden building at the corner of the boulevard and Lexington street. This is not the first time the matter has been considered by the city government, as Mr. Ford has made the same request several times before. It is confidently stated that the license committee will report unfavorably. The recent Pettigrew fire at West Newton has also had its effect, making the board members more adverse to granting petitions of this nature.

—Mr. Charles Henry Nicholson of this village was married at the First Baptist church, Malden, Wednesday evening, to Miss Mary Ella, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Edwin Taylor. It was a large and brilliant wedding. The bride was gowned in duchesse satin, trimmed with duchesse lace, the veil was fastened with orange blossoms, and she carried bride roses. The bride was attended by a maid of honor, two bridesmaids and a flower girl. Mr. Marcus Grant of Cambridge was the groom's best man, and there were six ushers. A reception followed at the residence of the bride's mother, and Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson will be at home after Sept. 11, at 17 Clayton street, Malden.

—If this week's attendance may be looked upon as a criterion the management of Norumbega Park may be confident of a successful season, which will, without doubt, eclipse last summer's record. This handsome amusement park was opened for the first time last Monday. The number of people registered on the turnstile is estimated at 11,450. As the management had announced there were all the popular features of last year with many new ones. That the patrons thoroughly enjoyed the park and its scores of up-to-date attractions, there is little doubt. Much criticism has been heard regarding the means of exit, as the turnstiles are regarded as improper facilities. The great throng of Monday evening broke down the fence in its haste to leave the grounds at the close of the entertainment. With several thousand people gathered about the narrow exits it would certainly be a good opportunity for pickpockets. It is to be hoped the management will give this important matter immediate consideration.

—Mr. W. J. Kershaw has moved into the house 373 Lexington street.

—Mrs. Charles Cowdrey of Owatonna street is in Greenville, N. H.

—Mr. James R. Gilmore of Washburn avenue has gone to Caldwell, Lake George, N. Y., where he will reside.

—Mrs. J. B. Hicks of Johnson place sailed yesterday on the S. S. Canada from Boston for Liverpool, England.

—Mr. H. R. Turner, who has been ill for some time, is at his cottage at Point Allerton and is improving rapidly.

—A "sound-proof" telephone booth has been placed in Thorn's pharmacy and will prove of great benefit to his patrons.

—The address to the G. A. R. last Sunday by Rev. Mr. North was exceedingly fine and gave much pleasure to all who heard it. The singing by the male quartet, composed of our own boys, was very acceptable.

—At the Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. W. T. Worth, pastor. Service at 10.30. Baccalaureate sermon, Lasell Seminary, by Rev. A. B. Kendig, D. D., at the Congregational church. Sunday school at 12.15. at the Methodist church. Junior League at 3. And at 7.30 a brief sermon by the pastor, followed by a prayer service.

—An alarm was rung in from box 4 at 4.21 yesterday morning for a threatening blaze in Gray & Frost's two story wooden boathouse on Charles street, Riverside. The fire started from spontaneous combustion of oil and rags in the varnish room. By hard fighting the firemen managed to keep the flames confined to the portion of the house in which they started. The damage to building and contents is estimated at $300; insured. While hose 4 was responding to the alarm it came in collision on Washington street with a milk wagon owned by J. E. Jennings. The wagon was demolished, but the occupants escaped unhurt. The hose wagon was uninjured.

—Arrangements have again been made with Mr. Hubbard whereby members of the Newton Boat Club will be allowed the privilege of the swimming pool at the Riverside Recreation grounds without individual expense. The committee of the Newton Boat Club has arranged for a series of promenade concerts to be given on the four Saturday evenings in June, at 7.30 o'clock. Music will be furnished as follows: June 4th, Martland's band of Brockton; June 11th, Salem Cadet band; June 18 Waltham Watch Company band; June 25th, Reeves' American and of Providence. June 18th will be illumination night. Should the weather be unpleasant, the illumination will be postponed until the following Saturday.

—The musical and society event of the season, for the fine old town of Reading, was the first annual concert and reception on Monday evening of the Tourjee Club of that place. The club is named for the late Dr. Eben Tourjee, its leading spirit, and the leading spirit in the recent concert being his daughter, Mrs. Clara Tourjee Nelson of this place. Mrs. Nelson inherits her father's great love for music and wonderful power of organization, coupled with a soprano voice of singular purity, range and sympathy. The principal features of the concert, in fact, were a trio from "Faust," in which Mrs. Tourjee Nelson was supported by Mr. Charles F. Brown and Mr. Edward W. Bancroft, and Mrs. Tourjee-Nelson's solos from the opera of "Semiramide." The club was fortunate, too, in having as director, Senor Rotoli, the eminent impressario. The concert called out a great contingency of society and music-loving people from Reading and the surrounding towns and from Boston.

Semi Annual Mark Down.

Ladies' outing suits, jackets, capes and Misses' reefers have all been marked down by P. P. Adams & Co. of Waltham, who prefer to sell them at a loss rather than carry them over to another season. It will pay to take an electric ride over and see the bargains that are offered.

—It must have been indeed gratifying to the parents and friends of the members of the Junior Theatrical company, who witnessed the production of those very jolly plays "The Man That Went to Europe" and "The Man With a Demijohn" by these talented juveniles, at the residence of Mr Frank Witherell on Walnut street Monday and Tuesday evenings. That so much dramatic ability was contained in this decidedly young organization, was quite surprising, yet it did escape the full appreciation of the audience. On both evenings the upper portion of Mr. Witherell's residence was well filled by admirers of the young people, who were not the least disappointed in their work. The parts in each play were most aptly cast, each character fitting his role in good shape, and sustaining it in a pleasing manner. Those who took part were Laurence Witherell, Chester Hosmer Griswold, Harold Billings, Earl Pierce, Miss Emma Sladen, and Miss Majorie Witherell. The piano selections by Miss Emma Sladen, Miss Majorie Witherell and Master Dudley Fitch, were particularly good, and received considerable merited applause. Master Griswold made a happy hit both in the plays, and with his selections "Boy Billie" "Biddy at the Police Court," "My Wife" and "O'Grady's Goat." Each of his pieces were given in a style and manner, truly worthy of a professional, and bidding fair for him a remarkable future in this line of work. As an entertainer, Master Griswold is well known throughout the state, and without doubt his success is assured. A substantial sum was netted by the entertainment, and it will be given to the treasurer of the Newton Hospital for the support of the children's ward.

—Officer Cole, night patrolman, is enjoying a two weeks vacation.

—June 12 will be observed as children's Sunday at the Central Congregational and at the Universalist churches.

—Mr. J. J. Rothenberg and family of Central avenue left this week for the seashore where they will pass the warm season.

—Rev. Francis W. Sprague of East Boston delivered a fine sermon at the Universalist church Sunday morning. Mr. Sprague has held the pastorate of several important churches, and is also the secretary of the Massachusetts Universalist convention.

—A Sunday school festival will be held in the lecture room of the Universalist church Saturday afternoon and evening, June 11th. A pleasing program is being arranged by the young people and a pleasant time is anticipated. The proceeds will be used for the benefit of the Sunday school.

—Methodist Episcopal church—Sunday evening at 7.30, Rev. W. W. Foster, Jr., D. D., president of Rust University, Mississippi, will preach. Many will be glad of the opportunity to hear this well known and eloquent preacher. All seats free. Young people especially are cordially invited. In the morning at 10.45, Mr. Hamilton will preach as usual. All strangers are invited.

—The sixth annual meeting of the Mass. State Federation of Women's Clubs will be held in Amesbury, June 7. The morning session will be largely devoted to business, election of officers, receiving delegates, etc. An opportunity will be given between the sessions to visit the places of interest in connection with the home of the Poet Whittier. In the afternoon a paper will be read by Prof. Chas. E. Fay of Tufts College, also by Mrs. A. H. Garland, president of the All Around Dicken's Club. It is hoped that a large number of the Guild will attend the meetings. The yellow tickets may be obtained from Miss Robinson, 200 Walnut street. Train leaves Union station, Boston, (track No. 13) at 9 a. m.; returning, leaves Amesbury at 5 20 p. m., arriving in Boston at 6.53 p. m. Fare from Boston and return, $1.33. Tickets for lunch at 25 cts.

Train leaves Union Station, (track No. 13), at 9 a. m.; returning leaves Amesbury 5.20, arriving in Boston 6.53. Places of interest may be visited during the intermission.

—The executive board of the West Newton Women's Educational Club held a business meeting Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. N. L. Walton. The following delegates were elected to attend the annual meeting of the State Federation at Amesbury, Tuesday: Mrs. Emmons Paine, Mrs. M. J. Peabody, Mrs. Charles Stacy and Mrs. E. B. Haskell with alternates, if any are unable to go. Plans were discussed and arrangements made for the coming season. As several requests have been made for a class in history immediate steps will be taken to form one.

—By a vote of the directors of the West Newton Women's Educational Club a committee was appointed to make a plan for the home work of the club for the ensuing year. They propose to spend six afternoons with English authors, having readings from their works, together with critical and biographical essays by members of the club. It is hoped that the course mapped out should furnish a basis for the year's reading. Neighborhood reading circles will be formed to secure a familiarity with the authors, so necessary for an enjoyment of the afternoons devoted to a consideration of their life and works. The following program has been arranged: November, William Wordsworth and Samuel Taylor Coleridge; December, Charlotte Bronte; January, Thomas Carlyle; February, George Gordon Byron and Percy Bysshe Shelly; March, William Makepeace Thackeray; April, Thomas Babington Macaulay.

—Mr. Reuben E. Tower of Webster street was until this week the owner of a Sheppard dog, which aside from its beauty, faithfulness and other good points was remarkable for a distinguishing characteristic that may have been over-looked by the family, but which gave, according to common report, considerable annoyance to passers-by. The dog would bark and act in a manner unbecoming a real genteel canine, and therefore was not popular. One day last week two agents for the John Hancock Life Insurance Company called at Mr. Tower's house ostensibly to collect premiums. They had been there before, but this was overlooked by the "doggie." No matter how they had been received on previous occasions he felt it proper that this visit should be a memorable one. With such a thought in mind he proceeded to bite one of the agents in the leg. He tore the man's trousers, and scraped his teeth across the fleshy part of the man's leg. The result, a consultation with Mr. Tower, a talk with the police, and summons into court. Mr. Tower came before Judge Kennedy Tuesday morning to answer to the charge of keeping a vicious dog. The agents told their stories, he told his, and the dog's history was briefly reviewed. Mr. Tower was found guilty, and cautioned to dispose of the dog, lest he be brought again into court and fined.

—The grounds about the police station and court house are being regraded.

—William McBride and Thomas Murphy have taken positions at Norumbega Park.

—Mr. and Mrs. Newell of Cambridge will soon occupy their new apartments on Watertown street.

—Mr. William Crough of Maine is visiting in town, the guest of his brother, Mr. Henry Crough.

—Mrs. Thomas Quinn has removed from Cottage place to Charles Dolan's house on Auburndale avenue.

—Mr. Edward Lyons of Pine street has taken a position on the Commonwealth Avenue Street Railway.

—"Christian Growth" was the subject of Rev. T. P. Prudden's sermon before the Y. P. S. C. E. last Sunday evening.

—Rev. George P. Gilman of Waverley occupied the pulpit at the Congregational church, Sunday morning, in exchange with the pastor.

—The Alfred Cheney property on Warwick road has been sold by M. Sinclair Williams to Boston parties, who buy for development.

—The topic at the prayer meeting at the Congregational church, this evening, will be "Can Business be Conducted as a part of Our Religion? Ought it to be?"

—Mr. Martin L. Mullen, a former resident of this place, has returned from the Mullen ranch, Merrill, Montana, where he has been spending the past two years.

—The following members of the police department started Wednesday on their annual two weeks' vacation: Patrolmen Neagle, Guilty, Haynes, O'Halloran, Jounson and Cole.

—John C. Perry has sold his new house on Waltham street, through the office of M. Sinclair Williams. The purchaser is Alfred Cheney, who proposes to occupy the premises at once.

—The Newton Ladies Home Circle will have an outing at Mrs. Boit's home, Thursday, June 9. Take cars from Union station for Wakefield at 11.30. Basket lunch. If stormy, go first fine day.

—A large tent has been placed on Allen's field at the corner of Webster and Elm streets which will be used by a party of Seventh Day Adventists, who are to conduct a camp meeting from June 9 to June 19.

—At the meeting of the Neighborhood Club, June 6th, "Some Aspects of the War with Spain," will be discussed by Prof. Ira N. Hollis of Harvard University, formerly of the U. S. Navy, and by Rear Admiral George E. Belknap.

—The regular monthly meeting of the Newton Veteran Firemen's Association was held Wednesday evening at the engine house, Watertown street. The regular routine business was transacted and it was voted that the association should attend the muster at Lynn, June 17.

—Chief of Police Tarbox and Fire Marshal Whitcomo have been making an investigation of the fire which destroyed Pettigrew's lumber mills, Thursday morning of last week. Several clews have been run down, but thus far nothing satisfactory in the way of evidence has been found.

—A strawberry festival will be given under the auspices of the Ladies Auxiliary to the Newton Veteran Firemen's Association, in Knights of Honor hall, Friday evening, June 10. Tables for whist players will be provided. A pleasing musical and literary program will be presented.

—There are letters in the postoffice for Mr. W. B. Ayers, Mr. John Alexander, Mr. Charles S. Blair, Mr. James Butler, Miss M. W. Calkins, Mrs. Joseph Cook, Mrs. Frank Coburn, Miss Josephine Frasers, Miss Anna Gove, Miss A. Jamison, Alfred M. Moore, Henry Stanton, George Wright, (4.)

—Among the pleasant society events of the week, was the annual party of "The West Newton English and Classical School Alumni Association" at Temple hall, Newtonville, on Friday evening last. At the conclusion of the business meeting, the president of the association, introduced Mr. Carlos Yznaga, '84, U. S. Consul at, and recently returned from Trinidad, Cuba. His address was listened to with great interest, his earnest manner of picturing the sufferings and injustices of the people so dear to him and for whom he has so nobly worked, carried to the hearts of his audience strong conviction. Remarks were then made by the principal of the school, Mr. Nath. T. Allen, Mr. Jas. T. Allen, Mr. Eugene F. Fay, president of the alumnae; Prof. Morse and many others. To the delight of the younger members of the "alumnae" the orchestra then announced by its alluring strains an "invitation to a waltz" and the scene soon changed to one of animation, the dainty costumes of the ladies lending a charming color scheme to the gracefully moving throng of happy dancers. An intermission of half an hour was given for the enjoyment of refreshments and social chat after which dancing was resumed until the near approach of the midnight hour gave warning that farewells must be apoken, and the party of '98 was at an end.

—The Lucy Jackson Chapter, D. A. R., met Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Fyffe, Perkins street. The following ladies were hostesses: Mrs. Fyffe, Miss Fyffe, Mrs. Kimberley, Mrs. Kingsbury, Miss Wilbur and Mrs. E. L. Sargent. Mrs. Raymond, the vice regent, presided in the absence of the regent. Colonel I. F. Kingsbury opened the exercises with singing "The Star Spangled Banner." The recording secretary, Mrs. J. W. Carter, submitted the records of the previous meeting and read a letter from the president general of the National society, in reply to the motion of the chapter with regard to the hospital ship, and also a letter from Mrs. Amos G. Draper of the D A. R. hospital corps. Mrs. Sargent, corresponding sec'y, who represented the chapter at a recent meeting of the Volunteer Aid Association, gave an outline of the work planned. A short but interesting address was made by Mrs. Louise Peabody Sargent, guest from the Boston Tea Party Chapter, of which she is regent. At the close of the business exercises a violin solo was rendered by Miss Ethel Fleu. Admiral Kimberley was introduced and spoke of Dewey's victory and of its importance in creating new questions for consideration by this government. An interesting address was made by Major Bullett, a veteran of the Civil War, who served at Vicksburg and Fredericksburg. The meeting closed with a few eloquent remarks by Mrs. Louise Peabody Sargent.

NEWTON LOWER FALLS.

—Wheelmen and tourists may be pleased to learn that on Sundays throughout the season, St. Mary's Episcopal church will welcome all riders and will care for wheels in the parish house adjoining the church. The morning service is at 10.45. The church stands upon Concord street near Washington street. It is a quaint old church, and may prove an object of interest to tourists. The service is about an hour and might prove restful and interesting after a ten miles spin. The afternoon service is at 4.30.

—Alderman J. E. Heymer threw a large flag to the breeze Memorial Day, in the presence of a large and enthusiastic gathering.

—A tennis tournament was opened this week by members of Waban school, at the court on Beacon street. It is interesting as well as very amusing, to see them play.

—The Waban students held an interesting meeting last Thursday evening. Election of officers was the principal business. The society house candidates for the different offices were defeated. The base ball team has received a challenge from the Brookline High team for a game in the near future.

Our Legislature's Low Moral Tone.

The vote of the House Monday on the street railway bill proves how thoroughly the members have been worked by the street railway interests. There has been an active influence busy for weeks in this direction. Plenty of time has elapsed since the report of the special committee was published for the street railways to fix up everything as they want it. But there has not been any one to plead the cause of the public with the members who are supposed to represent the public. It is evident that it would have been better if the legislature had instructed the street railway committee to report at once the bills which were presented by the special committee, trusting to the good sense of the members before they had been manipulated to serve the public better than they would do after they had been manipulated. The bill presented by Charles Francis Adams, William W. Crapo and Elihu B. Hayes showed some consideration for the people. The House has rejected their recommendations and substituted others far more in favor of the corporations. Taking this action in connection with the Whitney gas bills and the junket at Omaha, the legislature of 1898 will not go home to its constituents with any strong claim to honorable recognition. There are some splendid men here, in the House especially, but the moral tone of the majority is so dull and their perceptions so obfuscated that their constituents will be justified in marking them to be left at home next time. Opportunity still remains for them to redeem themselves partially, but the end of the session is so near and the grip of the corporations so strong that the case seems to be hopeless. It promises to be a disagreeable task to write the obituary of this legislature. If they would make a start and demonstrate either marked mentality or high moral sense it would be a great pleasure to record such fact with promptness, but they have advertised themselves already to be below the average in both respects.—Cor. Lincoln
Spring Water
FROM SARATOGA.

Cures Rheumatism.

The following unsolicited testimonials of Mr. T. O. Drinkwater of 148 Court street, Boston, should be convincing:

Boston, Mass., Sept. 18, 1897.
Lincoln Spring Co.:

Gentlemen—I have been suffering with rheumatism for over a year, and have paid out a large amount of money for doctors' services and other medical aid, but received no especial benefit until, through the advice of a friend, I began to drink Saratoga Lincoln Water. After using about three cases of this water, I can gladly say that I am nearly cured, and would say, thanks to Saratoga Lincoln Water. I cheerfully recommend it to all who are suffering in the same way.

Respectfully yours,
T. O. DRINKWATER,
Prop. Drinkwater's Dining Rooms,
148 Court St., Boston, Mass.

This is only one of the many testimonials we have from those who have been cured by the use of this wonderful water. It is not like a medicine, but a delicious beverage, and when drunk with meals cures Dyspepsia, Billiousness, disorders of the stomach, and drives uric acid from the blood.

It comes only in bottles and is sold by Grocers, Druggists and Dealers in Mineral Waters. Bottled by Lincoln Spring Co., Saratoga Springs, N. Y. Send for Analysis (free upon application).

WHERE IS LOVE.

She pressed her finger on the spring
And set the captive free,
With "Go, my little golden wing,
And find where Love may be!"

He paused a moment at the door,
He scanned the open sky,
And trilled a light farewell before
He spread his wings to fly.

Then out and upward went her bird
Upon his happy quest,
Far, far, until the sunlight blurred
The yellow of his breast.

And lonely were the hours and long
She waited once to hear
The notes of his familiar song
Uplifted, liquid, clear.

But at the morning's rosy break,
There in his cage above,
He sang again: "Awake! Awake!
Where you dwell, here is Love!"
—Amelia Doerner in Chicago Record.

A NOVEL DUEL.

He was an old war chief, with a spotless past and a splendid renown. He had been fighting in Africa, first as a common soldier, then with the double star shining brilliantly upon the sleeves of his tunic.

He had mingled in the ferocious assaults at the storming of Sevastopol. He had taken part in the great battles of the campaign in Italy. Adored by his men, beloved by his officers, respected by the enemy, his whole career bore witness to his incomparable bravery, his incorruptible integrity.

The campaign of France was just beginning, and he was placed, as usual, in the position to which his gallantry and his successes entitled him—leading the advance guard. His divisions formed the first barrier that the enemy would encounter. He was one of those upon whom fell the task of checking, of turning back if possible, those threatening forces creeping across the frontier through the break at Wissembourg, swelling, broadening out, stretching from side to side, an endless line, marching against our regiments.

Battle was in the air. One felt it beside him. Tomorrow or next day would deliver them to it.

Just at this time, too, suddenly as a thunderbolt, a frightful torture fell upon this old chief. An ugly rumor had come to his ears—how it matters not—an ugly rumor concerning a member of his family—she who was nearest and dearest to him, his beautiful young wife.

Calumny is always infamous, but also always skillful. It had chosen—to make the thing more probable still—to link with hers the name of a young officer of his own staff, the bravest and handsomest of all. This was Albert de Rancet, aid-de-camp to this old soldier, whom, they said, he (De Rancet) had betrayed.

At first the old chief believed nothing; duplicity disgusted him, villainy astonished and found him incredulous. It seemed to him impossible that the uniform could cover the soul of a felon.

But this morning, under the shock of the revelation that had come in the explicit words and charges of this rumor, he had thrown upon De Rancet a stern, searching glance, and he saw—he knew that he saw—in that face, always hitherto so frank and open, a sudden trouble that sought to hide itself from his eye.

A thousand incidents came back to his memory, a thousand others to prove them true, and all the while that he was giving his orders for the day, his breast oppressed by an intolerable anguish, he was asking himself:

"Is it true? Is it true? Can it possibly be true?"

He—this man before him, whom he had loved like a son! She—to whom, not content with giving his name and tenderness, he had sought by every means in his power to give an existence happy and envied, and who for days and days had wept such floods of bitter tears on seeing him starting upon this campaign. Tears for him? No. He understood everything now. Tears for the other, whom he in leaving had carried away.

The other—that is to say, that young, elegant officer—whom he had taken upon his staff at first for his name and his manner and because it was necessary that he, since his master, the emperor, desired it so, should have a brilliant staff.

How he had helped him too! How he had pushed him forward, leaving no single thing undone to make him, De Rancet, climb more quickly the different grades of his many promotions! Why, only a week ago he had raised him, that Judas traitor, to the glorious ranks of the Legion of Honor. Upon whose persuasions? Great God! Upon hers—his wife's; her persuasions only!

A dull fury invaded his soul as he thought of these things and realized their meaning. Nevertheless he held up his head as calm apparently as ever to those who surrounded him and to whom he was giving his last instructions before the impending struggle.

All the while, however, he was thinking, all the while planning, and his voice as he talked grew so low and hoarse that he scarcely recognized it as his own.

"And now, messieurs," said he, "there is one thing more. It is my intention to inform myself exactly, apart from the reports of the spies, of the enemy's precise position. At 10 o'clock, then, this morning there will be a reconnoissance, headed by me, your commander in chief—a reconnoissance, I said, not an expedition. I shall require to accompany me, therefore, but one or two officers—you, De Rancet, for one, and the commandants, Lastic and Pontiac. Behind us will follow a single squad of dragoons. Rendezvous here in 20 minutes. Messieurs, au revoir!"

Half an hour later the little troop was ready and soon defiling at a slow trot of the horses past regiment after regiment, fortified or camped each side of the route.

The chief rode alone in advance, erect and stately on his own great roan charger, his eyes upon the line of the horizon, lost under the hop vines and swarming already perhaps with the enfants perdus of the enemy. His face was singularly pale to those who knew him, the ruddy pink of his cheeks faded to a yellow pallor.

But they had passed the French outposts now and were in the open country. The chief waved his hand; his officers approached.

"I think, messieurs," said he, but without halting, "that it won't be long now before we see something. Commandants Lastic and Pontiac, bid the escort ride 50 paces behind and remain behind with them. You, De Rancet, ride with me. All watch well and keep your eyes open for that which is before us."

The aid-de-camp, with a light and graceful bound of his horse, drew up to his chief, but still, as a mark of respect perhaps, a little behind him.

"Nearer, nearer, I say." And the old chief obliged his aid to ride side by side with him, both of them spurring forward at a sweeping trot, while behind them came always the even jog, jog of the accompanying dragoons.

Albert de Rancet kept a quiet face, though inwardly wondering—for still he guessed nothing of the meaning of his old chief's new ways—inwardly wondering at this queer promenade. Certainly it was pretty enough on this radiant April morning, only it might be possible to conduct it too far, for none knew better than he the reckless bravery of him they affectionately called "the patron" in the intimate comradeship of the bivouac fire.

Nothing stirred yet about them, though it seemed to the listening aid-de-camp that now and then in the distance he heard a dull roar, the sullen humming of flying projectiles, those bees of war seeking to rest upon living flowers, and felt a shudder of the ground, covered with hop vines and clumps of bushes, behind which no one knew what was preparing itself.

Reflecting this, De Rancet unconsciously relaxed his pace, falling behind a trifle, and again the old chief turned with a curt:

"What are you doing there, De Rancet! I told you beside me!"

With the words there came a shot, a flash of fire from the gulley below them, screened by that heap of bramble bushes adjoining the path along which they were going. They saw a man, a German foot soldier, save himself running, bent double, dodging from cover to cover, at the same time changing his cartridge to fire again.

The second shot went over their heads. Breathless from running, the gunner's hand had become unsteady.

"My general," said the aid, respectfully touching his arm, "this is growing too risky a business for you. Shall we wheel at the crossroads yonder and put the fields between us and such dangerous hornets?"

For the first time since they had started the old chief's stern eyes were bent full upon the face of his questioner. There was a flame in their depths that made De Rancet quail.

What was the matter with him, his old chief, this day? What did he mean by looking at him so? Could anything have happened? Could any one have told him? Did the old man know?

For the first time, too, De Rancet began to understand. This was no simple reconnoissance, this strange promenade before the enemy upon which his old chief had brought him. This was a duel, a duel to the end, between him and death, between him and his benefactor, the man he had wronged. This was also perhaps an execution.

The old chief spoke.

"De Rancet," said he coldly, inflexibly pointing to his side, "I told you to ride here!"

And always they moved on, the old chief erect and pitiless and showing to the enemy his breast, starred with medals, the aid beside him erect also, a brave soldier even then, and marching, both of them, with the frightful serenity of those about to die.

And in the radiant silence of that country drowned in sunlight one heard but the softened hammering of the horses' feet pounding the sod in measured rhythm.

All at once the silence was broken by a sharp crackle of musketry. As the red flame licked the thicket De Rancet set spurs to his horse and bounded forward, as if to welcome the choice that death had made, for it was he, it was he, the ball had reached.

He threw out his arms, his eyes grew dim, a red hole showed in his brow, and softly, gently he swayed from the saddle to the ground.

The general stopped; the escort pricked forward.

"Messieurs," said he, "now I am ready to return. Two men dismount and pick up the body."—From the French.

How General Butler Got the America.

One of General Butler's closest yachting friends tells an interesting story concerning the general's connection with the cotton claims which arose out of the seizures by the government during the late war and were before the courts in Washington a long time before the claimants were victorious. This man, who has been in active practice at the Suffolk bar many years and got the story from General Butler's own lips, says the general did not come into possession of the famous yacht America by purchase, as generally supposed, but by gift, in the following manner:

After the cotton claims had been pressed unavailingly for some time the Hon. L. Q. C. Lamar, who was interested in them and later was himself on the supreme bench of the United States, induced General Butler to take up the case and press it to a termination. Butler was finally successful in his suit and received a check for $25,000 from his gratified clients. Mr. Lamar also wrote him a letter in which he stated that he and his friends understood that the general was an enthusiastic yachtsman, and as they had come into possession of the old America after she had been raised from the spot where she had been sunk as a blockade runner during the war they would be pleased if he would accept her as a gift, showing their further appreciation of his efforts in their behalf. This story, the writer's informant says, he believes to be entirely true.—Boston Herald.

The Air In Mines.

A simple test for noxious gases in the air of mines is explained by a writer in The Colliery Guardian, England. For detecting carbonic oxide, methane, etc., a dilute solution of potassium permanganate, containing a little nitric acid, is found highly efficient, the effect of such gases being to decolorize the permanganate solution. The reaction goes on more rapidly when the solution also contains silver nitrate, one part of carbonic oxide to from 500 to 5,000 parts of air decolorizing the liquid in from 1 to 24 hours. The reagent consists of two or three grams of silver nitrate crystals dissolved in one liter of water; then for the potassium permanganate solution one liter of distilled water boiled with a few drops of pure nitric acid free from hydrochloric acid, a little permanganate solution being added until the liquid becomes rose colored, in order destroy any organic matter which may have found access to the water, as dust, etc. When cold, one gram of potassium permanganate crystals is dissolved in the water and 50 cubic centimeters of nitric acid added to it. In practice 20 cubic centimeters of the first or silver nitrate solution, one of the permanganate solution and one of pure nitric acid are mixed and made up to 50 cubic centimeters with distilled water freed from organic matter. The reagent is to be used immediately.

Heeded a Warning.

Mr. Drincer—I had an awful dream last night, Maria. I dreamed I came home full of whisky and the light from the hall lamp set fire to my breath.

Mrs. Drincer (aghast)—If I were you, John, I'd take that dream as a warning.

Mr. Drincer—So I will, by George! If I'm not at home when you go to bed tonight, Maria, be sure that you put out that horrid hall lamp.—Pearson's Weekly.

HOW TO COLOR A PIPE

CHICAGO'S LEADING MEERSCHAUM EXPERT IS A WOMAN.

She Isn't a Smoker Herself, but She Knows All About It—Rich Coloring Obtained by Careful Use and Timely Boiling—A Masculine Weakness.

Perhaps the one person in this city who is most deeply versed in the secret of pipe coloring is a woman, and it is needless to say that she never took so much as a single whiff of smoke from a pipe in her life. Her interest in pipe coloring is purely professional and a very large proportion of the most beautiful pipes colored in Chicago during the last 20 years have passed through her hands, or, more properly, through her kettle, for she is a past master in the unique profession of meerschaum boiling. She has treated thousands of pipes for smokers of this city and has undoubtedly done more to disseminate a general knowledge of the difficult art of meerschaum coloring than any other resident of this city.

While it cannot be said that this woman "pipe doctor," as she is frequently called by her patrons, gives regular lessons or paid instruction, her advice is constantly sought by the men who find that their pet pipes are not acquiring the rich hue which they desire, and her position may best be described as that of a "consulting colorist." Although she maintains a shop or office in Clark street and there conducts a large business in the sale and repair of fine pipes, she does not venture to do her boiling in so public a place, as the process is a secret one and is the evolution of many years of patient study and experiment. The rudiments of her odd craft were learned in France, where she was born, but the formulæ for the boiling mixtures which she now uses bear little resemblance to those which she was originally taught. They are distinctively her own, and she guards them with the most jealous care.

"A great many young men," said this matronly woman whose life has been spent in studying pipes, "bring me meerschaums which they have smoked for six or eight months and ask why the pipes have failed to acquire the dark coloring seen in the meerschaums of those who are veterans in the art. They inquire, in a helpless sort of way, if I think boiling will improve the color or if the meerschaum is of an inferior quality which would not take on a rich hue if smoked for a dozen years. I always know that such customers are beginners and have never before attempted to color a pipe. They imagine smoking is the only essential process in pipe coloring and that boiling should be resorted to only when the meerschaum burns, becomes scratched or is of an inferior quality. This is an almost universal mistake among those who are inexperienced in this smoker's diversion.

"The fact is that the finest meerschaum ever imported into this country could not be given a perfect color without being boiled in oil at just the right stage in its development. Simply smoking it, no matter how great the care exercised to prevent burning or how rich and juicy the tobacco, would never in the world secure the desired result. It is in knowing just when the pipe is ripe for boiling that the smoker is able to display a triumph of judgment and skill which will make him envied by his less successful competitors, for there is a keen spirit of rivalry in this matter, particularly among young men of the fashionable and student classes.

"There are scores of veteran colorists who invariably smoke their meerschaums altogether too long before having them boiled. This is the universal tendency, and the number of men who have their pipes boiled at exactly the proper stage may almost be counted on the fingers of two hands. Of course it is absolutely impossible to make any hard and fast rules regulating the length of time that the pipe should be smoked before being sent to the kettle. Many things enter into that consideration, but chiefly the quality of the meerschaum. If the latter is very soft the pipe, in the hands of a steady smoker, will be ready for the oil in a week, while a hard pipe will require three weeks of almost constant smoking to make it 'ripe' for its hot bath.

"The standard of shading at which most smokers aim is a very dark brown, almost black, for the base of the bowl and the beginning of the stem and a rich cherry for the upper portion of the bowl. This gives a variety of shading. As the pipe is smoked after coming from the kettle the dark brown base and stem will gradually become charcoal black, while the cherry colored upper half of the bowl will acquire a yellowish tinge."

"Can you regulate the coloring by variations in your method of boiling?" this expert was asked.

"Certainly," was the prompt reply "The bath in my kettle is not plain oil by any means. It contains herbs and various other ingredients which, to a degree at least, regulate the color imparted to the meerschaum. But of course it would not do for me to go into particulars regarding my formula for boiling. That is my trade secret which has cost me years of experimenting.

"The public in general has no idea of the pride which hundreds of men take in their handsomely colored meerschaums. Women in particular regard this penchant as the most foolish of all masculine weaknesses, but in spite of this sentiment the smokers still continue to make pets of their pipes and treat them as tenderly as the women do their poodles. One gentleman brought me an old blackened pipe of ordinary clay, with its stem broken off short. He had a handsome amber mouthpiece attached to it by means of a silver ferrule and paid the bill without a complaint. The pipe had become a companion to him, and the price of the finest meerschaum in the shop would not have tempted him to part with it."—Chicago Post.

MIDDLESEX ss. SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT, April, 1898.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court.

RESPECTFULLY represents Michael McDonald of Newton in said County, that on the first day of May, 1862, Josiah Rutter of Waltham in said County, conveyed to your petitioner, by warranty deed, recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, Book 889, Page 258, a certain parcel of land situated in said Newton, and bounded and described as follows, to wit: "beginning at the northeast corner of the premises at a private way leading from Moody Street, and by land now or late of E. H. Derby; thence running southwesterly on said Derby's land, six hundred and ninety nine (699) feet to land of Patrick Gannon; thence northwesterly on said Gannon's land, two hundred and fifty-two and two tenths (252 2-10) feet, to land of Francis Buttrick; thence northeasterly on said Buttrick's land six hundred and ninety-eight (698) feet to said private way from Moody Street; thence on said private way southeasterly two hundred and fifty-two and two tenths (252 2-10) feet to the point of beginning: containing four acres more or less, being a part of the premises conveyed to said Rutter by S. B. Whitney and others by deed dated May 6th, 1858, with the right of way to Main Street named in deed of F. C. Lowell to S. B. Whitney and others."

That your petitioner thereafter continued to own the said premises until June 28, 1897, on which date he conveyed the same together with other lands, in fee with covenants of title and warranty to Mark C. Meagher of Brookline in the County of Norfolk and said Commonwealth, which deed to said Meagher was recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, Book 2572, Page 432.

That on April 1, 1861, said Josiah Rutter mortgaged the said premises together with other land to The Waltham Mutual Loan & Fund Association to secure the payment of One thousand dollars ($1,000) in six months from the date of said mortgage, which mortgage was recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, Book 859, Page 212; that the said Josiah Rutter, the mortgagor, and those having his estate in the premises, have been in uninterrupted possession of the said premises for more than twenty years after the expiration of the time limited in said mortgage for the full performance of the conditions thereof, and for more than twenty years no payment on account of the debt secured by said mortgage has been made, nor during that period has said mortgage been in any way recognized as a valid mortgage, but that the record title to said real estate is incumbered by reason of said mortgage being undischarged.

WHEREFORE your petitioner prays that this Honorable Court will, after due notice to all parties interested, make a decree for the settlement of the title to the real estate above described under the provisions of Chap. 237 of the Acts of 1882, and Chap. 427 of the Acts of 1890.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists, price 75c. per bottle.

Eastern Division Meet American Canoe Association.

The annual camp of the Eastern Division of the American Canoe Association was held at Tyng's Island in the Merrimac River on May 28th, 29th and 30th, and proved to be one of the most successful "meets" ever held in the Eastern Division. This year the local canoe men had the management in their hands and the Wawbewawas were extremely fortunate in being able to obtain the privileges of the Vesper Country Club grounds, which are so beautifully situated on Tyng's Island, (of nearly 100 acres), in the Merrimac River, six miles above Lowell.

About fifty canoeists went into camp on Saturday, many Newton paddlers being among the number.

The usual "camp fire" seemed more attractive than ever and the popular A. C. A. songs were sung with great enthusiasm to the accompaniment of the banjos and guitars.

The Wawbewawas brought "Professor" Sayles, their colored entertainer, to camp, and he afforded much amusement.

Sunday was a quiet day, with another camp fire in the evening, when Mr. Chas. W. Cole of this city rendered several songs in his usual pleasing manner, and "Bob" Sayles gave many of the old time darky melodies.

On Monday morning the racing men came to the front and an exhibition of expert paddling occupied the attention of all during the greater part of the day.

In every case the races were well contested and the Newton canoe men have reason to be proud of the result. They not only won the war canoe race, but succeeded in taking first place in the tandem single blade event as well as the hand paddling and hurry scurry races.

The war canoe crew had extremely strong competitors in the crews from the Inniton Canoe Club of Woburn and the Lawrence Canoe Club, but succeeded in winning by half a length.

The Wawbewawa crew was made up as follows: F. J. Burrage, stroke, W. J. Osgood, W. G. Bancroft, G. R. Heckle, J. B. May, H. S. Bosson, L. W. Chandler, E. R. Adams and L. S. Drake, captain.

The tandem single blade event had four crews and G. R. Heckle and J. B. May of the Wawbewawas won after a hard race with Bowie and Harrison of Lawrence. This latter crew won the double blade event, defeating the Newton boys by less than a length.

The Inniton Canoe Club won four races in their new 20 ft. cedar, the Wawbewawas 16 ft. canoe being completely outclassed.

In the hand paddling Ernest R. Adams of Newton won easily and W. J. Osgood, also of the Wawbewawas, won the hurry scurry. G. R. Heckle of the same club gave a wonderful exhibition in the upset paddling.

This is one of the most difficult tricks known to canoe men, and Mr. Heckle does it in the remarkable time of ten seconds, tipping his canoe completely over, righting it without shipping any water, and regaining his paddling position.

The races were witnessed by a large and enthusiastic gathering. Value prizes were given in each event and the Wawbewawas became the proud possessors of another handsome war canoe banner, together with fourteen individual prizes.

Vice Commodore Louis S. Drake, purser Francis J. Burrage and Wm. V. Forsaith had the arrangements in charge and the success of the meet is in a great way due to their efforts.

At the annual meeting Mr. Julius B. Waterbury of the Wawbewawa Canoe Association, was elected rear commodore of the division.

Among the Newton men at camp were Vice-Com. Louis S. Drake, Purser Francis J. Burrage, W. G. Bancroft, Louis A. Hall, John B. May, E. R. Adams, C. F. Estabrook, L. W. Chandler, W. J. Osgood, G. R. Heckle, A. T. S. Clay, H. S. Bosson, Chas. W. Knapp, W. E. Stacy, C. F. Dodge, Wm. V. Forsaith, J. W. Brown, E. T. Brigham, Wellington Wells, Parry C. Wiggin, W. W. Crosby, all members of the Wawbewawa Canoe Association.

NEWTON CLUB.

A large number of members attended the last in the series of Saturday evening musical entertainments. The music was furnished by Daggett's orchestra, and after the formal entertainment lunch was served in the main cafe.

SOME persons say it is natural for them to lose flesh during summer. But losing flesh is losing ground. Can you afford to approach another winter in this weakened condition?

Coughs and colds, weak throats and lungs, come quickest to those who are thin in flesh, to those easily chilled, to those who have poor circulation and feeble digestion.

Scott's Emulsion

of cod liver oil with hypophosphites does just as much good in summer as in winter. It makes flesh in August as well as April. You certainly need as strong nerves in July as in January. And your weak throat and lungs should be healed and strengthened without delay.

BABY'S DREAM.

In Sleep Came the Conditions He Yearned For When Awake.

Would that I had the pen of a Dickens or a Thackeray to picture for you the following incident of child life, which to me is so humorous and at the same time so full of pathos that I hardly know whether to laugh or cry over it, writes a correspondent of the Dallas News:

There was a dear little fellow of my acquaintance who was the pet of the family—consisting of father, mother and a precious maiden aunt. Baby's mamma had been an invalid from his earliest recollection, and he had learned to go to his aunt for many of his childish wants and to love her as fondly as he did his own mother. Indeed, though to her other nephews and nieces she was "auntie," to Master Baby she was always "Mamma Bell."

Should you have asked him, as his friends often did, "Who is Mamma Bell?" he would have answered you in a surprised tone and with a puzzled look on his face, "She's my nuzzer mamma of tourse."

Before the little fellow was 3 years of age the happy family was broken up. First the mother died, and in a few short months the father was laid beside her. "Mamma Bell" went to live with other relatives in a distant state, and baby was taken into an uncle's family, where he became at once the special charge of another maiden aunt.

The little fellow seemed to understand, in a childish way, of course, what death meant. He often spoke of his parents, asking for the songs "papa user sing" or the stories "mamma user tell," and while his voice sometimes quivered with emotion as he talked still he never cried for them.

But his separation from "Mamma Bell" was different. This she could not, would not, understand. She was not dead—she had not lain silent and cold, indifferent alike to his caresses or his commands. No, indeed! She had clung to him, as he to her, with kisses and tears to the very last. Sometimes at the mention of her name he would begin to cry, and he often mourned disconsolately because she came not to him. Of course he soon learned to love his new aunt very dearly, but he still seemed to think that in some vague way she stood between him and past happiness.

One night as she was putting him to bed, to stop the childish chatter, she said: "Now, baby, go to sleep quick. Dream a pretty dream and tell auntie all about it when you wake." When morning came, he was awake bright and early.

"Auntie! Auntie!" he called. "I did jeam a pretty jeam, a pretty, pretty jeam!"

"And what was it?" auntie said as she bent over him to kiss his rosy lips.

His soft little hands patted her cheeks caressingly, and his big brown eyes looked straight into her own as he said, "I jeamed you was dead, like mamma and papa is, and I was living wif my Mamma Bell again."

His Only Complaint.

Mr. Meekton was vainly endeavoring to get a composition which looked like a mixture of tar and molasses off his hands when he turned to interrupt his wife's remarks.

"Henrietta," he said, "you have just been to another meeting, haven't you?"

"Certainly," she answered, throwing her gloves on the center table.

"I suppose you made a speech?"

"Naturally."

"You said that man is an oppressive tyrant, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"You observed that it was time to break the shackles with which the husband sought to trammel the freedom of a wife and to show him that his mastery was, after all, but a relic of barbarism which enlightened humanity has outgrown."

"You overheard me rehearsing my speech," she exclaimed.

"Never mind. And then you referred to the way in which a husband ought to pose as a domineering dictator and an irresponsible autocrat?"

"Yes, I did. And I may as well inquire, once for all, if you have any objection to offer to those remarks."

"None whatever, Henrietta," replied Mr. Meekton as he took some earth out of a flowerpot and tried to rub some of the coating off his hands. "Only I must say it seems a little hard that after enjoying the luxury of thus relieving your mind you should come back and criticise the way in which I cleaned your bicycle while you were gone."—Washington Star.

Parents' Titles.

"I was brought up," said a fond father, "to say father and mother. I never dreamed of saying papa and mamma when I was a child, and I should have made awkward work of it if I had tried. My children until lately have always said papa and mamma. I don't know how they got started that way, but at the outset and for a long time they never thought of saying anything else. Then the older ones took to saying father and mother. They liked these titles better, and they thought they were better form, too, and they taught the younger children also to say father and mother, and now they all say father and mother.

"The older children soon accustomed themselves to the change. The younger children were a little shy over it at first, but they soon got pretty well used to it, and now we rarely hear in my house papa and mamma. It is father and mother.

"And I must say I like it better. And I don't think it is because that is the way I was brought up, though these titles certainly do have to me an old and familiar and affectionate sound that is very pleasant, but I think I like father and mother better, anyway."—New York Sun.

Irish Wit.

As Sir Walter Scott was riding with a friend near Abbotsford he came to a field gate, which an Irish beggar, who happened to be near, opened for him. Sir Walter was desirous of rewarding him by the present of sixpence, but found he had not so small a coin in his purse. "Here, my good fellow," said he, "here is a shilling for you, but, mind, you owe me sixpence." "God bless your honor," exclaimed the Irishman; "may your honor live till I pay you."—San Francisco Argonaut.

The Mystery Cleared.

"Well, sir," said the chief of police to one of his shrewdest detectives, "has any one succeeded in deciphering that mysterious paper you found on that suspect?"

"Yes. It was a doctor's prescription."—Detroit Free Press.

STOP IT!

Stop lugging coal to dirty the house, over heat the kitchen, and waste fuel while you are not cooking. If you want to see how 2,000,000 housekeepers keep cool, avoid work and worry, and save cash, go buy a modern and do your cooking with Stove Gasoline

VAPOR STOVE

You can do anything on a Vapor Stove that you can do on any other stove, and do it better, with less expense and trouble. It's safe as a coal stove, and the cost of operation is so small it is hardly worth considering. It will not heat the room. You light it in an instant, turn it out the moment you are done cooking.

If your dealer does not sell Vapor Stoves and Stove Gasoline, write to the Standard Oil Company, New York City.

—Last Saturday afternoon the new Commonwealth Club's second afternoon "at home" was largely attended by many of the best people of Brookline, Chestnut Hill, the Newtons and the city of Boston. President Estes, Mrs. George F. Harding, Mrs. W. P. Shreve, Mrs. L. Coues Page and the other members of the house committee gave hospitable entertainment to the guests, and several members played over the links for the first time. The golfing grounds of this club are so easy of access to the people of Boston and Brookline that it will soon be one of the most popular social organizations in this vicinity. For membership or other information, the secretary, Mr. Arthur G. Everett, may be addressed at Chestnut Hill avenue, Brighton.

—There was a competition between the first and the second teams of the Newton Centre Golf Club, Saturday. This is an innovation in the Saturday events of that club, one which meets with the hearty approval of all its members. Of course, no one expected the "seconds" would be "in it" with the "premiers," but the spirit of emulation was none the less strong on that account, and a great many persons showed their interest in the contest by putting in an appearance at the clubhouse. The result was, as anticipated, an easy win for the first team, the score being 25 to 2, match play. The contestants were Mr. Royce vs. Mr. Haynie, Mr. Noyes vs. Mr. Warren, Mr. Green vs. Mr. Buck, Mr. Tilney vs. Mr. Kidder, and Mr. Allen vs. Alderman Baily, the last mentioned being not only captain, but the only one of the second team who finally scored against his opponent. It was a good day for golf, and the course was in fine condition. Of the players, Mr. Royce put up the "record" score of the club, his card showing 47 and 48 for the 18 holes.

—One of Newton's young men has been giving a good account of himself in the Bath Naval Brigade. A company was formed there with William R. Wade, son of the late Hon. Levi C. Wade, as lieutenant. The company was accepted and started for Boston with bands of music, and an inspiring farewell from the Bath people, and although they lost nine men on the way, the company reported for service on the receiving ship Wabash at the navy yard. But before being sworn in, the men had an attack of homesickness, and wanted to go home. Lieutenant Wade implored them to live up to their agreement. "Think of what the people of Bath will say if you go back, after their buying your clothes and sending you down here," he said earnestly. "Be men, and stand by your agreement, and don't desert me at the last moment." The men muttered among themselves, stood a moment irresolute, and then one light-haired chap stepped forward and said: "I'll stick to the finish, anyway." He was followed by a dozen others. "Come on, boys," said Lieutentant Wade, encouragingly, "I knew you would think better of this, and even if there is not another man among you who will join me I will say to these men that I thank them most heartily, and I am glad they are imbued with the true spirit." Finally all but five were sworn in and assigned to duty, which for the present will consist of drilling and learning their new duties. As soon as the monitor Wyandotte is put in order the Bath men will be placed in charge and sent to Popham Beach, Me., for patrol duty. Lieut. Wade's courage and firm stand in favor of carrying out the pledges given by the company to their friends at home is very highly spoken of by the officials at the navy yard, and he evidently is a worthy son of his father, who was one of the most prominent citizens of Newton.

—Mr. W. Scott Richards has sold his unoccupied house on Pierce street, and has purchased the house of Mr. L. A. Ross on Hyde street.

—Mr. L. A. Ross and family have removed to the farm lately purchased by him at South Sudbury, near Wayside Inn railroad station.

—The Congregational Sunday school will have their annual picnic on Saturday of this week, and will go by electrics to Waltham, where it took place last year.

—Rev. Wm. Safford Jones will preach Sunday morning at All Souls Unitarian church, Highland club hall. Sunday school at noon. All are cordially invited.

—Mrs. Gott of Eliot, who has been spending the past two or three months at Southern Pines, for the benefit of her health, arrived home on Monday, much improved.

—Rev. T. W. Bishop will preach at the Methodist church next Sunday morning and evening. Evening service at 7.30. Subject: "Pleasing One's Neighbor." Young people's meeting at 6.45.

—At the Methodist church the ladies will have their regular June festival on Wednesday evening, and the entertainment will be followed by the usual supply of strawberries and proper attendant luxuries.

—The members of the Monday Club held a lawn party on Tuesday, on the grounds of Mrs. Nickerson, the retiring president, and in response to her invitation. There was a large attendance. Light refreshments were served.

—David Roy of this place, while grooming a horse in a barn off Walnut street, yesterday morning, was kicked by the animal, and had his right leg broken. He was attended by Dr. Perkins and removed to the Newton Hospital.

—On Saturday, June 11, the Shakespeare Club have planned a luncheon party and drive to the Wayside Inn. The officers for the coming year are: Pres., Mrs Eaton; Vice-Pres., Mrs. Pratt; Sec., Miss Converse; Treas., Miss Lamphier.

—Another effort is being made to secure a franchise in this place and Oak Hill for the West Roxbury & Newton street railway company, and a petition is in circulation here urging the board of aldermen to give favorable consideration to the application for a location.

—To the citizens of Newton Highlands and members of the Newton Highlands Improvement Association: At a recent meeting of the executive board of the association, Mr James W. Foster was appointed a special agent on behalf of the association to take the necessary steps and prosecute parties, if found necessary, that allow horses to mutilate and destroy trees. The association has spent a large amount of money in setting out trees and otherwise making the Highlands attractive. A vicious horse can destroy in a few minutes what it will take years to replace, to say nothing of the expenditure of a considerable sum of money. There is a city ordinance which provides for a fine of $20, for allowing horses to bark or mutilate trees. The association is taking measures to suppress the destruction of ornamental and shade trees on our public streets. If all our citizens will take an interest in this commendable and worthy object, and will report all cases to Mr. James W. Foster, he will do the rest. All that is wanted is the evidence against the owners or those having the care of horses, which have disfigured and destroyed so many of our trees. Several parties have been notified to muzzle their horses, and if it is not done action at law will follow.

—Rev. Wm. Hall Williams of Waban, Mr. Alfred Stebbins, Jr., and Rev. Wm. S. Jones of this place and Rev. Loren B. Macdonald of Concord are planning a bicycle trip together to Wolfboro, N. H., and return, from June 13th to 18th.

—It was visitors' night at the meeting of the boys' brigade, held on Tuesday evening at the Congregational chapel, and there was a large attendance. Addresses were made by Mr. Boyd, Rev. Mr. Havens, Rev. Mr. Jones and Mr. Gott. Musical selections were rendered by Mr. Pennell, with Miss Morse as accompanist at the piano, after which a short drill took place, which was very creditable to the brigade, and was much applauded by the visitors. The parade of the brigade and their drum corps, on Memorial Day in the city procession has been very highly praised.

NEWTON UPPER FALLS.

—For other news see page 7.

—A very pleasant affair took place Wednesday evening in the basement of St. Mary's church, the occasion being the presentation of a fine bicycle and a handsome gold watch to the assistant pastor, Rev. Cornelius Riordan. The presentation address on behalf of the Holy Name Society, which gave the bicycle, was made by the president, Mr. Jeremiah Mahoney. Miss Mary Daly presented the watch, which was the gift of the married women's sodality and the young ladies' sodality. Both addresses were gracefully worded and were well received by the large audience. Fr. Riordan, taken entirely by surprise, responded in a very feeling manner and expressed in eloquent words his profound appreciation of this and the many other manifestations of kindness on the part of St. Mary's congregation. He was greeted with hearty applause. The rector, Rev. T. J. Danahy, then made a few happy remarks. Excellent music was furnished for the occasion by the choir under the direction of the organist, Miss Sullivan.

Lasell Notes.

Dr. L. A. Steele of Nashville, Tenn., lectured on Friday evening, on the subject, "Home Life in Dixie During the War."

On Sunday morning several parties attended the services of Boston churches; one, the First church, Temple street, another, Dr. Hale's church, and others to Trinity.

The usual spring excursion to Hunnewell Gardens and Wellesley College was made on Monday afternoon, some twenty-five or more of the students making the trip to these interesting places.

One of the events of commencement week at Lasell is the banquet given by the S. D. Society of the school to the senior class. This took place on Wednesday evening in the prettily decorated dining-room of the seminary. Besides the guests of honor there were present a number of outside guests, chiefly members of the society, who are not now members of the school. The brilliantly lighted room was gay with its assemblage of daintily dressed young women, and at the end of the feast, resounded with the laughter and applause called forth by the various responses to the toasts proposed by a very engaging toastmistress. The S. D's may justly consider their banquet a success. Miss Eva Kennard officiated as toastmistress, and after an address of welcome by Miss Mabel Currie, president of the society, which was responded to by Miss Emma Goll, president of the senior class, introduced the following toasts: "Lasell Athletics," Miss Carita Curtis; "Tom, Dick and Harry," Miss Kittibell Chapman; "Much Ado About Nothing," Miss Marita Sisson; "Farewell," Miss Evelyn Ebert. Several guests were present at the banquet, including former members of the society and Prof. J. Walter Davis, Mrs. Susan Jones, Miss Alice Hotchkiss, and Mrs. Frank Davidson.

The Lasellia club banquet will be given this evening. On Sunday morning Rev. A. B. Kendig, D. D., of Brookline, gives the sermon before the graduating class. On Monday evening are the class day exercises. Tuesday, at 8 p. m. is the principal's reception for the senior class. Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock, the regular commencement exercises with an address by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore; 2.30 p. m., silver anniversary of Miss Carpenter and Miss Blaisdell, with an address by Rev. C. W. Cushing, D. D., principal twenty-five years ago; 4 p. m., business meeting alumnae; 4.30 p. m., alumnae reception.

The gymnasium at Lasell Seminary was crowded last evening, the occasion being the pupils' commencement concert. The numbers were all well received, the chorus pieces by the Orphean Club being particularly applauded. Among those who took part were Misses Reynolds, Ashley, Dasher, Cooke, Allen, Baker, Cadmus, Thomson, R. Rishell, Elling, Abbott and Bragdon.

NEWTON CLUB.

The first in the June series of promenade concerts, Wednesday evening, went far ahead of the marked success scored by these popular entertainments last year. To begin with the crowd, which was an unconfortable feature last year, was somewhat lessened by the committee's new regulations in regard to tickets, while from a musical and social standpoint the affair left nothing to be desired. More than 1000 club members and their guests enjoyed the delightful orchestral music during the evening, while light refreshments served at small tables scattered about the grounds added to the enjoyment of the evening. The concert program was fully up to the high standard of excellence set by the Waltham band, and the patriotic numbers in particular were received with marked favor. The grounds to the west of the clubhouse were enclosed with canvas for the occasion and with the broad piazzas formed a splendid promenade. The enclosed space was brilliantly illuminated with colored electric globes effectively arranged in clusters along the clubhouse front and the band stand, while other festoons, half hidden in the foliage of the great trees, added much to the beauty of the scene.

Flag Poles.

To keep step with the spirit of the times, thoroughly up-to-date and patriotic citizens are displaying on their residences the national colors. There is nothing shows more the true sentiment of a public spirited citizen than the "Stars and Stripes" flying from a staff on his home. Of late the demand for flag poles has been unusually large as many householders have sought to beautify their homes by the purchase of a staff from which to fly "Old Glory." The Boston Flag Pole Company, whose advertisement may be found in another column, has enjoyed a large Newton patronage, and is desirous of filling other orders for residents of this city. Their office is at 169 Broadway Extension, near Dorchester avenue, South Boston. All orders addressed to 44 Thornton street, Newton, will be promptly attended to.

THE TRUNK OF VALUABLES.

A Story of How a Babe Escaped From a Railroad Wreck.

When a man has handled the express money for a score of years without loss or any sort of accident, the company begins to appreciate him and lets down a little on the cast iron rules that hedge employees. So is was that Sam Alton was sometimes allowed to take his young wife and baby boy on his trips when they made him stay at the other end of the road over Sunday. And Jennie Alton grew quite accustomed to making herself comfortable for a journey of 100 miles or so among the variety of things that are piled in an express car, while the boy crowed with delight and tumbled over his father without the slightest regard for the long yellow bills that seemed so important to the messenger. Then it was such fun to fix the big trunk with a gunny sack for a cover when Charlie grew sleepy.

"That chest is meant for us to carry valuables in, and I reckon it's serving its purpose," Sam would say as he softly arranged the folded coat for the curly head, and Jennie would laugh low in delight and be perfectly willing to listen to the same tender joke very often.

Valuable! Why, all the money in all the canvas sacks in the safe wouldn't buy one curl of his golden hair! Two faces would bend above the trunk lovingly, and Jennie would caution her husband to fasten the lid up well as she thought with a shudder of the tragedy of Genevra.

It was just before Christmas when Jennie and the boy made their last trip in the express messenger's car. Sam was pretty busy, and there was hardly room for them to sit, but he piled the packages high, and when he lifted one that he thought might be a trinket or jewels or a cloak of seal he sighed a bit, wishing the gift was for Jennie. But she was well content in that pearl of great price, a good man's love, and watched her boy sleeping in the trunk with eyes full of brooding tenderness that always seems to grow more fine as the anniversary of the nativity draws near.

Suddenly a crash as of collision threw the three in the car together on the floor, with the boxes and bales tumbling around them. The lid of the trunk cracked and swung down, shutting the baby inside, but before the parents could extricate themselves they felt the car suddenly lift in the air and then plunge downward.

"Charlie!" shrieked the mother, all the prayers that a woman's heart can frame expressed in that one word. Then the engine drank from the river hissingly. The side fell away from the car, leaving a sight of a waste of waters: then blindness and silence.

A farmer and his wife stood at the edge of their acres and watched a box float in the water. It looked as though it might contain valuables, and the man secured it, to find within, smiling and rosy in sleep, a little orphan boy who said his name was "Tarlie."—Chicago Journal.

—Next Sunday will be observed as Children's Sunday at the Methodist Episcopal church. A sermon appropriate to the occasion will be preached by the pastor in the morning, and the sacrament of baptism administered. In the evening will be held the usual children's concert.

—Miss Elizabeth F. Friel died Monday morning at her home 388 Centre street, Lancaster's block. For many years Miss Friel has conducted a dressmaking establishment and has resided in Newton with her two sisters for some time. The funeral services were held at the Church of Our Lady yesterday morning.

—To insure a first class patronage the modern livery-stable keeper must be prepared to furnish his customers with up-to-date and stylish carriages, as well as the best of horses. Fully realizing this Mr. George W. Bush of the Elmwood stables has recently made some valuable additions to his rolling stock. Among these is one which bids fair to become very popular. It is an extension-top carryall equipped with pole and shafts, the Bradley coupling and rubber tires.

—Last Sunday evening Rev. Dr. Merrill began his series of four familiar talks upon Baptists at the request and under the auspices of the Young People's society of Christian Endeavor at the meeting of that organization at 6.30 p. m. His subject was "Our Church in the Definitions of Faith." The following dates and subjects are announced as follows: June 12 "Our Church in the History of Civil Liberty," June 26 "Our Church in the Developement of the Kingdom of Christ," July 3, Our Church in the Progress of Ideas."

—Store-keepers on Centre street, south of the railroad, are preparing for a flag raising which they are confident will eclipse any similiar patriotic demonstration in the city. For the past three weeks subscription papers have been actively circulated and already a substantial sum has been contributed. The exercises will probably be held the latter part of next week although no date has been announced. The plans are in charge of a committee composed of the following gentlemen: F. O. Barber, F. A. Hubbard, James Paxton, W. H. Deane and A. L. Brackett.

—Quite a vigorous protest against bicycle riding on the sidewalks has arisen among the residents of this section since Mrs. Harlow, a resident of Hunnewell terrace, became a victim of one of these careless riders, last Monday night. For some time past complaints have been made to the police, but not until this week has the matter given rise to general disscussion. The residents of the Hunnewell Hill district have been annoyed by riders who prefer the sidewalk to the street, and Monday evening's accident has caused a storm of indignation. Mrs. Harlow, accompanied by her daughter, was walking along the Hunnewell terrace on the sidewalk when a wheelman approached from behind, and without the slightest warning, bore down upon the couple. Being unable to move with sufficient rapidity to aid the ambitious rider, Mrs. Harlow was knocked down. Her face was cut and she sustained several bruises. The rider did not stop to inquire the extent of her injuries, but passed rapidly on. A good description of the man is said to be in the hands of the police. As the city ordinance prohibiting riding on the sidewalk is very strict, it is to be hoped that steps toward its enforcement will be made by the police.

—Mr. John Rochford is recovering from his recent severe illness.

—Mr. Harry Jordan of Bacon street is very seriously ill at his home.

—Miss Adams of Wesley street left this week for a visit to relatives out of town.

—A meeting of the official board of the Methodist church was held Tuesday evening.

—Next Sunday the Channing Sunday school will hold their final session before closing for the summer months.

—Hastings' studio in Sumner's block has been handsomely reappointed, and the patronage of Newton residents has greatly increased.

—The closing exercises at Miss Goodnow's private school, formerly Miss Spear's, will take place next Thursday in the Y. M. C. A. hall.

—This evening at the missionary meeting in Eliot church Miss Mary F. Bryner will speak upon the frontier needs and opportunities of the work as she has seen them.

—At the State Federation of Women's Clubs held this week at Amesbury Mrs. J. F. Frisbie, Mrs. Brown and Mrs. W. H. Blodgett of this place were among the guests.

—Mr. Paul Clifford of Hunnewell Hill has graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology this week with the degree of B. S. His thesis was entitled "The Study of a Jet Delivered by a Steam Injector."

—Tuesday evening in the chapel of Eliot church was held a basket lunch sociable which was well attended by many of the young people. The affair was under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. and proved quite successful.

—A a reception given to a number of the officers on duty at Camp Alger at the residence of Mrs. James N. Oden, Falls Church, Virginia, last Thursday evening, Miss Bertha M. Bentley of this place assisted in receiving.

—The Boston Elevated Street Railway laborers have been at work constructing a new track on Galen street north of the Watertown line. The condition of the street has made it impossible to operate the cars over the rails, calling into use those old, yet once very familiar Cambridge barges.

—Next Sunday will be devoted to the children of Eliot church, and the pews in the front of the church will be reserved, as will the pulpit platform, for their use. Bibles will be presented to the baptized children who have attained their seventh birthday, the babies will be baptized, and the primary girls and boys will sing.

—Music in Eliot church next Sunday:

Processional, "Pleasant are Thy Courts above," Gilbert
Magnificat, H. B. Day
Nunc Dimittis, H. B. Day
Anthem, "The radiant morn hath passed away," Retrocessional, "There is a blessed home," H. B. Day

Seats free.

—Mr. J. Howard Nichols has given to the town of Kingston, N. H., his native place, a handsome library. The architect was Mr. Henry Dwight of Boston. The building is constructed of stone of that vicinity, and is said to be one of the handsomest in that part of the state. The dedicatory exercises were held yesterday at which addresses were made by Mr. Nichols and Rev. W. H. Davis.

—Arthur I. Franklin of Bellevue street, having completed a course in chemistry at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was graduated this week with the degree of B. S. His thesis was "Action of Iodene of some Aliphatic amines." Mr. Lester Durant Gardiner was also among the graduates. He recently completed a course in general studies. His thesis was entitled "The Development of the Mayorality of Boston."

—The Open Air Fete to be given by the ladies of Immanuel church on June 17, afternoon and evening, should not be forgotten. Many forms of amusement have been provided and ample preparation made for a good time. Donkey and pony rides, archery, etc., will entertain the young people. Supper is served in the tent from 6 to 7 p. m. A barge will leave the corner of Elmwood and Centre streets, near the railway station, at 2.30, 3.15, 4.00, 4.45, 5.30, 6.15, 7.00, 7.45, 8.30 and 9.15 p. m. with fare at ten cents each way.

—There was a peculiar runaway accident on Washington street about 7.30 o'clock last evening, and as a result Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Webster of Beacon street, Boston, are confined to their homes suffering from injuries sustained. While Mr. Webster and his wife were driving on Washington street toward Newton, at a point about 50 feet east of Jackson road, their horse became suddenly frightened at a passing train and started to run away. Mr. Webster with strenuous efforts was abie to control the animal until a portion of the harness broke. This caused the horse to plunge with a suddenness that threw Mr. Webster from the vehicle. His wife pluckily maintained her seat while the horse dashed down the street at a rapid gait. Mr. B. E. Seward, who was passing along the sidewalk at the time, rushed into the street, and grasping the horse's bridle, was able to bring him to a full stop. Both Mr. and Mrs. Webster were taken to the house of Mrs. S. L. Bowker on Jewett street and a physician summoned. Upon examination it was found that Mr. Webster had sustained a number of bad bruises and his face was cut in several places. A broken wrist bone was the extent of Mrs. Webster's injuries. Both Mr. and Mrs. Webster are over 60 years old.

—At the home of the bride's father, Mr. Charles B. Fillebrown, 230 Bellevue street, Miss Louise Jackson Fillebrown and Mr. George McGregor Murray were married, Wednesday evening. The house was profusely decorated with flowers, ferns and palms, the banking of the mantels and the festoons of roses being especially beautiful. The verandas were converted into an extension of the parlors by being enclosed in awnings, the floors being covered with rugs. The spacious lawn was brilliantly lighted, and in all these spaces the five hundred or more guests distributed themselves in the most complete comfort. The ceremony was performed at 7 o'clock by Rev. Abel Millard of St. John's Episcopal church, Newtonville, in the presence of intimate friends of the family. The reception followed. The bride carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and wore white satin with duchesse lace and pearls, these ornaments being heirlooms. The maid of honor, Miss Minnie Murray, of Peebles, Scotland, a sister of the groom, was beautifully gowned in white muslin and carried a bouquet of white carnations. The bridesmaids were Miss M. Josephine Sherwood and Miss Frederika Jackson. They wore costumes of yellow muslin over yellow silk and carried bunches of Marguerites. Miss Clifford of the receiving party wore pink moire silk. Mr. Lewis D. Humphrey was best man and the ushers were Messrs. Frederick Plummer, C. D. Fillebrown, Geo. Quincy Hill, Clifford Kimball, Allen Jackson and N. B. Buxton, Jr. The receiving party consisted, beside the bride and groom, of Misses Clifford and Murray and Mr. C. B. Fillebrown, father of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Murray will return to Newton for a short sojourn after the wedding journey, and Sept. 1st will take up their abode in Chicago.

—Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Trowbridge leave for Wood's Holl, next week.

—Mrs. W. O. Trowbridge and family of Kenrick park left yesterday for their summer home at Magnolia.

—Rev. Edmund T. Butler has been transferred from St. Mary's, Lynn, to the Church of our Lady, where he will be assistant to Rev. M. Dolan.

—Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Hibbard will return the last of the month from Virginia, and go to their summer residence at Wood's Holl for the summer.

—Mr. Kenneth Blake of Hunnewell Hill was an usher at the commencement exercises at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology this week.

—The singing of the cantata, "The Daughter of Jairus," at the Eliot church, last Sunday evening, was listened to by a large congregation. The solos were especially well given and the concerted singing was excellent.

—Purchasers of land on Farlow hill are offerred generous terms, and all improvements are put in free of expense to buyers. If desired, will build for buyers. Now is a good time to make selections. See adv. of W. S. & F. Edmands.

—Over two hundred little folks made merry in the parlors of Eliot church, yesterday afternoon, the occasion being the annual June festival. With the Sunday school scholars this is the event of the year, and the attendance yesterday quite exceeded that of previous years. An entertainment program of unusual excellence was furnished and a supper of strawberries and ice cream added to the pleasure.

—The directors of the Newton National and Savings Banks have taken more than ordinary precautions against the entrance of thieves into the new building. With all the modern "burglar proof" appliances, midnight intruders will find it almost impossible to effect entrance, not to mention "tapping" the vaults. This week has been installed a police alarm, connecting the doors of the building and the vaults with a large gong at police station 1.

—Miss Florence Mae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Keith, of Watertown street, was married, Wednesday evening, at the First Parish church, Watertown, to Mr. Harry Otis Mayo. The bridesmaids were Miss Mina G. Evans and Miss Lillie Masters of Watertown, Miss Dora Dwelley of Arlington and Miss Mignon Dickerman of Taunton. Miss Marion Cook of Dorchester was maid of honor. The ushers were Guy B. Keith, Walter Herbert Keith, Gordon M. Keating of Quincy, Walter C. Brady of Boston, Waverley Wonson of Boston and Walter A. Perg of Boston. Miss Marguerite Brown of Newton and Raymond Keith strewed roses in the path of the bride, who was given away by her father. Mr. Percy Wallace of Beverley was best man. Rev. W. H. Savage officiated and the church was filled with guests from Newton, Watertown and Boston. A large reception at the home of the bride followed the ceremony. The entire house was thrown open and the spacious grounds were brilliantly illuminated. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mayo were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Keith and Mr. and Mrs. Emory H. Mayo. After their wedding tour Mr. and Mrs. Mayo will be at home on Walnut street, Watertown. Their new home is a gift of the groom's parents. Among the wedding gifts was a check for $1000 from the parents of the bride. The bride wore white satin, trimmed with chiffon and duchess lace, and her veil was caught up with a diamond pin, the gift of the groom. The maid of honor wore white organdie over blue silk, and two of the bridesmaids wore white over pink and two white over green silk.

SEVENTY-THIRD CLASS.

PRES. ALVAH HOVEY RETIRES AFTER 42 YEARS' ACTIVE WORK.

The 73d class in the history of the institution was graduated from Newton Theological Institute at Newton Centre, yesterday morning.

The commencement exercises were held in the First Baptist church, and were attended by more than 600 friends of the graduates and by a large number of the alumni, who were present in unusual force to bid farewell to Pres. Alvah Hovey, who retired yesterday after 42 years of work, 30 as president of the school and 12 as one of its faculty.

The address to the graduating class was delivered by Prof. Brown. The addresses by the graduates were as follows: "The Universal Brotherhood of Christianity," William Walter Bustard; "Jesus, the Prophet," Winfred Nichols Donovan; "The Pastor His Own Evangelist," Fred Arthur Robinson; "The Heroic Element in Christianity," Charles Schweikert; "The Minister and His Ideals," John Henry Trenberth; "The Preacher and Specific Political and Economical Problems," William Frederick Wilson; "Proclaiming a Person," Idell Hartson Wood; "The Christian Uses of the Lord's Day," William Hartson Woodal.

After the addresses the diplomas were presented to these members of the graduating class:

Regular department—George Richard Atha of Dorchester, William Walter Bustard of Patterson, N. J., Randell Thomas Capen of Watertown, John Henry Davis of Truro, N. S., Winfred Nichols Donovan of South Lyndeboro, N. H., Irving Judson Enslin of Somerville, Neil Edward Herman of Dartmouth, N. S., Thomas Allan Hoben of Gibson, N. B., Charles Satchell Morris of Louisville, Ky., Charles Spurgeon Nightingale of Louisville, Ky., Fred Arthur Robinson of Greenville, N. H., Charles Schweikert of New York, N. Y., Eugene Howard Stover of Blue Hill, Me., William Frederick Wilson of Somerset, Idell Hartson Wood of Boonton, N. J., William Hartson Woodal of Bainbridge, Ga.

English department—Bernard Christopher of Bear River, N. S., Henry Gratton Dockrell of Roxbury, Amaska Spaulding Putnam of West Sutton, Elmer Eugene Scates of Georgetown, Aldrich Clinton Shaw of Mt. Pleasant, N. B., John Henry Trenberth of Harrisville, R. I.

The observances of anniversary week were brought to a close yesterday afternoon with the trustees' dinner and the annual reception to the members of the graduating class.

The trustees' dinner was served at 1.30 at Bray's hall, and was attended by about 250 guests of the trustees, including contributors, members of the alumni association, faculty and visiting clergymen.

After the dinner brief addresses were made by Pres. H. A. Munroe of the alumni association, Pres. Alvah Hovey, Dr. Edward Judson of New York, Pres. Butler of Colby, Rev. R. M. Tuller of Lawrence, Rev. C. H. Bradbury of Worcester, Rev. Dr. Parshley and Rev. A. W. Smith of Newton Centre.

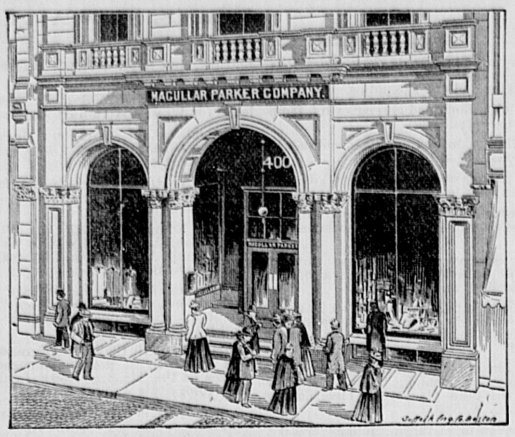

No action was taken looking toward the selection of a successor to Pres. Hovey.

After the dinner the members of the graduating class and the alumni were tendered a reception in Colby hall.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

ALDERMAN FORKNALL RECEIVES THE OATH OF OFFICE AT MONDAY EVENING'S SESSION—BOARD MEMBERS OFFICIALLY INSPECT NEW POLICE BUILDING—DO NOT LIKE LONG SESSIONS, AND WANT ALL MEMBERS TO REMAIN UNTIL ADJOURNMENT—NO USE FOR STREET RAILWAY PASSES—NOT MUCH DEBATE THOUGH SEVERAL IMPORTANT MATTERS ARE CONSIDERED.

Although a variety of business gave an added interest to Monday evening's session of the board of aldermen it was not sufficiently magnetic to keep all the members in their seats until adjournment. It was 11.20 o'clock before a motion to adjourn was made and carried, yet before 11 o'clock four of the eighteen members present, when the meeting was called to order, had left the chamber.

This seemed to displease the remaining 14, as Alderman Nagle's proposed amendment to the rules, introduced at 11.15, requiring "all members to remain in their seats until adjournment, unless excused by the chairman" was referred to the committee on rules with a hearty "yea" vote.

And there were other proceedings which will cause this to be recorded as a memorable session. Alderman Reuben Forknall of California street, Ward 1, occupied his chair for the first time since the special election, May 24. The oath of office was administered by City Clerk Kingsbury, in the capacity of a justice of the peace. It was not until a yea and a nay vote was called for on a routine order for sidewalk construction, that the new alderman-at-large was called by his official title, and that time by the city clerk.

The recently installed lighting plant, which supplies the new police building and city hall, was operated for the first time, Monday evening. For two or three hours it flickered, occasionally going out completely. This of course necessitated keeping the gas jets lighted throughout the evening. In the vicinity of the press table it was unusually dark, though after the return of the aldermen from an inspection of the new police station, the incandescents were brighter.

Another feature was the absence of prolonged debate. Only the matter of granting James Ford a permit to erect a building at the corner of Lexington street and the boulevard, called out discussion. There were four speakers on this subject, and not more than twenty minutes was consumed by them in presenting the different phases of the case.

The official inspection of the new police building at 9 o'clock, gave the board members a 50 minute rest. They were also given an opportunity to announce their position towards the electric car lines later in the evening. This they did most emphatically as when a request was introduced by Alderman Heymer suggesting that the street railways supply the members of the board with a complimentary ticket-book, nearly every member declared he would not accept it.

Just at 8 o'clock, having taken his seat on the platform, Alderman White called the board to order. Aldermen Dana, Ivy, and Hadlock were numbered among the absent. President White read the official special election returns after which Alderman Forknall was sworn in by the city clerk. Alderman Briston escorted Alderman Forknall to his seat, and President White announced that the new alderman-at-large would serve upon the same joint standing committees as the late Alderman Potter. Mr. Forknall thereby becomes a member of the committees on assessing department, ordinances, public parks and grounds, Read Fund, and street railways.

THE MAYOR'S COMMUNICATIONS.

In his communications to the board Mayor Cobb called the attention of the members to those streets situated in different parts of the city, yet bearing the same name. Referred to the highway committee.

He also recommended the board to petition for special legislation that vacancies in that body might be filled by the unanimous consent of the ward residents, instead of a special election. He did not wish to be understood as criticizing the choice of the people in the recent special election, but such elections caused considerable expense, yet were but poorly attended by voters. Under the new charter however, they were necessary. He urged the board to petition the legislature that this section might be altered. The matter was referred to the committee on legislation.

A third communication from the mayor invited the board to inspect the new police building at 9 o'clock. This was accepted.

PETITIONS.

G. A. Genther asked for permission to construct a wooden building for use as a bakery and store in Ward 3. Referred to the license committee. William Pettigrew was granted permission to construct a wooden building 40x30 for use as a carpenter shop on Prospect street, Ward 3. It will be situated 250 feet east of the old location, and will replace the old structure destroyed in a recent fire.

The board of health petitioned for the construction of a sewer on Lake avenue, Ward 5. Beferred to the sewer committee.

Marcus Morton and Andrew Wellington were appointed auctioneers.

A handful of petitions for junk licenses was presented by Alderman Whittlesey, and referred to the license committee without being read.

The petitions of H. E. Bothfeld for a sewer on Gremere road, of J. L. Kemp for a sewer on Waltham street, and F. S. Williams for a sewer on Derby street, were referred to the sewer committee.

Lowell avenue residents petitioned for concrete sidewalks and crossings on that thoroughfare. Referred.

E. T. Rice asked permission to construct a sewer in private land off Washington street. Referred to the sewer committee.

J. D. Haskell and others petitioned for a concrete crossing on Walnut street, Ward 5 Referred to the highway committee.

On the gas company's petitions for right to locate poles, and attach wires, hearings were ordered for June 16.

The petition of E. E. Hardy and others for a sewer in Central street, Ward 4, was referred to the sewer committee. E. E. Marden asked for an innholder's license to conduct the Pigeon Hill House at Riverside. License committee.

Residents of Champa avenue, Beach Hill avenue and Pearl court were referred to the street light committee on their petitions for street lights.

The petition for sidewalks and crossings in Gremere road was referred to the highway committee.

The petitions of Maria S. Murray for sidewalk on Nonantum place, of the Newton Real Estate associates for concrete sidewalks on Centre street, of J. W. Smith for a concrete crossing on Fisher avenue, and of E. D. Baldwin for edgestones on Centre place, were referred to the highway committee.

Ellis street, Upper Falls residents, asked for street lights in the vicinity of the Hemlock Gorge reservation. Alderman Chesley endeavored to have the petition granted without reference. He did not succeed, and it was referred to the street light committee.

Mr. James T. Allen in a communication to the board, claimed damages to his swimming pool at West Newton on account of the overflow of Cheesecake brook. It was referred to the highway committee.

THE MCADAMS PETITION.

J. H. McAdams, who was refused permission at the board's previous meeting to remove a building at Newton Highlands, presented a written request that the board reconsider previous action, and grant him this permission. He called the attention of the board to the fact that Alderman Lothrop had purchased an old building for little more than he (McAdams) had expended on the house in question, and had removed it to a neighborhood where buildings were supposed to cost at least $5000. He did not feel that "Alderman Lothrop should throw stones at his house." The remonstrants, he alleged, had used the newspapers to gain their end.

The reading of the petition by City Clerk Kingsbury caused a general laugh.

Alderman Lowell said he had seen the building. It was a good house, walls and floors perfectly sound, although the piazza was rotten. He favored the granting of the petition.

Alderman Lothrop thought the communication was written in insulting language, and felt it should be looked upon as such by the board members.

There was some little doubt as to what action could be taken on the communication. Some were of the opinion that it was a petition and could be granted, others looked upon it as a communication, and should be disposed of differently.

City Clerk Kingsbury coming to the rescue, said final action had been taken on Mr. McAdams former petition, and the present communication was an entirely new matter. It was at first moved that Mr. McAdams be granted leave to withdraw. Before action was taken on this it was moved the matter be referred to the license committee. There was some hesitation on this vote, and not until Alderman Lyman moved that "the communication be returned to the signer, with notice that all further communicatians from the same person and upon the same subject be couched in respectful terms" was the matter settled. This motion was unanimously carried.

CITY LAND FOR ORNAMENT.

On the strength of a petition backed by an unusually large number of signers, Alderman Whittlesey introduced a written motion to have so much of the order relating to the sale of Putnam street and eastern Felton street lots, located between Washington street and the Boston & Albany tracks, and owned by the city, rescinded. This, if recommended by the committee on public parks, means the preservation of these lots for ornamentation of the new boulevard.

It was vigorously supported by Alderman Lyman. President White said he understood the mayor had prepared deeds, and was about to sell the land. To this the Ward 5 alderman replied that he understood the mayor had withheld his sanction.

Alderman Whittlesey threatened to read the names of the petition signers, but before he carried out his threat, the matter was referred to the committee on public parks.

TRAVERSE JURORS AND FENCE-VIEWERS

J. Dexter Billings of Walnut street, and Arthur C. Mudge of Pembroke street were drawn as traverse jurors. Wilbur A. Paine, Ward 3, A. I. English, Ward 6, and E. N. Soulis, Ward 7, were appointed fence viewers.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The finance committee reported recommending additional appropriation of $1500 for furnishing the new high school; also recommending additional appropriation of $500 for carriage hire, board of aldermen.

The committee on highways reported recommending construction of concrete sidewalks, Gibbs street, Ward 6; recommending construction of concrete crosswalks on Alden street, at Centre street, Ward 6; on Commonwealth avenue, at Centre street, Ward 6; on Chestnut street, at Elliot street, Ward 5. Recommending leave to withdraw on petition for crosswalk, Temple street, at Putnam street, Ward 3, and recommending widening of Lexington street, Ward 4.

The license committee granted licenses to John Buckley to erect wooden building, Mechanic and Elliot streets, Ward 5; Karl Schug, street band; Francis Murdock to move building from Church street, Ward 7, to Waban street, Ward 1; Joshua S. Wingate, common victualler, 306 Centre street, Ward 7; and recommending leave to withdraw on petitions for licenses of Max Baker, junk; Israel Shapiro, junk; Max Meilman, junk; Benjamin Gillix, junk.

There were also majority reports recommending granting license to erect wooden building, Commonwealth avenue and Lexington street, Ward 4, by James Ford, and recommending leave to withdraw on petition for junk license for John Mullaney. All were accepted.

The public property committee reported that it was inexpedient to grant request of school committee that walls and ceilings of new high school be painted in oil.

The sewer committee reported in favor of sewer construction in Hyde street, Ward 5, Bellevue street, Ward 1, Derby street, Ward 3, Somerset road, Ward 3. Recommending leave to withdraw on petitions for sewers in new street off Ward street, Ward 6; recommending extension of time for payment of sewer assessment on E. C. Dudley and E. A. Shaw, Walnut street, Ward 6, until land is built upon; relative to change in sewer location through Bartlett estate, Ward 7.

The committee on street lights and poles reported recommending location of street lights on Grove street, Ward 4, South street, Ward 6, Adams avenue, Ward 3, Foster street, Ward 3. Recommending leave to withdraw on petition for street lights on Greenwood street, Ward 5; recommending that the New England Telegraph and Telephone Co. be granted authority to attach wires to poles on Lincoln, Hartford, and Elliot streets, Ward 5; recommending leave to withdraw on petition of New England Telegraph and Telephone Co. for pole locations on Chester street, Ward 5; Lake avenue, Wards 5 and 6; Griffin avenue, Ward 5; Lincoln street, Ward 5.

The journal committee reported the records of the last meeting correct and accurate.

AFTER THE INSPECTION of the new police station, an account of which will be found in another column, the board members returned to their seats in the aldermanic chamber, and the business of the evening was resumed. This was 9.50 o'clock.

The street railway committee had two reports to present. The first recommended that the Newton & Boston Street Railway Co. be granted leave to withdraw on its petition for a turnout on Centre street. This was accepted. The second recommended that the Newton street railway, and the Wellesley & Boston street railway be given until October 1st, 1898, to make the change of tracks on Washington street near the truck house.

In response to question of Alderman Nagle, Alderman Baily explained that the heavy travel at the present time of year made it inexpedient. Also that the officials had not received the notice in time to make the proposed changes before June 1st, although it was no fault of any city official. The alderman went on to explain that special rails would have to be constructed for this change, and as it required considerable time it was thought best to allow the street railway companies for this and the other reasons, until Oct 1st. The report was accepted.

NO USE FOR PASSES.

It is doubtful if Alderman Heymer expected such a storm of righteous indignation when he presented a request suggesting that the street railway companies furnish the board members with complimentary tickets on the different lines. There was, however, quite a feeling manifest, and the usually modest alderman appeared rather disturbed.

Having presented his request he endorsed in a few remarks, saying the courtesy of complimentary tickets had been extended by other lines to the aldermen of other cities, and the plan might well be adopted in Newton.

Hardly had he taken his seat when Alderman Baily had declared that if the vote was passed he should continue to pay a 5 cent fare.

Alderman Nagle said he thought of no better speech than "ditto."

President White said he wished to go on record as not wishing any passes from any street railway.

This was substantially the position of Alderman Whittlesey, whose remarks, however, were not so brief.

Alderman Heymer said he had no special aim in presenting the resolve. He had done it at the suggestion of a city government member. A vote was taken and it failed to pass.

ORDERS

were adopted authorizing the construction of concrete sidewalks on Alden street at Centre street, Ward 6; Commonwealth avenue, (east side), at Centre street, Ward 6; Chestnut and Elliot streets, Ward 5; authorizing construction of concrete side walk, Gibbs street, Ward 6; authorizing location of street lights on Grove street, Ward 4; South street, Ward 6; Foster street, Ward 3; granting New England Telegraph and Telephone Co. right to attach wires to poles on Lincoln, Hartford and Elliot streets, Ward 5; assigning hearing June 20, upon widening of portion of Lexington street, Ward 4.

The Boston Catholic Cemetery Association was granted use of land in Ward 6 for burial purposes.

It was voted to place the flags on all public buildings and close city hall on Bunker Hill day.

A hearing on the widening of Lexington street was ordered for June 20.

The orders discontinuing land taken for sewer purposes through Bartlett estate, Ward 7; assigning hearing June 6, upon taking land for sewer purposes in Bartlett estate, Ward 7; taking land for sewer purposes in private land through Bartlett estate, Ward 7; Farlow Hill, roads No. 1, 23 and 5, were laid on the table.

These orders were then adopted: Granting Newton Street Railway Co. until Oct. 1, in which to change location of tracks on Washington street, near truck house; granting Wellesley & Boston Street Railway Co. until Oct. 1, in which to change location of tracks on Washington street, near truck house.

These orders were then adopted: Authorizing sewer construction in Bellevue street, Ward 1; Derby street, Ward 3; Somerset road, Ward 3; Hyde street, Ward 5; Farlow Hill road, No. 1, 23 and 5, Ward 7.

The ordinance recently amended, which provides that no street of less than 40 feet in width shall be accepted unless in use at least twenty-four years, was passed to be enrolled without discussion.

THE FORD BUILDING

was again the bone of contention for nearly half an hour.

Alderman Whittlesey moved it be granted, but Alderman Alvord was opposed. The latter was first to debate the merits and demerits of the question. He presented much of the argument that had been heard at previous meetings of former city governments. His grounds were chiefly that the building would prove an architectural blot. He did not agree with Mr. Ford's attorney that the matter should be looked upon solely as a fire risk.

Alderman Whittlesey was of a different opinion. He quoted the statutes and the record of the general court to sustain his point.

Alderman Knowlton presented substanial reasons why the people of Auburndale objected to the proposed building. He cited the Pettigrew fire, and gave as his opinion that if the petition was granted many others would ask the right to erect similar buildings on the boulevard.

Alderman Lyman was opposed. He referred to the boulevard as enhancing the property in that part of Auburndale, and thought the ordinances were framed to cover that. The final clause of the building ordinances which reads "unless permission is granted by the board of aldermen," he characterized as a political tail-feather.

A vote was taken and it was decided not to grant Mr. Ford's petition by a vote of 11 to 3. For the the order appropriating $500 for carriage hire for board of aldermen might have been lost had it not been that one member decided to change his vote. This order required a two-thirds vote. There were but 14 members present, and the fact that there was one dissenting voice was as good as defeating the order. Alderman Hunt voted in the negative, but later changed his vote.

Alderman Nagle then presented an amendment to the rules, which provides substantially that no member shall leave his seat until adjournment, unless excused by the president of the board.

This Aldermen Hobart and Baily endorsed very heartily. A vote was taken and it was unanimously carried, the proposed amendment being referred to the committee on rules.

It was here that Alderman Nagle displayed his knowledge of parliamentary law. The order calling for $1500 for additional furnishings at the High school was presented. It required a two-thirds vote. Before anything further was said Alderman Whittlesey announced his intention of voting against it. This of course meant its defeat.

Clerk Kingsbury started to call the yea and nay vote. Alderman Nagle jumped to his feet and moved the matter be laid on the table.

"This would be out of order," said President White. Col. Kingsbury began to call the names again when Alderman Nagle moved the board adjourn. This being perfectly in order a vote was taken. It resulted in a tie, and went to the president. "I will settle this gentlemen," said President White, "by declaring this board adjourned."

The matter of the additional $1500 appropriation will probably come up at next meeting, together with the report of the finance committee of the expenditure of the $2,564.74 dog tax. This letter matter has been hanging fire for several weeks.

Adjourned at 11.20 o'clock.

NEWTON CLUB.

Bright lights, sweet strains of music, and a perfect night combined to make the second in the series of outdoor concerts on the club house grounds Wednesday evening a delightful success, which may well make the committee feel proud of its work. The concert was well attended by the club members and their guests, and a musical program of rare excellence was rendered by the Cadet band. During the evening light refreshments were served at small tables scattered about the grounds. The electric light effects were even more beautiful than those displayed on the evening of the first concert.

REAL ESTATE.

J. L. Nason & Co. report the sale of the Dr. H. M. Field estate, at Newton, to M. W. Stimson, president of the Union Bank for Savings of Los. Angeles, Cal. The estate consists of a large house, a stable and about 40,000 square feet of land on the corner of Franklin and Eldridge streets. The assessed value is $18,000. Mr. Stimson buys for a permanent home. Leaving Mr. Nason's office Saturday afternoon for California, where he is to be given a reception by his many friends, he will immediately close up his affairs there and return to his new home.

SINGULAR STATEMENT.

From Mrs. Rank to Mrs. Pinkham.

The following letter to Mrs. Pinkham from Mrs. M. RANK, No. 2,354 East Susquehanna Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., is a remarkable statement of relief from utter discouragement. She says:

"I never can find words with which to thank you for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me.

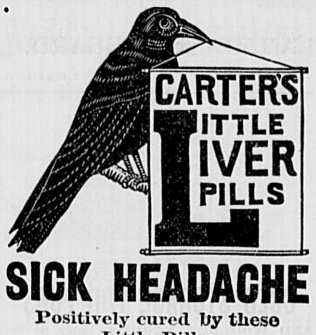

"Some years ago I had womb trouble and doctored for a long time, not seeing any improvement. At times I would feel well enough, and other times was miserable. So it went on until last October, I felt something terrible creeping over me, I knew not what, but kept getting worse. I can hardly explain my feelings at that time. I was so depressed in spirits that I did not wish to live, although I had everything to live for. Had hysteria, was very nervous; could not sleep and was not safe to be left alone.

"Indeed, I thought I would lose my mind. No one knows what I endured.

"I continued this way until the last of February, when I saw in a paper a testimonial of a lady whose case was similar to mine, and who had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I determined to try it, and felt better after the first dose. I continued taking it, and to-day am a well woman, and can say from my heart, 'Thank God for such a medicine.'"

Mrs. Pinkham invites all suffering women to write to her at Lynn, Mass., for advice. All such letters are seen and answered by women only.

"Wonderfully soothing, healing to the skin is Comfort Powder for babies or grown folks," says Sadie A. Sims, of Youngstown, Ohio. It is a perfect powder for toilet, nursery, or sick-room. Trained nurses are using it almost universally. 25c. at Druggists.

LASELL'S COMMENCEMENT.

THE GRADUATION EXERCISES ATTRACT MANY FRIENDS OF THE SENIORS—REV. DR. KENDIG DELIVERS THE BACCALAUREATE.

The annual baccalaureate sermon before the graduating class of Lasell seminary was delivered Sunday morning by the Rev. A. B. Kendig, D. D., of Brookline, in the Auburndale Congregational church. The 28 graduates were arranged in the familiar Oxford cap and gown. The Methodist and Congregational societies were present.

The preacher took as the subject for his address 2 Kings 5; and said:

The healing of Naaman forms one of the most important events in the life of Elisha. The character of the little Israelite maiden is generally looked upon as the least important of the story. What can a little thing do? So pervasive has become this question that the little ones seek to hide themselves and to doubt their own power of accomplishment.

This little maid was suddenly and ruthlessly torn away from her own country to become a waif at the foot of the social scale. Her condition offered little incentive to noble action and small chance of success, but she proved herself a heroine by yielding to as noble an impulse as ever stirred human heart.

"Lay your ear close to the earth and listen at the very root of things. Thus only can you hear the strains of divine harmony. By observation and thought you may strike the tide which will carry you to success. Have respect for the burdens of life, and give the men and women that carry them the right of way. Be a lady if nothing more. This does not mean the wife of a lord.

"Self-love is the mother of much of our sorrow and discontent, and no grace is more admirable than a fellow-feeling, which brings us close to all. Compel yourselves to be tender, pitiful, generous and heedful.

"How sad it is to see thousands waiting for great opportunities, which never come. Be content to do small things, and the aggregate will sum up enormous results. Do the work that is nearest, and thus be fitted to overcome the greater work, which is beyond. Consider not your unfitness, but spring to the work, and try."

Class Day Exercises.

Lasell put on a dress of green and white Monday evening in honor of 98's class night. The large hall in which the exercises were held was draped with streamers of these shades, the colors of the class, and masses of white roses and maidenhair fern, the class flowers, were everywhere in evidence. Even the long piazzas of the seminary building were decorated with similar plants.

The exercises of class night were attended by more than 400 friends and relatives of the 26 demure maidens of the senior class, who, in all the dignity of mortar board caps and oxford gowns, occupied the platform and formed the objective point for all eyes.

It was 7.45 when the 26 seniors entered the hall in single file, each shielded from the rays of the electric light by a sunshade of green and white. Forming a circle on the platform, the exercises were opened with the singing of the class song, written by Miss Daisy Aull and Miss Mary Johnson, with music by Miss Martha Baker.

The company was welcomed in behalf of the class by Miss Emma H. Goll, its president. A roll call of the members by Miss Daisy H. Aull followed, in which the foibles of each member were brought forward for the edification of the audience, and Lasell's happenings were touched upon in a delicious vein of humor.

Miss Mary Johnson followed with "A Word to the Would-be Wise," in which much wise and witty advice was given to the underclass girls and the successors of 98 at Lasell.

A musical interlude in the shape of a finely executed violin duet by Miss Ada Cadmus and Miss Elizabeth Allen, with accompaniment by Miss Martha Baker, supplied a pleasing variation.

Miss Luella Houghton tendered some advice to the undergraduates, based on past experiences at Lasell, and Miss Jane Myrick threw light on some of the dark places in the history of the class in "Notes by the Wayside."

The class prophecy was delivered by Miss Edith Grant in the capacity of a gifted palmist. Each character as presented by the prophet was thrown upon a screen by a stereopticon, and each of the many excellent hits was greeted with rounds of applause by the underclass girls. As foretold by the prophet, the class is to produce a soldier, a nurse, basketball expert, author, matron of an orphanage, a professor of psychology, a society belle, an explorer, a golfer, a dress reformer, a bride, a photographer, a lawyer, an elocutionist, a circus freak, an actress, a drummer, a geneologist, a paper girl, a stump speaker, a cook, a sculptor, a housekeeper, and a patriot. First of all upon the screen was thrown the picture of the honorary member of the class, Pres. McKinley, which was greeted with prolonged applause. Then there was another burst of handclapping as the speaker promised the president the help of 98 in ending the war.

Undergraduates and members of the junior class in particular came in for a good-natured "roasting," while members of the faculty and Lasell institutions in general were handled without gloves by Miss Kittiebel Chapman, as she presented tokens of the esteem of 98. The exercises in the hall closed with goodby by Miss Emma H. Goll.

An immediate adjournment was had to the lawn, where, in spite of a few drops of rain, the program was carried out with full success. The grounds were brilliant with electric lights, arranged in effective clusters against a background of green foliage, while the entire front of the seminary building was bright with scores of colored globes.

Escorted by a score of juniors bearing torches, the members of the senior class, Helen G. Abbott, Elizabeth C. Allen, Anna R. Ampt, Martha A. Baker, Alice P. Burnham, Ada Cadmus, Kittiebel Chapman, Ruth Crandell, Clifford B. Dasher, Clara H. Davis, May W. Emery, Emma H. Goll, Edith T. Grant, Sophie E. Hall, Luella Houghton, Mary P. Johnson, Caroline M. Kendall, Alice A. Kimball, Ruth Kimball, Annie Maude Mayo, Ruth K. Merriam, Jennie Myrick, Emma E. Smith and Carrie Virginia, made the rounds of the grounds and visited the spots dear to the undergraduate heart.

At the class tree a halt was called and the final exercises of the evening were held. The opening address was delivered by Miss Ruth Kimball on "Lasell Alms." Miss Clifford Dasher followed with a presentation to the seminary, in behalf of the graduating class, of a substantial check to be used in erecting a meeting and music hall on the seminary grounds.

Next followed the consigning of school day relics and cast aside books to the flames, to which were added locks of hair by nearly every member of the class.

Commencement Day.

Commencement day exercises of Lasell Seminary were held in the Congregational church, Auburndale, Wednesday morning, in the presence of a throng of parents and friends of the students. The day marked the close of the 44th year's work at the institution.

The senior class, headed by its president, Miss Emma H. Goll of Chicago, appeared at 11 o'clock. The students marched down the aisle and took their places in the front seats. On the platform were the pastor of the church, the Rev. C. M. Southgate, Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, Principal C. C. Bragdon, and the members of the faculty.

Prayer was offered by the Rev. Mr. Southgate, followed by the commencement address, delivered by Mrs. Livermore; subject, "A Dream of Tomorrow."

After the address came the presentation of diplomas, by Principal Bragdon to the following graduates:

Helen G. Abbott, Dexter, Me.; Elizabeth C. Allen, Omaha, Neb.; Anna R. Ampt, Wyoming, O.; Emile Anderson, Whitewater, Wis., Emma L. Aull, Kansas City, Mo.; Martha A. Baker, Port Antonio, Jamaica; Alice P. Burnham, Manchester, N. H.; Ada Cadmus, East Orange, N. J.; Kittiebel Chapman, Elgin, Ill.; Ruth Crandall, Auburndale, Mass.; Clifford B. Dash, Savannah, Ga.; Clara H. Davis, Wyoming, O.; May W. Emery, Waltham, Mass.; Emma H. Goll, Chicago, Ill.; Edith T. Grant, New York city; Sophie E. Hall, Westport, N. Y.; Luella Houghton, Red Oak, Ia.; Mary P. Johnson, Manchester, N. H.; Caroline M. Kendall, Leominister, Mass.; Alice A. Kimball, Presque Isle, Me.; Ruby R. Kimball, Clarinda, Ia.; Annie M. Mayo, Foxcroft, Me.; Ruth K. Merriam, Meriden, Ct.; Jennie Myrick, Yarmouthport, Mass.; Emma E. Smith, Chicago, Ill.; Carrie V. Wilson, Ubana, O.; graduate in vocal music, Martha A. Baker, Port Antonio, Jam.

Certificates in bookkeeping, cooking and prizes for excellence in military drill were also awarded.

After the exercises of the morning the guests were invited to the annual banquet on the lawn at the school. There, after refreshments had been dispensed, the afternoon festivities were begun.

They took on the nature of a silver jubilee to two of Lasell's teachers, who have been instructing the girls for 25 years.

The Rev. C. W. Cushing, D. D., predecessor of Prof. Bragdon, who was principal of the school 25 years ago, was in the chair, and in his address gave reminiscences of the early days when Lasell was but an infant. Dr. Cushing had charge of the school for a decade, and during his administration Miss Angeline C. Blaisdell, whose silver anniversary was observed Tuesday, together with that of Miss Caroline A. Carpenter, began work at Lasell. She was valedictorian of the class of '67. After her graduation Miss Blaisdell studied with Harvard professors and in Europe.

Prof. Bragdon also praised the gnests of the afternoon, and told of the excellent qualities of Miss Blaisdell and Miss Carpenter.

Mr. S. E. Goldstein of the Boston Symphony orchestra contributed a violin solo, and Mrs. L. P. Morrill sang, being accompanied by Mr. J. A. Hills.

A business meeting of the alumnae was held after the exercises in the chapel, at which the following officers were elected:

Pres., Mrs. Nellie F. Conant, '84; vice president, Miss Edith Gale, '89; sec'y, Miss Jessie J. McMillan, '82; treas., Miss Nellie M. Richards, '93; executive committee, Miss Nellie P. Draper, class '84; Mrs. Laura D. Sampson, '57; Miss Josephine P. Chandler, '96; Miss Mary W. Emery, '98; Miss Jennie Arnold, '93; midwinter committee, Miss Martha Lucas, Miss Nellie Richards, Miss Carlos Cushing, Miss Ruth Crandall, Mrs. S. W. Thayer; permanent committee on proposed building to be called Carpenter Hall, Mrs. Lizzie W. Pierce, Miss Martha B. Lucas, Miss A. L. E. Kimball, Mrs. Annie K. Pierce and Miss Edith Gale.

Lasell Memorial Hall.

One of the interesting announcements of commencement week at Lasell is that of the customary gift by the graduating class to the institution. The class of '98 will surpass the gifts of all its predecessors, and will present the seminary with a memorial hall.

The building will correspond in architecture to the other seminary buildings, and will stand at the northwest corner of the main building, with which it will be connected by a covered passageway. It is to be three stories high. On the first floor there will be two large rooms for the seminary clubs including the Lasellia Club and the S. D. Society. A chapel and an assembly hall, the latter fitted with a stage and dressing rooms, will occupy the second floor. The third floor will be used as an art gallery. The cost will be about $25,000, of which the larger part will be borne by the members of the graduating class and the remainder by former pupils.

NEWTON UPPER FALLS.

—Miss Kittie Stuart has been in Gloucester this week.

—Miss Mamie Leary is the guest of friends here this week.

—Mr. Terrance P. Leonard has left the employ of O. G. Billings.

—Miss Amanda Hillegass has been visiting relatives on Cottage street.

—Mr. Lawrence Farrell of this place has enlisted in the U. S marines.

—Wm. Hearn of the U. S. Marines has been in town this week visiting relatives.

—Mr. William Hopkins is soon to remove from Oak street to Champa avenue.

—The Gamewell Fire Alarm company has begun operating on 45-hour time this week.

—The main office of the Newton Rubber Co., has been removed from Boston to this place.

—Miss Alice White has been visiting friends in Gloucester. She returned home this week.

—The steam roller has been at work on Chestnut street between Winter street and depot square this week.

—Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fontenay of Mechanic street are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter.

—Mr. Walter Temperley of Worsley, England, is visiting his father, Mr. Thomas Temperley of Chestnut street.

—Mr. Linius Clegg and family have removed from Thurston road to Dr. McOwen's house on Chestnut street.

—The young men of Needham are organizing a baseball team, which it is expected will make a great record for itself.

—Rev. W. H. Davis, pastor of the Baptist church, was graduated from the Newton Theological Seminary this week.

—"Holiness on the Bells of the Horses" will be the subject of the pastor's sermon at the Baptist church next Sunday evening.

Principal's Reception.

One of the most delightful in the series of social events of commencement week at Lasell was the reception given Tuesday evening to the members of the graduating class by the principal.

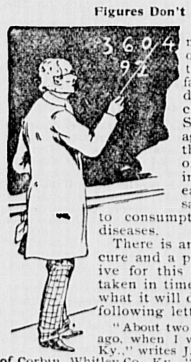

The affair was largely attended by the visitors of commencement week, and was a decided social success. The entire lower floor of the building was thrown open to the guests, and for the time seminary discipline was relaxed.

The reception and refreshment rooms were prettily draped with festoons of red, white and blue bunting, and the floral decorations were in the same patriotic shades.

Principal and Mrs. Bragdon received informally from 8 to 10, and were assisted by Miss Emma H. Goll, president of the senior class. During the reception hours an orchestra stationed on the piazza rendered popular airs.

Among the guests were Capt. and Mrs. L. D. Baker, Port Antonio, Jam; Mrs. Eva Kimball, Clarinda, Ia; Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Grant, New York; Mrs. D. W. Grubbs, Indianapolis; Mrs. Emma Goll, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Irving Cadmus, East Orange; Mr. George C. Meriam, Meriden, Conn; Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Chapman, Elgin, Ill.; Mrs. D. B. Dasher, Savannah, Ga.; Mrs. George N. Emery, Waltham; Mrs. H. M. Kendrick, Leominster; Mrs. Isaac Myrick, Jamaica Plain; Rev. and Mrs. E. D. Burr, Brookline; C. Lothrop Higgins, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Burnham, Manchester, N. H.; Mr. and Mrs. F. K. Winslow, New York; Mr. and Mrs. A. A. White, Cambridge; Dr. W. N. Emery, Waltham; Mrs. C. E. Figures Don't Lie.

It doesn't take much knowledge of mathematics to figure out the facts about that dread disease—consumption. Statisticians long ago demonstrated that one-seventh of all the deaths in Christendom each year may be safely attributed to consumption and allied diseases.

There is an almost certain cure and a positive preventive for this fatal disease if taken in time. The story of what it will do is told in the following letter:

"About two and a half years ago, when I was at Flat Lick, Ky.," writes J. W. Jordan, Esq., of Corbin, Whitley Co., Ky., "I was taken with severe pains in the chest, after which I began to spit up blood and was also troubled with nightsweats. I was so short winded that I could hardly walk half a mile at once, and if I got the least bit wearied, I would have an attack of phthisic (asthma) and almost die for about two or three days. I concluded to try Dr. R. V. Pierce, and I related my case to him. He wrote me that I should take his 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I began using it and used about six bottles. I began to see that it was helping me, so concluded to continue its use. I did so and have improved both in strength and in weight. I have not had the phthisic, nor spit up any blood since last spring."

This great remedy—Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—cures 98 per cent. of all laryngial, bronchial, throat and kindred affections which, if neglected lead up to consumption. It strengthens the stomach and makes the appetite keen and hearty. It invigorates the liver and aids the natural processes of secretion and excretion. It makes the assimilation of the food perfect. It is the great blood-maker and flesh-builder. Honest dealers will not urge you to take a substitute said to be "just as good."

Send for Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. FREE. Enclose 21 one-cent stamps to cover mailing only, to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., for a paper-covered copy. Cloth binding ten cents extra. It is a thousand page book with over seven hundred illustrations; formerly sold for $1.50. For limited time can be had for cost of mailing.

WHEELS AS BAGGAGE.

Sterling Elliott had another sparring match with the railroad attorneys before the railroad commissioners, on Tuesday, on the proposition that only 10 cents shall be charged for the transportation of wheels, the 10 cents being for the trouble of handling, the wheels being considered as baggage.

Mr. W. H. Coolidge, representing the Boston & Maine, is reported as making the rather astonishing statement that his road considered the bicycle trade a nuisance, and if Mr. Elliott would recommend bicyclists to keep off that road, the company would consider it a favor. This is probably a misrepresentation, for not even the Boston & Maine could afford to take such a position as that, when every one rides a wheel, and in these times when the margin between profit and loss is so narrow. A railroad that did not carry wheels would of course not carry the riders, and judging from the stacks of wheels to be seen at the Union station, nearly every day, the Boston & Maine receipts from the bicycle trade must mount up into the thousands every season. With the sharp competition of the electric railways, the steam companies need all the revenue they can get, and railroads that do not cater to the bicycle trade will get left.

The trouble with the carrying of wheels is that some railroads have got into the habit of thinking that people have got to patronize them anyway, and therefore they need not do anything for the accommodation of the public that will be at all inconvenient. As suburban passengers do not carry any baggage as a rule, the railroads think they have lost the right to carry any, and so they only put on a small closet at one end of a passenger car, which a half dozen trunks or wheels would fill to overflowing, and both are a nuisance, in the opinion of some companies. Besides wheels can not be thrown from a car, and smashed round generally, as is the case with trunks, for the wheelman may belong to the L. A. W., and there will be damages to pay. Of course it would be so much nicer for the companies, if they could have all the passengers their cars would hold, half of them without seats, and none of them with any baggage, and it must make managers weep to think some people are so unreasonable as to carry a trunk or a wheel with them. If they could only get a law passed making it a criminal offense to do these things how happy the managers would be.

Still, the wise man is the one who adapts his business to the conditions that prevail, and does not utterly refuse to accommodate his customers. Railroads, even if they own legislatures, can not prosper without passengers. There are railroads, enterprising enough to make some provision for the carrying of baggage, whether trunks or wheels, and they find that this disposition to accommodate the public is a paying investment. The railroad companies centreing in Boston would find such a course profitable, instead of sitting down and weeping because people will carry baggage when they travel. They should think that if their customers did not carry such baggage they might not travel. Besides there are inventions for fitting up baggage cars, so that wheels can be carried without any damage to the wheels or very much trouble to the railroads, and they are quite inexpensive.

As we said at the beginning, we do not think Mr. Coolidge correctly represented the Boston & Maine, in his statement, it is only a way lawyers have of putting their side of the case strongly, to impress the jury, or the railroad commissioners, without any idea of their words being taken seriously outside of the court room.

THE aldermen who have wasted so much of the time of the board by their desire to air their views will cost the city $500, as the extra appropriation for carriages has passed. It nearly failed on Monday night, owing to so many of the members having got tired out and gone home. There is really no excuse for this extra appropriation, as in other years the appropriation has lasted the whole year. Chairman White is too good natured, and ought to pull the reins a little tighter. If the meetings were called to order promptly at the appointed time, and the members confined strictly to the business in hand, a couple of hours would be sufficient for any session. The strictest presiding officer the city ever had was Mayor Hibbard, who always called the meeting to order on the minute appointed, whether the clerk and the members were ready or not, and any speaker who was wandering from the question in hand always got a call-down, with the result that nine o'clock generally saw the board adjourned, midnight sessions were almost unknown, and the carriage appropriation was hardly touched upon. Five hundred dollars is not a great sum, but it is exceeding the appropriations, something that should never be done unless in case of some unforseen calamity, and if the appropriations are exceeded in this case, doubtless they will be in others, and the city is in no condition for useless and unnecessary expenditures. The aldermen should really reform in this matter, and members are perfectly justified in leaving in time to catch the last train or electric. After that time those who are fond of midnight walks could remain and orate to their hearts' content.

IN view of the fact that Alderman Heymer, in presenting the request to the street railway companies operating in Newton that they accord the privilege of free transportation to members of the city government, which he asked the Board of Alderman to adopt at the meeting last Monday evening, created the impression that he did so at the instigation or suggestion of some of the members of the city government holding honored positions, we are informed authoritatively that Mayor Cobb has written to the alderman asking for an explanation, as he considers such a statement to be a reflection upon the officials of the city generally. We understand that in reply Alderman Heymer states that the idea occurred to him originally while talking with a friend from another city, who enjoyed such privilege, as he termed it, and that he merely consulted a member of one of the boards of the city and informed him that he intended putting in such a request, and was advised by this official as to its form, but that he did not intend to convey the idea that he made the motion at the request of any person whatsoever, as it was wholly upon his own responsibility. He states further that such an action on the part of the railway companies would in no way benefit him, as the electrics do not extend to his part of the city, but that he thought favorably of the idea when it was first brought to his attention, and knowing the custom to be in vogue in other cities thought a similar courtesy might be extended to the Newton city government, and for that reason presented the request; he now thinks that the Board did right in refusing to adopt it.

THE late Jonathan A. Lane of Boston was a leader of the Boston merchants and in fact of about every worthy movement in Boston, and the tributes paid him since his death are genuine and heartfelt. He was honorable in every relation of life, and especially honorable in his politics. Although an earnest Republican he was not of that class which believes that the end justifies any means, and he was always in favor of the best possible in politics. His disinterestedness is shown by a story told by the Herald:

"His most recent public effort has hardly had the prominence it merited in the tributes that have been paid his memory. It was an attempt to reform the consular service of the government. In this he engaged with great earnestness, attempting to put it upon a business basis, and to take the consular offices out of the ranks of political prizes. To that end he visited Washington, and labored at personal sacrifice to induce the national administration to aid him. He came home heart-sick, to use his own expression. "Not even one consulship could I obtain," said he, "in which to try the experiment of business methods that I sought to have introduced. All the consulships had been promised away to satisfy the claims of hungry partisans." Mr. Lane felt this disappointment keenly. He yet hoped for better things in the future, however.

This was one secret of his great influence, he was always hopeful and his long life was fruitful in good works.

IT is rather early in the season but there are evidences here and there of movements in favor of new candidates for county sheriff, all put forth on the plea of Sheriff Cushings' ill health. Those who trust to this will be disappointed, however, as Sheriff Cushing was never in better health than at present, and his excellent administration of his office will make it difficult for any one to defeat him, as long as he remains in the field. The rumors that he will not be a candidate, this year, which have been so industriously circulated, have no more foundation than the Spanish war despatches, as Mr. Cushing is a candidate, and he has filled the office so ably, that there is no doubt of his being elected for another term.

THE mere fact that a provision for the taxation of the trusts crept into the war revenue bill has excited general surprise and much adverse comment. It is said to be unconstitutional by the able lawyers employed by the trusts, and is generally frowned upon. Trusts exist for the purpose of taxing the people, and the laws have been carefully framed with that end in view, and hence this proposition to tax the sugar and standard oil trusts is denounced as socialistic and revolutionary.

THE cashier of the Custom House at Philadelphia returns his pension to the government, because his salary adequately supports him. This is the more remarkable, as coming from a Pennsylvania man, but it is evidently an exceptional case. Pensioners with large salaries and incomes would do well to ponder upon this example.

NEWTON is honored by the Prohibitionists in having one of its prominent citizens nominated for secretary of the Commonwealth. Mr. H. A. Inman of West Newton would certainly fill the office with credit, but we fear that there is not much chance of his being elected.

ON BEACON HILL.

(Special Legislative Correspondence.)

Beacon Hill, June 8.

The house having by a tie vote refused to admit the Boston aldermanic bill there seems to be no good reason why the general court should longer hesitate about getting through and going home. The evidence seems to be against the notion that there was any desire to perpetuate the Boston aldermanic trust, but the vote was really an expression of the sentiment of weariness which oppressed the members. This has been a particularly uninteresting year, and the matters yet undecided are really more uninteresting than most of those hitherto considered, so that all hands may be excused for feeling tired.

The monotony was broken yesterday by a delightful sail down the Merrimac, at the invitation of Senator George and Representative Hoyt. With the exception of a trip of the senate to Lowell last week, which I am told Senator Harwood appeared to particularly enjoy, there has been little relaxation this year, and the 300 members and attaches of the legislature therefore made the most of the opportunity of yesterday. All the Newton members were there, and the last I saw of any of them, Representative Pickard and Correspondent Bridgman were making a big break from the special as it entered the Union Station, to catch the next train to Auburndale.

The senate has finally engrossed a bill to provide for an addition of $500 annually to the compensation of the assistant register of probate for Middlesex county.

There has been a funny contest, which seems to be still unsettled, over the question of whether the metropolitan and other parks and boulevards shall be disfigured by advertisements. This bill was killed by the senate, though Senator Harwood and others made strong pleas in its behalf, but Senator Roberts moved a reconsideration, which is still pending.

The senator has also favored a resolve to pay $15,000 to the Women's Charity Club for the purpose of cancelling the mortgage on its hospital in Brookline. The resolve was opposed by some of the senators on the ground that it was against public policy to pay money for so distinctively private an enterprise; but the argument of its friends was that the work was one of the most deserving of charities, and that therefore it should be helped. The bill was substituted for an adverse report.

The senate calendar is now a document of some six pages, while the house calendar has about two, and therefore it is claimed that the house is waiting for the senate. But the senate as a rule gets through its calendar, which seems to show that the house has been dilatory in sending stuff along to it.

The two big questions which are to occupy attention from now on are the election laws codification and the Torrens land transfer bill. The codification is altogether too big a thing to be discussed in the closing hours. The land transfer bill provides for a new system of authenticating titles, through a court which is to be established, and for a payment of a small percentage by every owner of land, which will result in its insurance by the Commonwealth, so that the title is defended thereafter, for all time, and then for a entry upon the record of every transfer, suit, attachment, mortgage or other incident affecting the title, in such a way that the interesting process known as searching titles will be a thing of the past. The only opposition to this bill comes from the younger class of attorneys, who add materially to their income by this work of title searching, and the title insurance interest, which objects to the state going into competition with it. It is evident that neither can long hinder the enactment of a measure so much desired by business men, and that eventually the bill will become a law. Whether the lateness of the session will cause its reference to the next general court is an open question.

This bill, like the codification, it is expected the legislature will take on trust. It is claimed that a commissioner, Alfred Hemenway, and the judiciary committees, have fully considered the first, and the statute codification commissioners and the committee on election laws the second. But there is always somebody in one or both houses who is not so willing to let others legislate for him, and who will offer amendments. This may cause both to go over to next year.

The committee on rules was against the immediate consideration of the bill to transfer the Boston Normal school to the state, to which I referred last week, so it went over to the next general court. The indications are that it will never become a law, owing to the opposition the proposition created by the graduates of the school and many others interested in its work.

The street railway bill is still pending, the senate not having yet given it a reading. It is a very important measure, and Senator Irwin may have trouble in getting it along as fast as he would like. However, the result in the house indicates that it has too many good friends in the municipalities and elsewhere to suffer defeat.

Mr. Hayward and his associates have been spending a good deal of time lately over a bill to provide for the payment of state aid to the families of soldiers who have enlisted in the Spanish war, and also to give state pay to the volunteers. The latter will be $7 a month in addition to the $13 received from the government, and the state aid is to a limit of $12 a month. A big appropriation accompanies the bill, which will as to the state pay cos $50,000 monthly, while the state aid will cost an unknown amount. It was $750,000 last year on account of the civil war. MANN.

The Continental Limited is a high-class name and requires a high-class train to carry it fittingly. The Fitchburg R. R. runs the train from Boston at 9.30 a. m., and is worthy of the name.

Twenty-eight hours to Chicago and thirty-two hours to St. Louis via the Fitchburg R. R. Continental Limited; a high-class train from Boston daily, excepting Sunday, at 9.30 a. m.

EXPRESS SATISFACTION.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN FEEL THE APPROPRIATION FOR REMODELING THE PEIRCE SCHOOL BUILDING AT WEST NEWTON WAS WISELY EXPENDED—ARE GRATIFIED WITH NEW POLICE QUARTERS.

That the board of aldermen are thoroughly satisfied with the expenditure of the $3500 appropriated for remodeling the old Pierce school building at West Newton, no one who accompanied them on the official inspection Monday evening, has the least doubt.

Headed by Mayor Cobb, President Thos. White with eighteen fellow board-members, the members of the board of health and about twenty city officials, left City Hall, at 9 o'clock, Monday evening, to make a tour of the new police building.

The new lighting plant was in full operation, and all the new appointments were shown at best advantage. Chief Randlett of the fire department explained the working of the signal systems, Chief of Police Tarbox told of his duties and those of his command. The police matron, Mrs. Mason, had her cosy room on the third floor, tastefully decorated with flowers, that the board might see what care female prisoners receive. Constable Laffie and Clerk Whittlesey pointed out the benefits of the new court room, while John Gallagher and Thomas Kinchela by being confined in cells 1 and 2 respectively, for drunkeness, showed "how it was to be locked up in the new cage cells."

Nor was this all, for enjoying a quiet smoke or game of cards in the guard room and dormitories were members of the day relief.

When the guests arrived in the new building they inspected appliances in the front office, and then turning into the guard room were treated to lemonade and cigars.

Having inspected this floor, they then ascended into the court room above. Here they examined the articles of furniture, stood in the dock, looked at the records, and then mounted the second staircase. On this, the third floor, they saw the sleeping quarters of the men. Descending then to the basement the gymnasium was seen. Several officers were throwing the medicine ball and lifting chest weights. Some of the aldermen joined them, His Honor proving quite an expert.

Entering the new brick addition, the new heating, lighting and disinfecting apparatus were examined. Mayor Cobb explained the detail workings of the plant, and at the conclusion of his remarks the board retired to City Hall, to finish the transaction of the city's business. From the expressions heard they appeared more than gratified with the new quarters, remarking that for what had been done, the amount of money must have been very judiciously put out.

Y. M. C. A. Work at the Front.

In response to an appeal from Mr. R. M. Armstrong for funds with which to carry on the Y. M. C. A. work among the military camps, the members of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Newton Y. M. C. A. have subscribed $25. It is the desire of these ladies to increase the amount, and any money sent to Miss Ethel Harwood of Ivanhoe street will be promptly forwarded. The plan of work, which it is contemplated will be carried on among the soldiers, has already been told in the columns of the GRAPHIC, and the cause is certainly one of true worth.

METCALF'S CHEMICAL CAMPHOR.

15c per pound $1.50 per dozen

It's not the little miller that flies around the house that makes the holes in your garments and other property; it's the sharp-toothed worm that is hatched from the miller's eggs. Spoil the miller and spare your clothes. Chemical Camphor will do it. One pound of it replaces five pounds of ordinary camphor.

—Tomorrow afternoon on the grounds of the New England Peabody home for crippled children on South street, Weston, will be held a lawn party in aid of the institution. An elaborate entertainment program will be furnished, and the affair will doubtless prove one of unusual interest.

—In spite of stormy weather, Saturday evening, the Newton Boat Club held the first of its series of June promenade concerts at the Riverside boathouse. About 200 guests were present and dancing was enjoyed from 8 to 10.30 o'clock, music being provided by Martland's band of Brockton.

—An unknown woman, while crossing Auburn street near the head of Lexington street about noon Tuesday was knocked down by a cicyclist. She was not severly hurt though suffering a bad shaking-up. The bicyclist apologized, but the lady felt quite indignant. She would not tell her name but said she was a stranger in Newton.

—The highway department laborers have been active this week in rounding the corner of Hancock and Central streets recently authorized by the city government. The matter was presented to the board of alderman some weeks ago, and at a public hearing was enthusiastically endorsed. There is scarcely any doubt but that the improvement will be greatly appreciated.

—A good deal of excitement was caused Sunday afternoon in the village of Auburndale by the absence of Philip Woodside, Liney Weith and Joseph Melody, three small boys, who disappeared about 3 o'clock, as it was thought at first they had been kidnapped. The police were notified, and a general alarm was sent throughout the city. About 6 o'clock the trio were found on the farm of William Ledbether in South Weston. To the officer who found them they explained that they had been hunting for wild rabbits.

—There was a bicycle collision on Lexington street, near Auburndale avenue about 8.10 o'clock Tuesday night, which resulted in the damaging of three bicycles. A lady and gentleman going towards Waltham had the misfortune to collide with a tandem ridden by two young men and headed [illegible] Newton. Just where the blame lies is hard to tell as both parties occupied the centre of the street. The lady was thrown to the ground, but not hurt while her escort was badly bruised. The tandem riders escaped with a few scratches. The three wheels were so badly damaged as to compel the riders to walk home. They refused to give their names.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. For the Wounded Massachusetts Soldiers.

The children of the American Revolution of the Alice Stearns Chapter, are showing their originality as well as their patriotism by giving an entertainment which is a departure from the hackneyed ones employed so frequently.

It is a gramophone concert and the children have been fortunate enough to secure the use of one of the largest size with a most powerful horn attachment. The records used will be the "originals" and consist of patriotic, humorous and pathetic selections.

The concert will be held in the Episcopal chapel at Auburndale, Monday, June 13, at 8 p. m. Now is the opportunity for the truly patriotic people of Newton to show their true colors aside from the waving of them from the doorways. The money received will be sent directly to the Massachusetts soldiers at the front, for delicacies for our wounded.

Newton C. E. Union.

The next public meeting will be held on Monday evening, June 13th, at the Congregational church, Newton Centre, at 7.45 p. m.

The speaker of the evening will be Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, World's Supt. of Scientific Instruction in Schools. Mrs. Hunt is a remarkably fine speaker of international reputation, so a large delegation is expected from all the societies.

THE SWEETEST GIFTS OF LOVE.

What shall I give her—my little girl,
With the soft, dark eyes an I the silken net
Of tresses, with many a sun bright curl?
What shall I give her—my love, my pet?
What shall I give her of beauty and bliss
To match the bright curls that she gives me to kiss?

My love! I have given her that. 'Tis old—
Old as he life, though her face is young.
I have given my darling my heart to hold,
With the sweetest songs that my heart has sung!
There is nothing to give her, save only this—
The kiss on the curls that she gives me to kiss!

She is climbing up to my arms. I see
The light of heaven in her lovely eyes.
Over the face and the life of me
Curl on curl in its splendor lies!
Nothing to give her, save only this—
The kiss on the curls that she gives me to kiss!
—Frank L. Stanton in Ladies' Home Journal.

VISITING COUGARS.

There had been for days a great fire in the forest up toward Onion peak, and a strong wind was driving it so far toward the settlement on the upper Nehalem that some of the people watched it with fear. But to Jered Ames it was bringing a small harvest of silver, for he was a guide as well as a freighter on the river, and fire on the Oregon heights meant game on the lower, accessible levels. Jered had taken two parties of hunters up the river already. Today he was away with the third, and on his return he must deliver three pigs sent to him for a settler named Keegan.

Usually Jered's young wife did not fret at being left alone with the year old baby, but now the heat and smoke oppressed her imagination and made her think of the end of the world and set her wishing for some neighbor to talk with. The baby, too, was ill at ease in the sultry, smoke scented air and cried fretfully as she tried to rock it to sleep after her early supper.

From her seat, which was under a pine behind the cabin, the little woman could see a long stretch of the path on which her husband must return from his boat, but she could not see his boathouse nor the river. It was possible that he might come home that evening, and her heart was sore with longing to see his tall form striding toward her. It was possible, too, that somebody, some messenger or hunter, might come up the path to engage him as guide or freighter, and she watched the path lest some stranger should take her by surprise.

While she rocked the little one and sang to it, letting it lie unhugged on her lap that it might be the cooler, its crying ceased, and it seemed about to sleep, with its face turned from her. But suddenly it shrieked as if from some instinctive alarm and turned to her, clutching with its feeble little hands and burying its face in her lap. The mother, wondering what had affrighted the child, stared down the path and there saw a moving thing which instantly disappeared.

"A dog," she thought, "somebody's dog. Its owner is coming for Jered. Whoever it is will have to stay all night, for it's too late now to go back to the settlement. I must hurry in. The man will want supper."

She clutched the baby, and at her grasp it screamed, as if in the wildest terror, a note which made her again wonder what ailed it. Into the kitchen she ran, put the kettle again on the stove and thrust in some kindling. Then she went into her bedroom, just off the kitchen, and tried to brush her hair and "tidy" herself with one hand while she held the crying baby with the other.

It struck her after a little while that she ought to have heard the footstep or voice or knock of the stranger, and she turned from her tiny looking glass toward the door of the bedroom, beyond which was the open door of the kitchen. There stood a full grown cougar, or mountain lion.

She recognized the beast at the first glance, although she had never seen one before, and in that one dazed glance she wondered if all wild beasts were so gaunt and rusty looking.

In the next instant the wild shriek of her baby roused her to action, and she threw her shoulder against the door just as the rusty, tawny, long body crouched. The latch snapped down; then the door shook as if from one blow of a heavy wadded mallet, and the thin partition of upright boards rattled and creaked. The little woman stood in mortal terror, and the baby, which had instinctively ceased to cry, pressed its head to her bosom and clutched with trembling hands.

For an instant the partition seemed likely to be pushed down; then the mother heard the fierce sweep of wild claws across the boards, and then there was a great crash in the kitchen. Nothing but a fall of crockery could account for such a noise, and Mrs. Ames knew that her plates and cups and saucers, her preserve dishes, her admired glass pitcher and probably her treasured sirup jug with the German silver top had all tumbled at once from the shelves fastened to the partition. In an instant she was as angry as if Jered had upset her cherished things. Her courage came back in full force, and she pulled open the door recklessly to scold at the cougar.

He had been frightened badly already. He had leaped like a frightened cat out of the kitchen at a bound, but he had not leaped out of the house. He had gone the other way. His head had been toward an open interior door when the precious crockery fell, and his leap had sent him into the "front room," where he stood surprised, alarmed, awaiting something dreadful.

As angry Mrs. Ames, her baby frightened into silence by the noise, opened the bedroom door she saw in the kitchen looking glass the reflection of the cougar in the front room eying her, and she screamed at it with such shrillness that the scared beast shrank into the dark space between the "chest of drawers" and the north corner. The small woman understood instantly that the cougar was frightened, and in the same instant, slipping forward boldly, she shut the door of the front room with a slam.

The other door and the windows of that room were all closed, and now Mrs. Ames felt that she was mistress of the situation. The cougar seemed to feel so too. While she listened and peeped at the keyhole the wild creature shuffled around uneasily inside.

"Yes, you can snoop round in there, knocking my things over," said Mrs. Ames aloud and vengefully, "but when Jered comes home he will teach you to snoop."

She gazed about at the relics of her beloved crockery. That awful spectacle made her angrier than ever, and then she remembered a knothole in the partition through which, by standing on a chair, she could watch her foe and taunt him.

Mrs. Ames had one foot on the chair when a fearful scream came from the cougar in the front room, which was instantly answered by just such another from a spot not ten feet behind her. She turned her head. Well inside the open back door crouched a second cougar not so large as the first, but rather more evil looking. This was the female. She had stolen fearfully in to look for her mate. She was a cougar suspecting a trap.

Mrs. Ames stared one second at the creature; then, desperately enfolding her baby as if to hide it, she stepped forward, uttering terrified and terrifying screams, and seized in her free hand the kettle of boiling water that had just begun to hiss over the fresh kindling. Whether the screams or the threat of the kettle or the forward motion of Mrs. Ames scared the female cougar to flight no one can be sure, but the creature turned tail and dashed out of the kitchen door.

Then the little woman shut that door and bolted it and hugged her baby and kissed it and began to laugh hysterically. Frightened as she was, she had a certain sense that it was all very funny and that cougars were as easy to deal with as cats or hens. Her anxiety for the baby's life had quite gone. She felt that she could defeat a cougar with her broomstick, not to mention her formidable kettle of hot water.

But Mrs. Ames was not out of her troubles yet. She heard a great clawing in the front room, then silence, and she suspected the truth. Rising on the chair and looking through the knothole, she saw no cougar. He had climbed out by way of the big fireplace and up the enormous chimney. As she stepped down to the floor she heard the muffled fall of the cougar's leap from the top of the chimney to the big shingles of the roof.

There were two of them outside now, and she dared not open the door of the kitchen or any outer door. The sun was nearly down. She suspected the beasts would be courageous after dark. What were they doing? Suddenly she saw both of them peering down at her and the baby through a small, uncurtained window which was between the roof of the shed and the eaves of the house.

Staring at her, both of them crouching on the roof, not 15 feet away from the baby! No wonder the nerves of poor little Mrs. Ames gave way again, and she sank down on a kitchen chair almost in a faint.

Still she was conscious of those hungry, staring eyes, and she could not move. She could barely keep the baby from falling out of her arms. They stared so deliberately, so gloatingly, that it seemed that the next moment they would crash through the glass and down at her. Now one of them put its claw forward and felt the glass and then began to claw it softly as if puzzled at the invisible obstacle. Suddenly both rose. They had heard pigs, and on the instant both vanished.

Among the last freight sent up to Jered Ames with directions to deliver it to a settler named Keegan, up the Nehalem river, were those three bouncing little pigs. He was to deliver them at his convenience. Now, it had been more convenient to go off with the hunting party that day, and so Jered had put the pigs in the covered shed or storehouse, in which there was nothing which they could harm.

The pigs, perhaps scenting the cougars, had begun to squeal loudly. The cougars found these sounds interesting. Leaping to the ground, they stared into the storehouse through the chinks in its log walls, then enlarged some of these chinks by clawing out chips and hay and earth, then thrust in their sharp claws and tried to seize the pigs. But the pigs, all the time squealing loudly, kept out of the way.

The cougars soon began looking impatiently about for an entrance. They sprang to the roof of the shed, but found no opening there. They peered down from the edges at the sides. Now, a board that finished the top of the slant just under one edge of the roof had long been loosened and hung down. Looking through the chink, the cougars saw the appetizing pigs. They clawed vigorously at the board. It gave way, and in two seconds both the sinuous beasts had squirmed through the hole and dropped into the shed.

In vain did Mrs. Ames put her hands to her ears. Nothing could shut out the shrieks and squeals and horrid growls. The baby screamed so that she feared it would go into convulsions, and the night was falling fast.

Then came a blessed interruption—a loud knock, combined with a distinctly human kick, at the back door. Mrs. Ames rose and opened it. There stood Keegan, the settler who owned the pigs. He had come down the river and up the path to inquire for them, and he had already peered into the shed through the chinks. There the cougars were too happily engaged to worry themselves because of any man. Keegan had dimly seen them by the little light through the hole they had made in the gable.

"Did Jered take his gun up river with him?" asked Keegan.

"No. Well, now, to think I never thought of the gun!" cried Mrs. Ames.

"I guess I'll just borrow it a minute," said Keegan. "Are there any cartridges? Good! Now if you've got the spunk to hold a light for me we'll fetch those cougars." He explained his plan. Mrs. Ames put the baby down on the floor in her bedroom and came out and shut the door and, trembling with excitement and fear and eagerness, bravely helped Keegan.

She tied a bunch of paper loosely about a broom handle and sprinkled kerosene over the torch. She stood on a barrel and held this light up to the opening the cougars had made in the shed. They did not dare to spring at the fire. In fact, they had not five seconds to decide on any proceeding, for Keegan, putting the muzzle of the double barreled gun through a chink in the wall of the shed, shot both neatly from a distance of six feet. The charges of shot passed solidly, like great bullets, through the lank bodies.

And then Mrs. Ames surprised and alarmed the settler as never cougars could. She went into hysterics, and was still wildly laughing and crying at once when her husband came up the path and held her in his strong arms and soothed the brave little mother to quiet while the tired baby went contentedly to sleep.—Youth's Companion.

The Power of the Press.

"Now that we are a settled element in the community and nation, the reporters do not bother us about little things so much—our newness and interest having rubbed off together," writes A Cabinet Member's Wife in The Ladies' Home Journal. "I have great sympathy for these women society reporters, as I see more of them and their hard work, which must be distasteful to many of them. There is one girl who works up a society column every week as the only means of providing bread and butter for an invalid mother and herself. She is ladylike and pleasant looking, though not pretty, and I feel sure she dislikes to ask people questions more than they dislike to answer them—in fact you would be surprised to see how some prominent people toady to her for notices of their functions. I understand what the phrase 'the power of the press' means."

WHAT A DINNER COSTS.

A Curious Calculation, Showing the Cost of an Ordinary Meal.

Recently a gentleman who is fond of arithmetic made up his mind that he would find out how much a dinner really cost. This gentleman asked how much a simple dinner (that he was eating) cost, and he was told 75 cents.

He contradicted this and then made out the following statement about the cost of that dinner: The pepper, he said, came from 10,000 miles away. It grew on a little bush about 8 feet high, which must have had a growth of at least five years. The pepper was picked green. It had to be dried in the sun, and this meant employing women. It took one ship and 1,000 miles of railroad to bring the pepper to the United States. The flour of which the bread was made came from Dakota. Some one owned the land and that meant the investing of capital, and then he had also to pay wages to workingmen. The flour had to be ground, and the building of the mill and the plant or machinery meant more money invested. The millers had to be paid, coopers had to be paid for making the barrels and, of course, the wood of which the barrels were made had to be cut and sawed and shaped, and this meant the employing of more men. Then the flour had to be shipped over the railroad and handled again by cartmen before it came into the house.

The tea on the table came from China and the coffee from South America. The codfish had to be brought from Maine. Men had to be employed to catch the fish. Other men and women were employed in drying, packing and boxing it and it, too, had to make a long railroad journey.

The salt came from the Indian reservation in the northwestern part of New York state. The spices in the cake came from the Spice islands in the Indian archipelago. The canned peaches came from California, and they, too, represented the employment of capital and labor. The little dinner represented, directly or indirectly, the employment of $500,000,000 of capital and 5,000,000 men.—Chicago News.

THE KROOBOYS.

A Singular People and Their Queer Method of Face Decoration.

Between Cape Mesurado and Cape Palmas the Krooboys have their towns, the Little Kru, the Settra Kru, King Will's Town and the rest. A race apart, the Lascars of the coast, the Krooboy for the last 200 years has been in intercourse with men from Europe and still remains a worshiper of gods which, in the latitudes of Aberdeen, of Sunderland, the Hartlepools and other regions where the true faith reigns are not accepted. A healthy pagan, tall, active, with muscles like a Hercules, head like a comic masque, speaking a sort of "petit negre" or "Blackman English," a jargon, call it what you like, the ground work of it oaths; its face tattooed on either temple with a triangle, from which a line of blue, which starts below his hair, runs down his nose, giving him when he laughs a look of having two distinct faces.

The Krooboy ships for a cruise, and then, on his return to the five towns, reverts to paganism, a merry misbeliever over whose life no shadow of the Galilean tragedy has passed and who therefore ships aboard an English ship in the firm expectation of returning home after a two years' cruise to invest his wages in the purchase of more wives, 200 years of missionary labor having as yet proved ineffectual to eradicate the natural polygamistic tendencies which Providence, who one supposes acted after due consideration, seems to have planted in the fiber of all mankind except, of course, ourselves. Strong, tall, a coward, animistic to the core and called indifferently "Jack Beef," "Sam Coffee" or "Small Fish," the Krooboy is a man apart, and for the test of moral worth our Christian navigators put a bale weighing two hundredweight upon his head, and if he carries it safe through the surf he is engaged.—Saturday Review.

Humor of British Elections.

Years ago when elections in England were contests in which bribery and intimidation were winked at voters who lived at a distance often found it difficult to get to the polls, whether they traveled by land or by water. A vessel carrying voters from London to Ipswich, only 70 miles distant, somehow lost its reckoning and did not discover it until Amsterdam was sighted.

Coaches conveying voters broke down mysteriously. Readers of "Pickwick Papers" will recall Tony Weller, the stout, red faced coachman who married a "widder" for his "second wentur," and who had what he called "a coincidence," while driving a coach load of voters from London to a certain town. The coach was upset several miles from its destination, and the passengers reached the polling booth only after the voting had been closed.

Ireland's reputation for practical joking at elections is maintained even in these prosaic days. At the election for the city of Cork in 1895 the contest was between the Parnellites and the anti-Parnellites. A funny incident happened. The wives of four voters held political views which differed from their husbands'. On the day of the election these four women rose early and left their homes, carrying off every stitch of male attire from the house, with the keys, after locking in their sleeping husbands.

But fate was against them. Before the polls closed, the clothesless voters were discovered. Friends wrapped them in blankets and conveyed them in carriages to the polling booths, where they arrived just in time to record their votes.—Youth's Companion.

The Moon's Movements.

The moon is the nearest, and, being the nearest, appears to us, with the single exception of the sun, the largest, although it is in reality one of the smallest of the heavenly bodies. Just as the earth goes round the sun, and the period of revolutions constitutes a year, so the moon goes round the earth approximately in a period of one month. But while we turn on our axis every 24 hours, thus causing the alternations of light and darkness, day and night, the moon takes a month to revolve on hers, so that she always presents the same, or very nearly the same, surface to us.—London Echo.

YOUNG MINISTERS.

GRADUATION EXERCISES AT THE NEWTON THEOLOGICAL INSTITUTION—REV. DR. HOVEY'S LAST SERMON.

Sunday morning, in the First Baptist church of Newton Centre, the venerable Rev. Alvah Hovey, president of the Newton Theological Institution, preached the annual baccalaureate sermon to the members of the graduating class. The service was rendered particularly impressive in view of the fact that this year Dr. Hovey resigns his position at the seminary.

Dr. Hovey took as his text John xiv., 6: "Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth and the life. No man cometh unto the Father but by me."

By these words, said he, Jesus here defines what he is in relation to men: "The way and the truth and the life." It may be seen that they take us from a somewhat outward to a very inward view of his relation to men. The way to the Father must be something that makes communion with him possible. But we approach the Father by a movement of soul, not of body. It is by knowing and trusting Jesus Christ that we enter the holy of holies, and with purified vision see God Through him we have forgiveness and access to the Father, and fellowship with all the sons of light.

Truth is the expression of realty, the representation of what exists in the world of sense or of mind. Jesus claims to be the truth, because he is the best possible expression of realities supremely important to men. As a teacher he has no peer among the sons of men. He has the clearest vision of the inner life of God and man, and he speaks as simply of one as he does of the other. Moreover, his actions are as illuminating as his words. And when he says, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father," he affirms that he is the perfect expression of the divine nature. But this is not equivalent to saying that their view of him is perfect.

Finally, Jesus claims to be "the life." And life is deeper than truth. By calling himself the life he declares that he can satisfy our whole spiritual nature, our capacity of feeling and of willing, as well as our capacity of knowing. Life in every form is a mystery, and in its highest form, that of conscious selfhood, it stands at the head of universal being. The life of a man as a spiritual being will never be full and blissful until all its powers, intellect, affection, will, are engaged in the knowledge of one whose nature is infinite and holy. There is needed the touch of divine life, the pulsating love and will of Christ, to impart to a sinful soul the higest movement of its powers in communion with God.

This is your message to men; the holy evangel which you are sent into the world to preach. Let your work be done with the spirit of Paul, and it will not be done in vain. "The old, old story" will never cease to be attractive to those who are weary and heavy laden.

This is the last sermon that Dr. Hovey will deliver before the students of the institution. He has held the presidency for 30 years, and has been connected with the school for more than 50 years.

Dr. Hovey was born in Greene, N. Y., in April, 1820. He was graduated from Dartmouth in 1844, and from the Newton Theological Institution in 1848. The next year he was installed as pastor at New Gloucester, Me. The same year he was ordained at Boston, and returned to the Newton Theological Institution as instructor in Hebrew. He served as instructor and professor until 1868, when he was elected president of the institution. He is the author of several theological works, and has contributed largely to magazines.

Alumni Meeting.

Wednesday morning's commencement exercises of the Baptist Theological Institution were largely devoted to the interests of the Alumni Association. The first meeting of the association was held at 10 o'clock in the chapel of the Baptist church. Some 50 alumni were present. Plans were discussed for raising a fund to be added to the endowment fund, for the purpose of rebuilding Farwell Hall. Prof. Charles A. Reese, the financial secretary, reported that $17,000 would be needed for the purpose. Of this amount the trustees had on hand $11,000. Officers of the association for the ensuing year were chosen as follows: President, the Rev. T. D. Andrews, Providence, R. I.; vice-president, the Rev. Charles L. White, Nashua, N. H.; secretary, Prof. Charles R. Brown, Newton Centre; treasurer, the Rev. D. A. Capen, Watertown; orator, the Rev. J. B. G. Pidge, Philadelphia; alternate, the Rev. A. G. Upham, Boston. At 11.30 o'clock the alumni adjourned to the main church auditorium, where an address was delivered by the Rev. Frank Rector of Oehsburg on "Time as an Element in the Development of the Kingdom of God." At 12.45 class meetings of the alumni were held at the homes of the professors of the Institution.

At 3.30 the Backus Historical Society held its annual meeting in Colby Hall. This was followed at 4.30 by a devotional hour, with an address by the Rev. Edward Judson, D. D., of New York. In the evening at 7.45 an address was delivered by Prof Albion W. Small, Ph. D., of the University of Chicago, at the Baptist church.

An Appeal to the Women of Newton.

At a general meeting of the women of Newton, held at the Eliot church parlors, on Tuesday, June 7th, for the purpose of working for the men composing our army and navy, it was voted to organize a society to be known as "The Newton Branch of the Mass. Volunteer Aid Society; its officers to consist of a president, five vice presidents, ten directors, a secretary, treasurer, and a corresponding secretary.

A fee of twenty-five cents is asked for membership. An urgent appeal is made to all women to co-operate with this branch, either by personal work in the making of garments, or by gifts of money, of which there is abundant need.

It may not be known to all that the Mass. Association was formed at the request of His Excellency, Gov. Wolcott, with the appointment of Mr. Eben S. Draper, as president, and Mr. Elihu B. Hayes as secretary. Mr. Hayes is in constant correspondence with the Surgeon General, at Florida, and thus the needs of our men are known at once.

One dollar entitles a person to membership in the Mass. Volunteer Aid Association. The rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association are open daily for those who wish to procure work from the Newton branch.

Officers of the Newton branch of the Mass. Volunteer Aid Association: Pres., Mrs. S. Curtis Smith; vice pres., Mrs. J. Wesley Barber, Mrs. Moses Clark, Mrs. T. O. Loveland, Mrs. Calvin Prescott, Mrs. Jerome Sonderika; directors, Mrs. John Robinson, Mrs. H. A. Brooke, Mrs. H. Kendall, Miss Jennie Jones, Mrs. S. A. D. Sheppard, Mrs. M. J. Pinkham, Mrs. Walter Doane, Mrs. C. Lawrence, Mrs. M. P. Springer, Miss Grace Jones; treas., Miss Alice M. Buswell; sec'y, Mrs. Wm. C. Bates; cor. sec'y, Mrs. J. Herbert Sawyer; chairman cutting committee, Mrs. North.

Next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock the ladies will meet in the Y. M. C. A. hall, Nonantum building.

The merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla
Is literally written in blood.
It is traced in the vital fluid
Of millions of the human race,
Its positive medicinal merit
And curative power is written
Upon the hearts, and graven upon
The minds of thousands
Of people whom it has cured
And given good health
When there seemed nothing before
Them but darkness and despair.
It cures all diseases arising
From or promoted by impure
Blood by its intrinsic merit as
The One True Blood Purifier.

NEWTON CEMETERY CORPORATION.

44TH ANNUAL MEETING HELD WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON IN THE FARLOW MEMORIAL CHAPEL—REPORTS OF OFFICERS AND ELECTION OF TRUSTEES.

Wednesday afternoon in the Farlow Memorial chapel at the cemetery grounds was held the 44th annual meeting of the Newton Cemetery Corporation. About 20 lot owners were present.

In the absence of President Haskell Mr. Warren P. Tyler, vice-president, called the meeting to order at 3.30 o'clock. The records of the last meeting were then read and approval.

The trustees' annual report was as follows:

Full details of the business of the year are given in the reports of the treasurer and superintendent.

The grounds have been kept in good condition and excellent taste has been shown in planting.

The number of interments for the year was 221, of which 151 were in private lots, 56 in single graves, and 14 in the city lot. The whole number of interments has reached nearly five thousand.

The Perpetual Care Fund has been increased by $4610, of which $1946 was paid in on old lots. The whole fund now amounts to $102,345.46. The financial statement shows an excess of assets over liabilities amounting to $8984.72.

Fifty-one persons purchased lots during the year, the income from this source having been $10,267.

The pond near Beacon street, having ceased to be beautiful by reason of failure of water, it has been filled up and handsomely graded, making forty-five (45) desirable lots.

Some of the avenues have had a dressing of gravel and gutters have been paved.

The water in the ponds near the chapel was lowered. One of them entirely dried up, and this effect was attributed to the building of the sewer through Walnut street, which taps the subterranean streams upon which these ponds depended. The city government accepted the responsibility, upon receiving a complaint from us, and is now putting in a water drain at the corner of Walnut and Homer streets, which, in the opinion of the city engineer, will refill our ponds and restore their beauty.

The question of compensation to be paid by the city for running the sewer diagonally through that part of our grounds bordering on Walnut street remains unsettled. We hope that the city government may be induced to pursue a liberal course, as the cemetery is maintained for the benefit of the citizens and not for profit.

A part of the duties of superintendent, on account of the delicate health of Mr. Henry Ross, have been passed over to his assistant, Mr. H. W. Ross. While the latter is steadily gaining in efficiency, we hope that we may long be able to retain the advantage of his senior's judgment and taste, to which, in a very large degree, the Newton cemetery owes its excellent reputation. We think it safe and proper to assure the proprietors that no cemetery near Boston is better cared for, or presents to the eye of the visitor a more complete rural picture. For the trustees,

EDWIN B. HASKELL, Pres.

Messrs. J. R. Leeson, D. R Emerson and Charles Ross were appointed a committee to prepare a list of trustees. They retired and after brief consultation presented the following names, which were unanimously chosen: E. B. Haskell, W. P. Tyler, A. F. Hayward, A. R. Mitchell, Otis Pettee, Francis Murdock, George Frost, E. M. Fowle and C. F. Eddy.

All regular business having been disposed of, Hon. J. R. Leeson addressed the meeting, and expressed his deep satisfaction to the trustees and superintendent and his corps for their faithful work, and the great success with which they had carried on the work of beautifying the grounds and caring for the lots. He referred to the handsome appearance of the grounds, and was most emphatic in his praise of the trustees and superintendent.

Mr. Tyler responded, thanking Mr. Leeson in behalf of the trustees. A vote of the proprietors to the trustees and superintendent was extended.

Mr. Otis Pettee read a copy of the resolve adopted at a recent meeting of the trustees, in respect to the memory of Hon. J. F. C. Hyde.

At 4.15 o'clock the meeting adjourned.

Are You Pale?

Are your cheeks hollow and your lips white?

Is your appetite poor and your digestion weak? Is your flesh soft and have you lost in weight?

These are symptoms of anemia or poor blood. They are just as frequent in the summer as in the winter. And you can be cured at one time just as well as another.

Scott's Emulsion

of cod liver oil with hypophosphites will certainly help you. Almost everyone can take it, and it will not disturb the weakest stomach.

It changes the light color of poor blood to a healthy and rich red. It nourishes the brain; gives power to the nerves. It brings back your old weight and strength.

HIS LAST CIGAR.

How a Clergyman Was Cured of the Taste For Tobacco.

An English clergyman, who was a hard smoker, was cured of the taste for tobacco by a sudden twinge of conscience.

He was sitting one day in his library with an expensive cigar in his mouth when the name of one of his oldest friends was announced. The visitor, when greetings had been warmly exchanged, confessed that he had come upon a begging errand.

A story of pathetic distress was told, and an urgent appeal was made for immediate relief. The clergyman was a warm hearted, generous man, and his hand was plunged at once into his pocket, but he found only a few shillings there. He then fumbled in his desk for his checkbook, remarking to his friend that it was a very sad and urgent case and that he would do what he could, but when he looked at his bank balance his face changed color. The account was nearly overdrawn already.

"I am very sorry," he said. "I can only give you a beggarly sum. I did not know how poor I was."

The check which he drew was only a fifth of the amount which was needed. He made many apologies for giving the visitor so little money when his heart was deeply touched, and he longed to do more.

When his friend had gone, he relighted his cigar, but it seemed to have a bitter taste, and he took out a fresh one. Before striking a match he jotted down on paper the price of the cigar, and the number which he usually smoked a day. He found that tobacco was costing him 5 shillings a day and over £90 a year, or about $450 in American money. The amount which he had given to his old friend in dire distress represented the cost of 20 days' smoking.

The clergyman was an impulsive man. Instead of lighting his fresh cigar of the choicest brand he threw it into the fire on his hearth. He was so deeply impressed with the thought that a little self denial on his part would have enabled him to help an old friend in great need that he resolved sternly never to smoke again. Being a man of strong will, he was as good as his word.

This good man's tobacco bill was a heavier one than is ordinarily paid. But many a smoker would be surprised if he were to count the cost of his own self indulgence in tobacco.

A recent investigation has shown that the students of a military academy in England expend enough money on cigarettes to provide for the education of 40 young men too poor to have the same advantages. The effects of tobacco on health may be disputed, but no smoker can deny that smoking is a wasteful habit, and that there would be large compensations for self denial.—Youth's Companion.

The Chinook.

While the north wind blows every breathing thing shrinks and cowers. The mere holding on to life is a struggle for poor unsheltered animals, and the longer it lasts the harder is the struggle and the less their strength for it. But there comes a change in the air. Some night on looking out we see that the clouds have rolled upward, as if a curtain were lifted in the west, leaving a well defined arch of clear sky with stars shining in it. That arch means that the west wind, the preserver, is on his way, and sometimes we hear his voice beforehand in a long, distant roar among the mountains. When next morning breaks, the north wind has fled, overcome.

You may go to the house door in a dressing gown to look out on the snowy prairie, and the chinook blowing over you feels like a warm bath. It seems miraculous. All living things are revived and gladdened. Horses and cattle move slowly toward the sunny slopes, leaving long, shining furrows behind them in the smooth snow, and there they stand or lie down, basking in the soft air. It is a kind of brief summer. Even those spiritless things the hens will come out of their house under the bank, where they have been sitting like so many motionless humps of feathers, and scratch about for awhile in the sun, as though life had still something to offer in place of the toes they lost in the last frost.

The snow buntings will whir past your face in a cloud, with a flashing of little white wings. I am told that snow buntings, if you get enough of them, are excellent in a pie, but I think they are more excellent in the sunlight.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Not a Servant After All.

Housekeeper (to pleasant girl at employment agency)—Have you any objection to the country?

Girl (politely)—None at all, madam.

Housekeeper—I have a large family.

Girl—The more the merrier.

Housekeeper—Seven children, two of them quite young.

Girl—I love little children.

Housekeeper—It will be necessary for you to bake bread, wash and get the meals. I attend to the pastry and chamberwork myself.

Girl—I will also make the pastry and do the rest if you will allow me.

Housekeeper—I cannot give you more than three afternoons off.

Girl—Two will be sufficient—perhaps more than I will want—as my plan is to give strict attention to my household duties and thus get the work done up promptly every day so as to have plenty of opportunities to rest between times.

Housekeeper—I am delighted—

Stranger (suddenly entering)—Sorry to interrupt you, madam, but you are conversing with one of my patients who has just escaped from the Hopelessly Incurable Lunatic asylum.—Pearson's Weekly.

Unique Chief Justice of South Dakota.

President Grant appointed Philom P. Bliss of Michigan chief justice of the territorial supreme court of South Dakota, who since then has held many responsible positions, but who, up to that time, enjoyed no legal education. He was a cabinet maker by trade, and just before going to Dakota he manufactured for himself a very nice office desk, which he took with him. Shortly after his arrival some one discovered his private memoranda, and they were passed around among the members of the bar. He had noted thus: "Ult. means last month; inst. means this month; prox. means next month," etc. On various occasions when the attorneys would object to his rulings as not being law or good sense he would reply, "Gentlemen, this is the law as laid down by the chief justice of the supreme court of Dakota territory, and it goes." He was nicknamed "Old Necessity," because necessity knows no law.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

—Mr. Charles Thompson left this week for Onset, where he will spend several weeks.

—Mr. Harris and family, formerly of New York, have moved into a new house on Oxford road.

—Rev. Mr. Barrows of Brooklyn, N. Y., formerly a resident of Maple Park, is here for a few days.

—Mr. George Richardson is slowly recovering the use of his hand, which was severely injured some weeks ago.

—A general invitation is extended to the public to attend the demonstrations of junkets at Knapp's grocery, next week.

—Farnum's block, situated at the corner of Centre and Beacon streets, is undergoing extensive repairs and improvements.

—Seven members of the Circuit Bicycle Club have entered in the races which will be run off at Wakefield, Mass., tomorrow.

—An unusual number of strangers have been in town this week to attend the exercises at the Newton Theological Institution.

—List of letters unclaimed in the postoffice: E. H. Ewer, Louisa Jackson, Annie J. Lane, 3, 44 Langley road, D. McGee, Robert Shaw, Martha Thompson, Grace E. Wilson.

—Regular service at the Unitarian church next Sunday at 10.30. Sunday school at 12. The Hale Union will join the Brighton Union in a service at the church, Chestnut Hill avenue, at 7.30.

—Fire alarm box 73 was pulled in at 6.12 o'clock Monday morning for an incipient blaze in the tenement of Alexander White at the corner of Centre and Beacon streets. Cause overheated stove. No damage.

—Col. E. H. Haskell was a guest at the gentlemen's night of the Women's Baptist Social Union in Boston, and responded to the toast "Our Guests," in behalf of the Baptist Social Union, of which he is president.

—Mr. Nathan Barker was here on a visit yesterday. He lived in West Newton about seventy years ago. Since then he has lived sixty-nine years in Weston, but has recently removed to Sudbury. He will be 89 years old Sept. 8th.

—The large flag which was recently flung to the breeze across Institution avenue, was so badly torn in the rain storm, last week, as to make several repairs necessary. Many of the residents have missed it, and inquireg the cause of its absence.

—A second track is being laid by the Commonwealth avenue street railway on the boulevard. Large gangs of workmen have been constructing the new tracks, but the work will probably not be completed until the latter part of the month.

—On Saturday last, in the Unitarian church parlors, the two sons of Mr. Emil Paur played to Miss Forbes' pupils an interesting program of piano solos and duets. At the close of the program an informal reception was given to Mr. and Mrs. Paur.

—Mr. Edward H. Mason has presented to the Mason school a 9 by 15 United States flag. This school was named in honor of his father. The teachers and pupils are greatly delighted to see this beautiful flag waving in the place of the tattered and torn one. They raised the flag midst song, salute and cheer.

—Some time Monday evening the residence of Mr. Charles Hall on Dedham street, in the Oak Hill district, was entered and a bicycle stolen. This is the second time Mr. Hall's residence has been entered within the past two months. At a break which occurred in April, Mr. Hall was robbed of a gold watch.

—Complaints have come to the board of health from the residents of the Thompsonville district regarding some stagnant ponds in the vicinity of Cypress street, on the grounds of the Newton Theological Institution, and the board has decided to take hold of the matter. Before any changes are made, however, a hearing is to be given. June 20 has been set as the date.

—If the endeavors of several prominent Newton Centre residents are successful, the celebration of July 4th in this place will be quite elaborate. Already plans for a parade, aquatic sports on Crystal Lake and a pyrotechnic display are being considered. It is reported that residents will be called upon for subscriptions, and if the spirit of the times are thought of the amount subscribed should be quite generous.

--The funeral of Mr. Varnum Warren was held at the house of his daughter, Mrs. A. W. Armington, Wednesday afternoon, and the interment was at Mt. Auburn. Mr. Warren was a well known and prosperous Boston merchant, where he was in business for many years. His home was in Medway, and he retired from business about three years ago, at the age of 90 years, having attended to all the details of his business up to that time.

—In compliance with a request received from the Massachusetts Volunteer Aid Association, for one hundred flannel bands for use in the Massachusetts regiments in camp in the South, the Newton Centre Woman's Club have purchased, made and delivered the band called for, in the last few days. The emergency committee consists of fifteen ladies from the club, of whom Mrs. Alvah Hovey is chairman; Mrs. Henry D. Degen, vice chairman; Mrs. Albert L. Harwood, secretary.

—Four young men of Newton Centre have graduated this week from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Their names, with the courses of studies and the titles of their thesis are as follows: F. H. Twombly, from a course of general studies, preparing a thesis on "The Wheat Commerce of the World;" A. A. Blanchard from a course in chemistry preparing a thesis on "Some attempts to prepare Hexamethylene from Trimethylene Compounds;" H. F. Cobb from a course in mechanical engineering, preparing a thesis on "Design and Test of a Device to Reduce the Condensation in a Steam Engine," and Milan V. Ayres from a course in electrical engineering, preparing a thesis on "An Electro-chemical Current Recorder for Sudden Rushes of Current."

—The services at the Baptist church on Children's Sunday, June 12th, at 4 p. m., will be of a patriotic order. The program will include such national hymns as "America," "To Thee, O Country," "Fling out the Glorious Stars and Stripes," and "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." An additional attractive feature will be selections by the Philomela Octet. A full military band will be present to assist in rendering the chorus numbers. There will be recitations and a short address by the pastor.

Undertakers.

Since the death of S. L. Pratt, the firm of Richardson & Goodnow has made rapid strides in establishing a general undertaking and livery stable business. Within the past week the firm has taken the undertaking rooms formerly used by S. L. Pratt, and latterly by E. W. Pratt, and fitted them up in a first-class manner, and today no better accommodations can be found in the city. Mr. Richardson, who has the undertaking department in his charge, has had ten years experience with the late Stephen F. Cate at West Newton, and has engaged Professor Eastman, a well-known Boston authority in the business, as his assistant. A lady assistant is also connected with the department. The firm is as well equipped as any concern in Boston or in any of the Newtons.

NEWTON HIGHLANDS.

—Attention is called to advertisement among the business notices, of board and rooms.

—Mrs. Walter Allen of New Haven is the guest of Rev. and Mrs. Phipps for a few days.

—Mr. Rogers now occupies the house purchased by him of Mr. W. Scott Richards on Pierce street.

—The engagement is announced of Miss Jessie Palmer of this place and Mr. J. E. Graham of Cambridge.

—The many friends of Mr. Andrew Davis will regret to learn of his illness at his home on Sheldon street.

—There are unclaimed letters in the postoffice for Katie Benson, Fred Dewach, Mrs. J. J. Storrow, Jr., Mrs. S. F. Fletcher.

—Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ayles, Jr., have returned from their wedding trip and will have their home with her father, Officer Moulton, Erie avenue.

—Mrs. Nickerson from the Monday Club, and Mrs. Whittemore from the C. L. S. C., attended the meeting of the State Federation of Clubs at Amesbury.

—Mr. Arthur W. Wood, clerk with E. Moulton & Son, who has been confined to the house by illness for the past two or three weeks, is now able to be out again.

—Thomas Barrows of Brookline stole a dog valued at $50 in this place, Wednesday evening. He was arrested at his home, and in court yesterday morning he was fined $25.

—The sociable of St. Paul's Society took place on Wednesday evening at the Highlands Club House. There was a large attendance and it was a very enjoyable occasion.

—Next Sunday is Children's Sunday at the Congregational church, at which children may be presented for baptism, and those that were baptised ten years ago, will be presented with Bibles.

—The strawberry festival at the Methodist church was well attended and the little entertainment furnished was much enjoyed. The recitations by Miss Ada Powers were a very pleasant feature.

—E. W. Ritchie has graduated this week from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, having completed a course in architecture with the degree B. S. His thesis was a design for an armory for a battalion of M. V. M.

—We hear of three persons from the Highlands being sent to the Newton Hospital for treatment within the past few days. It becomes more and more apparent, year by year, of the great service being rendered by this institution to our people.

—At the meeting of the C. L. S. C. held on Monday, at the home of the president, Mrs. Richards, officers for the coming year were elected as follows: President, Mrs. Hayward; Vice-Pres., Mrs. Whittemore; Sec., Miss Webster; Assistant Sec, Miss Whittemore; Treas., Mrs. Warren.

—Children's Day will be observed at the Methodist church next Sunday. In the morning the sermon to the children and their friends by the pastor, Rev. T. W. Bishop. Subject, "The Wonderful Pocket." Sunday school concert in the evening at 7.30. Singing and recitations by the children.

—Rev. Wm. Safford Jones will preach Sunday next at All Souls Unitarian church, Highland Club Hall, Children's Sunday. Sunday school at noon. All are cordially invited. The Unitarian Sunday school will hold its annual outing this week Saturday at Hemlock Gorge Reservation, Echo Bridge. The children, their parents and friends, will assemble in front of the Hyde school at 10 o'clock.

—Arthur M. Forristall, a well known resident of this place, died at 11 o'clock Sunday morning, at his home, 68 Erie avenue. Death was due to typhoid fever, with which he had been ill several weeks. Mr. Forristall was born in Boston, and was 31 years old. He was engaged in the insurance business at 674 Tremont street, Boston, and was a promising young business man. He was a member of the Highland Club. He was also a director of the Mercantile Library Association of Boston. The latter association will hold a special meeting this evening, at which appropriate action will be taken upon his death. Mr. Forristall leaves a brother. The funeral took place at 2.30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Rev. C. S. Nickerson of the Newtonville Universalist church officiated. The interment was at Mt. Auburn.

—The piano recital by the pupils of Miss M. Louise Stone, at the parlors of Mrs. J. F. Pollard, Monday evening, 6th inst., was attended by an audience of nearly one hundred, including several guests from Worcester. The event awakened hearty interest in all, especially those permitted thus to witness the manifest improvement of pupils from year to year, under the painstaking and artistic culture in which Miss Stone excels. Such appreciative rendering of Schumann or Beethoven, as the older scholars presented, went far to satisfy critical musical taste, in respect both to spirit and feeling. An especial charm was also given to the concert by the skill of the professional performer upon the zither, Miss Bertha C. Smith of Boston, a perfect master of her responsive instrument. The marvellous delicacy of touch and handling in the "Eolian Harp Whispers" was very effective, thrilling every listener. The parlors themselves were charmingly decorated with patriotic draping, enlivened by lovely maiden hair ferns and choice flowers.

MR. JAMES RICHARD CARTER

REPLIES TO THE QUERY "WHAT WILL BE THE EFFECT OF THE WAR ON AMERICAN COMMERCE?"

The following from the pen of Mr. James Richard Carter of West Newton, who is president of the Boston Merchants' Association, will be of especial interest to his Newton friends. The article was published last Sunday in the Boston Globe symposium:

The question as to what effect the results of the present war will have on American commerce is a difficult one to answer, for even in the light of subsequent experience, it will be impossible to determine how much will have resulted from the natural increase which has been going on, and would undoubtedly have continued without the war, and how much of the increase which can safely be predicted, will have been due to the war.

There seems to be no definite reason why it should increase our trade with Europe: the increase would naturally come from Cuba and the east. Not discussing the mooted questions whether we shall retain permanently the Philippine islands and in time be compelled to practically govern Cuba, for these questions can be decided more wisely later, when we have the more complete data which history is making, it is conceded by many that our trade interests will require a naval station in the east, and that whatever may be the form of government in Cuba, the country will be, to borrow a phrase of our continental neighbors, within the sphere of the United States' influence.

This is a commercial age, and the wars of the next 50 years will pro ably be caused by conflict of interests in different nations reaching out for the trade of the world. We see the tendency in Africa and China.

As the most rapidly growing manufacturing nation on the earth, needing our share of foreign markets, we shall have to assert our rights and maintain them. The most peaceable way of doing this is to show we possess sufficient power to compel respect for them. A naval station in the Philippine islands would undoubtedly add to our commercial prestige in the east, and directly benefit our commerce in the great competition for trade which will result from changed conditions in China.

Admiral Dewey's splendid victory has brought to our minds, fortunately in a negative manner, our possible condition in case of war so far from our own shores, without a port of refuge.

In Cuba, under the prosperity that we believe will follow American influence, there must be a large increase in the volume of business, which, with proper treatment, should naturally gravitate to the United States.

Here, then, we have two sources of possible increase to our commerce which would be directly traceable to the war. If, in addition to the above, our manufacturers and merchants are willing to learn a lesson of the English and the Germans, and seek to discover and satisfy the wants of the foreign customer, so as to secure his permanent business, instead of considering foreign countries a convenient dumping ground for surplus product, when home consumption is insufficient, and will also insist that our consular service, which is a disgrace to business methods, be taken out of politics and used for the benefit of our commerce, then we shall without question realize in the coming years, a material prosperity that will outstrip any that we have experienced in the past, great as that has been.

WABAN.

—The Windsor Hall School closes today after a most successful year.

—Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Ripley are entertaining friends from a distance.

—Dr. Crawford, who has been quite ill for some time, is now much improved.

—"Sam" Forsaith of Williams College is visiting the Waban school, which he formerly attended.

—Dr. E. L. Jordon has just got out some new time cards of trains between here and Boston, which are very much appreciated.

—Miss Lucille Zeis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Zeis of Nehoiden road, has gone to their summer home at Chatham on the cape.

—Mrs. E. L. Zeis closed her series of Bible meetings last Wednesday evening for the summer. They will be resumed in September.

—Subscription papers are in circulation to raise funds for a fireworks display here, the Fourth of July. Many have already subscribed.

—Mr. T. R. Wales is fast getting his yacht "Thordis" in racing condition, and promises some good yachting news for us this summer.

—Mr. A. D. Locke threw a handsome silk flag to the breeze last Saturday. With the many other flags, Beacon street presents quite a patriotic appearance.

—Next Sunday morning the church service will mark the closing of the Sunday school term. The sermon and other elements of the service will be adapted for young people.

—Mr. W. D. Noyes returned Wednesday from a ten days trip to Canada, and looks as brown as a berry. He went partly on business and partly on pleasure, and had a very nice trip.

—Mrs. De L. Sheplie had a very pleasant day for the 75th anniversary of her birthday, and her many friends from the Newtons, Brookline, and Boston, took occasion to congratulate her and remember her with many valuable presents.

Fast time, superb equipment, popularity assured. All of these are qualities possessed by the Fitchburg R. R. Continental Limited, leaving Boston at 9.30 a. m., due at Chicago 2.40 p. m., and St. Louis 6.50 p. m., next day.

UNLUCKY GROSSMEYER

TAKEN FOR A SPANISH SPY BY NONANTUM RESIDENTS, A NATIVE GERMAN CAUSES NO LITTLE COMMOTION IN THAT PLACE AND WATERTOWN.

Happy hearted Conrad Grossmeyer, bent solely in pursuit of his own pleasure and with thoughts of intrigue and deception furthermost from his mind, was unlucky enough to arrive in Nonantum last Friday evening. Not but what Nonantum residents are as hospitable towards foreigners as those of other villages, for Herr Grossmeyer can readily testify to that, yet her citizens are unusually patriotic.

Unusually patriotic means in that vicinity more than cheering the stars and stripes and the echoing of patriotic sentiments. It means true courage in defence of the nation's emblem, and more than eternal vigilence in protecting the honor of "old glory." That this latter qualification should predominate the character of a Nonantum citizen it is especially essential as joining Nonantum in the burgh of Watertown. In Watertown there is located a United States arsenal. Here, it is reported almost daily, are Spanish spies seen lurking about the grounds.

With knowledge of such proceedings Nonantum citizens feel that it behooves them to be ever on the alert. That they were not caught napping last Friday evening the following narrative will show:

Now, although Herr Grossmeyer was a thorough German, knew none other than his native tongue, and was as unfamiliar with the language of the Dons as Key West correspondents are with truth, his actions, in the eyes of Silver Lake inhabitants, appeared so suspicous that he was seized as a Spanish spy.

This of course was the climax of Herr Grossmeyer's adventures. The preceding events are those in which the interest lies. The luckless German had been in Brighton on Friday afternoon, and meeting a resident of Nonantum a friendship was formed. The hospitable Newtonian invited his new found companion to visit him at his Watertown street home. To this the latter consented, and before early evening both had arrived there. For a time the relations were most pleasant, although the services of an interpreter could not be obtained.

Herr Grossmeyer, to express his feeling of d ep regard towards "mine host," exhibited some very formidable looking documents. Grave doubts flashed across the mind of the host and he began to suspect. Some one in the house called him aside and in a stage whisper said, "Maybe he's a Spanish spy." And that settled it. It was not ten minutes later when the entire neighborhood had gathered in front of the house. Talk of all kinds, rash and rational, added to the excitement. In the meantime the Watertown police were sent for.

Promptly arriving they were prepared to seize the Spaniard, and his plans of Boston harbor defences. Without any parley they hustled him down to the Watertown station. Unaware that he was the cause of all this commotion, Grossmeyer looked from one to the other of the excited patriots, dazed and bewildered, but asking no questions.

When the Watertown bastile was reached Grossmeyer was able, by his papers, to prove he had been employed as a stoker on a German vessel, and had been honorably discharged. After a night as a guest of the town of Watertown he left hastily Saturday morning.

Public Schools May Celebrate.

Supt. of Schools,
Old Claflin School Bldg.,
Newtonville, Mass.

Dear Sir—I would suggest that as June 14th, 1777, was the date when Congress adopted the flag of the Union, that the public schools arrange for some special exercises on the coming anniversary of that day, having reference to the origin and adoption of our national colors.

Yours truly,
(sgd) HENRY E. COBB,
Mayor.

—A novel entertainment, which furnished amusement for some 100 young people, was the patriotic social at the Methodist church, last Monday evening. The affair was held in the church parlors, and was attended by a large number of church members and their friends. A neat sum was meeted for the treasury of the Epworth League.

—The annual Sunday school picnic of the Methodist Episcopal church, will be held at Forest Grove, Waltham, next Saturday. Cars start from the bank building at 9.30 sharp. There will be games for both boys and girls in the forenoon with appropriate prizes, and a ball game and possibly a boat race or two in the afternoon. Return cars leave Forest Grove at 6 p. m.

—The cricket game at Franklin field last Saturday, between Boston and Newton was a very one-sided contest, the home team winning by 157 for two wickets to 35. Pickering, Hobson and Perkins batted splendidly, while all the Boston bowling averages were good. Pickering leading with six wickets for eight runs. Hambin came late but was allowed to bowl for the visitors.

—The highway department are putting Crafts street, from California to the Waltham line, into fine condition. The Waltham end has just been fixed by that city and it would not do to have such a contrast. The street from California to Washington also needs sandpapering, although it is not so many months ago that it was put in order. Only eternal vigilance can keep streets in order, over which there is much heavy teaming on narrow tired wheels.

—Patrons of the Wellesley & Boston Street Railway have been enjoying riding on the 15 seat open cars, which were placed on the rails for the first time last Sunday. They are equipped with the Westinghouse air brake, and the electrical appointments are from the same manufactory. Eight of the cars arrived this week, and have been put into service on the different lines. Each has seating capacity of 90, and double motors give facilities for increased speed. A peculiar feature, which, however, is claimed a great improvement, is the double trolley equipment seen for the first time in this part of the country.

—The marriage of Miss Marguerite, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace S. Crowell to Mr. Henry Webb Crowell, took place at the home of the bride on Hunnewell avenue, Wednesday noon. Rev. F. B. Hornbrook officiated. The wedding was a quiet one, only relatives and a few intimate friends being present. The bride wore her mother's wedding dress of white silk and veil, and Miss Fay Crowell was maid of honor. Her gown was of yellow organdie over white silk. Miss Elizabeth Stetson of New York was bridesmaid. The best man was Mr. Joseph Warren Crowell. The flowers used in decorating the house were daisies, which were used in great profusion, in all the rooms. Mr. and Mrs. Crowell left the same day for a two weeks' driving tour, probably to the mountains.

—As a result of a number of complaints the police of division 1 have declared war upon sidewalk loiterers. For some time ladies have been annoyed by the number of men and boys who gather nightly on the north side of Washington street between the square and Church street. The actions of these loafers have been far from gentlemanly, and in many cases their remarks have been positively insuling. Tuesday evening Sergt. Tom Clay detailed Patrolmen Burke, O'Neil and W. E. Fuller for special duty in citizens clothes. About 9.30 o'clock Patrolmen Burke and O'Neil gathered in Frank Wornbolt and Wm. Cafferty at the corner of Hovey and Washington streets. Thirty minutes later Hugh Gallagher, John Quinlan and Wm. Neary were arrested at Bacon street by Sergt. Clay and Patrolman Fuller. All were charged with violating the city ordinances. Wednesday morning they were brough before Judge Kennedy and fined $5 each.

—Miss L. B. Sloane of Waban street is visiting relatives in Detroit, Mich.

—Mr. W. H. Foss and family of Franklin street are summering at Point Allerton.

—Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Billings attended the Chatman-Titcomb wedding at Kennebunkport, Wednesday.

—Mrs. Tilden and children of Philadelphia are guests of her sister, Mrs. J. T. Lodge, of Fairmont avenue.

—Miss Mabel Seelye of Amherst, daughter of ex President Seelye, is the guest of Miss Grace Weston.

—Mr. G. Wilkins Shaw, formerly of this place but now of Lowell, has been in town this week the guest of friends.

—Mr. E. P. Burnham has purchased the Towne estate on California street, and will soon take up his residence there.

—Rev. W. H. Davis goes to Lynn, Mass., next Tuesday, to assist at the installation of Rev. H. A. Covell as pastor of the North church.

—During the week there have been several large picnic parties on the Newton street railway cars going to Forest Grove, Waltham.

—Patrolman Haynes has returned from his vacation. Patrolmen Goode and Desmond left Wednesday to enjoy vacations of two weeks.

—Mr. F. A. Brooks and family have this week removed from Boston and reopened their residence, corner of Centre and Sargent streets.

—The new Christ church, Waltham, will be opened Friday evening, June 17th. It is very beautiful. Persons from Newton take 7 p. m. car from Nonantum square.

—Joseph Edwards, 11 years old, whose home is on Dunston street, was bitten in the face by a dog belonging to Arthur Corrigan about 9 o'clock Wednesday evening.

—The wedding of Mr. F. L. Beverly, the well known baker, and Miss Abbie B. Munson of East Machias, Me., will take place next Wednesday in East Machias, Me.

—Mr. and Mrs. William Parker Jones, after a five months absence in California and Hawaiian Islands, have returned to Newton. They will reside with Mrs. John A. Kenrick, Mr. Jones' sister.

—George Rosen, the proprietor of a shoe store on Watertown street, Nonantum, reported at police headquarters, Wednesday morning, that thieves entered his place of business and carried off several pairs of shoes.

—The summer arrangements of services went into effect in Grace church last Sunday. The hours are the same 10.45 a. m. and 7.30 p. m., but the parts are separated so that the first is over by 12 m. and the night service ends at 8.30 p. m.

—Members of Nonantum Colony, Pilgrim Fathers, entertained a large number of friends Monday evening in Whitman hall, Nonantum building. Whist and dancing formed the principal features of the evening's entertainment.

—Music in Grace church Sunday night:

Processional, "O what the joy and glory must be," Dykes
Magnificat, King Hall
Nunc Dimittis, King Hall
Solo, "The Holy City," Adams
Retrocessional, 421, "Lead us heavenly Father, lead us."

—At the Immanuel Baptist church next Sunday morning Rev. Dr. Merrill will occupy the pulpit as usual. In the evening a special service will be held beginning at 7 o'clock, when the work of the college settlements will be presented by Mr. Wood and others from Boston. The public is cordially invited.

—John O'Brien of West street had his right foot crushed about 9 o'clock Wednesday morning while on Washington street. O'Brien was standing by his wagon when the horse suddenly started, and the wheel passed over his foot. O'Brien sustained a painful, though not serious injury. He is employed by Mr. John Joyce.

—Col. and Mrs. Alex. M. Ferris of Hunnewell hill have opened their beautiful summer home (Stone Groton) at Penzance, Wood's Holl. The Colonel is anticipating a long visit from his niece who has recently become the bride of Mr. Miles Bronson, President's assistant to Mr. Callaney, who succeeded Mr. Chauncey Depew as president of the New York Central railroad.

—Mrs. Jane A. Meachon, formerly of this place, died Tuesday at the Newton Hospital aged 90 years. Mrs. Meachon had made her home in Newton many years. Her son, who is a resident of Brookline, was the architect who designed the Channing and Eliot churches. The body of Mrs. Meachon was removed to Brookline for interment.

—John Maloney of Galen street, Watertown, employed by Contractor John Joyce, met with a painful accident while at work in the excavation for the new Chesley block adjoining the engine house on Washington street about 4 o'clock last Saturday afternoon. He was engaged in loading a tip-cart, when a second wagon came into collision with the wheels of Maloney's cart, pinning Maloney between the two vehicles. The force of the shock caused him to sustain several severe bruises, though he was not seriously injured. There was delay in the arrival of physicians though several were immediately summoned. Dr. O'Donnell attended the injured man, and ordered his removal to the Newton hospital where he was taken by Patrolman Harrison in the police ambulance.

—A sale will be held on the afternoon of June 25, at the grounds of Mr. W. H. Emerson, corner of Washington and Hovey streets, in aid of the Newton Vacation Week. The following report of the last year's work may be of interest to some who aided the cause. Fifteen worn-out working women and girls were given a vacation of a week or more, and as many tired mothers, with their children, enjoyed day excursions. An outing was also given to the girls of the Pomroy Home and a small sum donated towards a picnic for the boys of the Denison House, Boston, and to the Sea-Shore Institute. This was accomplished with the receipts of the sale and contributions amounting, in all, to $250. Articles for the sale or donations of money may be left at the Y. M. C. A. school rooms, or sent to 89 Walnut Park.

—With more than a score of attractive features, made up of all the novelties in the entertainment line, amusement seekers will, without doubt, find every possible facility for thoroughly enjoying Bunker Hill day, if they attended the Open Air Fete given under the auspices of the ladies of the Immanuel Baptist church, on the grounds of Mrs. George S. Harwood's estate on Ivanhoe street, today. The handsome lawn about "Sunnyhurst" has been so transformed as to form a scene much resembling an Oriental village on market day. Booths of all sizes and description have been erected about the enclosure and are heavily laden with a supply of useful and fancy articles. There are also tents where refreshments can be obtained in the form of a substantial lunch or lemonade, confectionery and the like. A palmist, phrenologist, prestidigitator will afford no end of interest and mirth, while the "stock exchange," the "golf bonnets," pony rides and archer's booth offer no end of thorough enjoyment. The Chinese table is a feature of unusual interest containing many articles that show the varied accomplishments of the skilled artisans of the Flowery Kingdom.

—P. H. Robinson has returned from North Brookfield.

—Miss Bates of Tremont street arrived home from Philadelphia yesterday.

—Lieut. Amos Betts of the Salvation Army has returned from Rockland, Me.

—Miss Bertha M. Bentley has returned from an extended visit in Falls Church, Virginia.

—Mrs. N. P. Cutler and Miss Sallie Cutler arrived home on Monday from their extended European tour.

—Mr. Frank D. Frisbie and Mr. Robert D. Holt are at Nahant, the guests of Judge J. T. Wilson at his handsome estate, Edgehill.

—Mr. Fred A. Hubbard has been in Greenfield this week attending the convention of the Mass. Pharmaceutical Association.

—At the meeting of the Women's Association in the chapel of Eliot church, Tuesday afternoon, the topic was "Thoughts for Vacation Days."

—A well attended public entertainment and social was held Wednesday evening in Whitman hall, under the auspices of the Newton Lodge, Knights of Malta.

—The flag raising, under the auspices of Centre street merchants, will be held the latter part of next week. As yet the committee has not been able to arrange the date.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Tucker of Arlington street and Miss Alice F. Peirce left yesterday for West Stockbridge, Mass., and will spend a week driving through the Berkshire Hills.

—Rev. Charles H. Brent of St. Stephen's church, Boston, will speak in Grace church on Sunday morning. Mr. Brent is the clergyman who came near being chosen the Bishop of Rhode Island before the selection of Dr. McVickar.

—Ground was broken the early part of this week for a new building in Nonantum square on the land owned by Ransom C. Taylor, and for so long occupied as an office by Mr. Henry C. Daniels, the genial proprietor of the Nonantum stables. No other citizens have done so much to ornament and build up the square as Messrs. Taylor and Whitman. This addition to their already large properties, will, we learn, have a frontage on Washington street of about fifty feet and will be four stories high, and fully in keeping with the handsome buildings which they have previously erected. The lower floor will, in addition to the office of Mr. Daniels, contain three handsome stores built especially to accommodate those desiring ample light and low rentals. The upper floors will be finished in a first class manner and with all the modern conveniences as apartments, and will have ample light and air.

—It was a large audience of enthusiastic and admiring parents and friends that greeted the pupils of the Newton private school at the closing exercises of that institution in Y. M. C. A. hall yesterday afternoon. The program of exercises was unusually interesting, and each number received full appreciation. The hall was decorated with a profusion of flowers, while elaborate festoons of red, white and blue bunting added greatly to the beauty of the scene. The program: Hymn, school; essay, Margaret Gilman; recitation, Roland Batson; songs, middle and advanced classes; essay, Marjorie Goodman; recitation, Harion Hobbs; Absent le Chat, les Souris Dansent, French class; songs, primary class, recitation, Freda Stone; Lancelot and Elaine, literature class; music, Eulalia Lovejoy; calisthenics, advanced class; song, middle and advanced classes; The Truants, primary and middle classes. Address and presentation of certificates and prizes by Rev. G. W. Shinn, D. D.

—Mrs. Sarah Louise Calley, wife of Lee J. Calley, connected with the firm of Critchett, Sibley & Co., died very suddenly of heart failure at her home on Church street Monday evening. Mrs. Calley was born in Northampton, Feb. 22, 1851, the daughter of Rev. Thomas Marcy, a Methodist clergyman, well known in the western part of the state, and of Lucy (Flagg) Marcy. In early life she removed to Saugus. She was married in 1868. During her residence in Saugus she was a member of the Lynn choral union, and was one of those who sang in the Peace jubilee. She came to Newton in 1876, and has since resided here. Mrs. Calley was a member of the Daughters of the Revolution, and also took an active part in the affairs of the Newton Social Science Club. She was a woman of rare culture, genial temperament and kindly charity, and her sudden death is greatly mourned by her wide circle of friends in this city and elsewhere. The funeral was held at the Calley residence yesterday afternoon, Rev. F. B. Hornbrooke officiated.

REAL ESTATE.

Edward F. Barnes sold at auction Saturday afternoon a parcel of vacant land on the easterly side of Walker street, Newtonville, containing about 93,000 square feet, and having a good frontage on the street. It was purchased by Higgins & Nickerson for 6 1-4 cents a square foot, they also assuming a sewer tax of about $600 and the taxes for this year. The property belonged to the Walker estate, and is assessed for 8 cents a foot.

M. Sinclair Williams has sold for Mrs. Charlotte M. Towne 51,000 feet of land, with dwelling and stable, corner of California street and Fairoaks avenue, to Mr. Edward P. Burnham of Newton, who will occupy it.

Aban, Trowbridge & Co., have rented the upper suite of 49 Pearl street to Mr. J. E. Hayden, of Cambridge, also 29 Maple street, to Miss L. S. Talmadge of Boston, and 430 Centre street to Miss N. J. Austin of Channing street.

A better inquiry for Newton boulevard land is reported than at any time since the war scare came up, and two sales of land in that territory have just been made. The Newton boulevard syndicate has sold a parcel of over 26,000 feet on the southwesterly corner of Hammond street and Wood road to Hollis B. Page of Waverly, who has contracted for the erection of an attractive house for his own use. Judge Robert R. Bishop has sold a lot of 10,000 square feet on the corner of Montvale road and Hobart street, on which the purchaser will build a residence for himself.

Interesting Information.

Attention is called to the ad. in another column of "Newmarket" 816 Exchange Building, Boston, announcing a substantial business enterprise, already largely developed, and soundly conducted by reliable business men. Small investors, as well as large, find this opportunity one of rare advantage, promising handsome dividends.

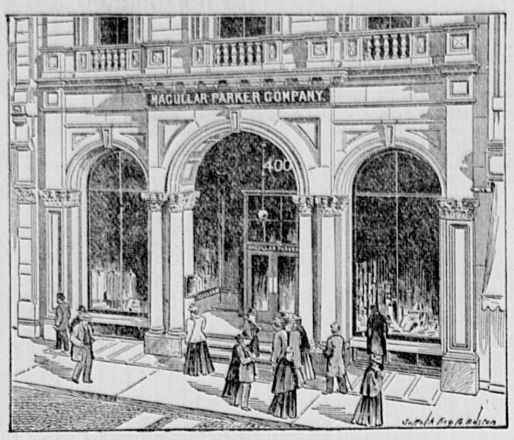

Now First Class.

Among the changes in the salaries of New England postmasters announced at Washington this week is that of Postmaster Ellis of the central postoffice. He will now receive $3100 instead of $2300 as formerly. The central postoffice has been advanced from the second to the first class.

FOUR HUNDRED
WASHINGTON STREET, BOSTON.

ON BEACON HILL.

(Special Legislative Correspondence.)

Beacon Hill, June 15.

The last date set by the speaker for prorogation was yesterday. He was sadly disappointed. Instead of getting prorogued, the General Court went down the harbor by the invitation of the Boston members on the city's boat, J. Putnam Bradlee, viewing the fortifications of the harbor, and having a general good time. I heard several very pointed hints that the society of the members of the senate was not desired, the house members preferring that they stay at home and try and get somewhere on their calendar. But the committee was headed by a member of the senate and there wasn't the slightest intention of letting the house go on a good time while the senate worked. This morning the house calendar has three matters on it, and the lower branch will not meet until afternoon. The senate calendar has today twenty-three numbers, and there are some reports yet to come in, notably one on the governor's recommendations in relation to the cattle commission.

Senator Harwood voted on Monday for the rejection of the Bennett bill for a state highway between Boston and Lynn, along Revere beach. A little later he participated in the discussion over the formation of a school teachers retirement fund in Boston. As an old school teacher, he was naturally interested in this question. He opposed an amendment to make the bill permissive, and favored its engrossment.

The senate today took from the table a motion to reconsider the rejecting of the Newton bill relative to the granting of stable licenses. It will not be debated until tomorrow. I have heretofore explained that it provides for a written notice to all residents within 200 feet of the proposed location, before a stable license is granted.

The bills appropriating $1,000,000 for the metropolitan park district and providing for the dam across the Charles river have both been enacted, and I should think Mr. Pickard would feel that he had earned a good summer's rest, for he has never wavered in his devotion to the desires of his district in these matters.

There has been a great deal of discussion within a week on a bill to limit the connection between savings banks and other banks. When the Governor sent in his special message upon the subject, a great many people thought of the new Newton bank building. The savings bank commissioners assure me, however, that their stringent measure does not affect the Newton banks. However, Senator Harwood evidently believed it well to be on the safe side, and so favored the milder bill reported by the committee on banks and banking. Senator Irwin of Hampshire, smarting under the knowledge of the suffering by the Northampton bank defalcation, insisted that the commissioners bill be substituted, and carried his point on Monday, losing Tuesday on the question of reconsideration. There is yet time for plenty of friction before the bill is enacted.

Senator Harwood participated in the discussion over the street railway bill today. Its engrossment was put over until tomorrow, when it may meet rough treatment.

The designer of the Bulfinch dome illumination, Miss Alice Clement of West Newton, is now serving as a secretary in the headquarters of the Volunteer Aid Association in the Commonwealth building. This organization is finding its hands full as a result of the demands of the men in the camps, and in getting ready for casualties likely to come.

Mr. Hayward's committee has recently reported a state tax of $1,500,000, and is now at work preparing the final bills for covering appropriations authorized by the various measures passed. Among them will be a war loan bill.

I should add to the paragraph in relation to the cattle commission, that the committee on agriculture has desired a resolve providing for an investigation by the state board of health into the use of tuberculin as a diagnostic agent.

I noticed Capt. Hamlin, executive secretary, pleading with the caterer of the J. Putnam Bradlee, to vouchsafe him some ice cream, yesterday. He had previously secured a roll and cup of coffee. This part of the affair was very badly managed, and must have annoyed one so accustomed to doing a thing in shape as the captain.

I observe that the state board of lunacy and charity has met the children's bureau agitation by establishing a department of minor wards, under Dr. Derby, the superintendent of out-door poor. MANN.

Cutter's Silks.

The Meyer thread, which is manufactured in large quantities for both domestic and manufacturing purposes, is conceded to be the finest on the market. For family use, it is made with a silk or soft finish, and for manufacturing is made especially for every purpose for which thread is used, and comes on ready wound boubins to fit all styles of sewing machines, and in all sizes and colors; it can be had large enough to moor a vessel with, down to a delicate size scarcely larger than a spider's web. It also comes for sewing carpets in spools and skeins, which is used extensively by the largest and best carpet houses throughout the land. The Meyer thread is made in sufficient quantities every day to put a girdle around the earth, and is sent to every portion of it where thread is used. The moral of all this lies in the fact that, in buying your spool silks and threads, see that each and every spool bears the name of Cutter's sewing silk and Meyer threads, and then you will get the real genuine article and not be deceived by cheap and inferior brands. Insist upon it and take no other.

Manual Training Now Required by Law.

To the Editor of the Graphic:—

The action of our school committee in dropping from the list of reappointed teachers the two at present employed in manual training is understood to be in anticipation of cutting off this branch of instruction in the schools. At the same time that the committee took this action the legislature was about enacting a law which requires this branch to be taught, both in elementary and High schools of every city of twenty thousand or more inhabitants. The teaching has been required in High schools in this class of cities since 1894. The amendment which provides for it in elementary schools was enacted without dissent, and the act was promptly signed by the governor. The provision is contained in section 4 of the senate bill, No. 247 of the present legislative session, and is as follows:

Sect. 4. Every city of twenty thousand or more inhabitants shall maintain as part of both its elementary and High school system the teaching of manual training.

The act is in accordance with the deliberate judgment, not only of our legislature, but of the leading educators of this and of other civilized nations.

For evident reasons it has been impracticable for Newton to have manual training in her High school, but she has in a conservative way done what was practicable; she has provided for the teaching of this branch to all pupils, of two grammar grades, if their parents so elect. The experiment was first made on the south side of the city, and more recently by vote of the committee, a plant and teacher were provided for the north side, and the teaching of manual training as on the south side, was begun there. Thus the city with due deliberation has maintained her reputation for being in the front rank of educational progress. Manual training in its most elementary form, sloyd work, is introduced into her elementary schools in advance of legislation requiring it.

It is late in the history of the movement for introducing manual training into the schools, to argue that it has an educational value. Manual training more than any other school exercise recognizes the principle that we learn to do by doing. In the sloyd work the child is exercised in doing in a perfectly systematic way something he can fully understand and enjoy, and of which he can see an immediate practical use, which cannot be said of some of his other school exercises. If there were nothing else to show the educational value of the sloyd manual training than the interest which the child has in first marking the form he is to cut, and then in cutting to the mark, this would be enough to show that the practice tends to increase the power of careful attention, than which nothing has greater educational value. On this account the practice required in sloyd work has greater value in the elementary than it has in the High school. But with the present requirement of the law that manual training shall be taught in our elementary schools, the committee will probably restore to the ranks the teachers of manual training at their next meeting and continue to the children the instruction so well begun. Notwithstanding this probability, every citizen who has a definite opinion upon the subject would do well to let his opinion be known to some member of the school committee, before their next Wednesday's meeting.

GEORGE A. WALTON.

Want "Scientific" Temperance in Schools.

The study of "scientific" temperance may be added to Newton's school curriculum if the efforts of the Newton Christian Endeavor Union members are crowned with success. Backed by a strong determination that it shall be accepted as a study in the schools next year, Endeavorers in all parts of the city are actively engaged in soliciting the signatures of those parents who favor the idea.

Petitions have been liberally circulated, and already a large number of names have been obtained. Some years ago "scientific" temperance was taught in the public schools, in a similar manner as physiology. Since the introduction of some new features of the school curriculum it has been dropped, although there is a state law in effect requiring all public schools to adopt it as a study.

At the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Union at the First Congregational church, Newton Centre, last Monday evening, Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, World's superintendent of Scientific Instruction in schools, gave an interesting address on the subject. At the close of her address it was voted to take such action as might bring about the adoption of the study by the Newton school committee.

The meeting was presided over by the president of the union, Mr. J. Luther Roll. Miss Gonyan sang very acceptably and Mr. Williams' cornet solos were well received. Prof. Wells outlined the plans of the Christian Endeavorers at the coming convention in Nashville, Tenn.

Noise on the Fourth.

To the Editor of the Graphic:—

It has occurred to me that if your readers should make a strong appeal to our city government, the honorable board might take some action to prohibit the firing of the cannon cracker the night of July 3rd, and during the next day, in the residential parts of the city. It seems to me the older ones should be willing and the children be taught to enjoy the day, making a moderate amount of noise if necessary, but not cause the actual suffering that the cannon cracker inflicts on many who are nervous and sick. Will the citizens take some action on this? X. X. X.

D. A. R.

An important business meeting of the Lucy Jackson Chapter D. A. R. was held Thursday, June 9th, at Mrs. J. R. Carter's, Mt. Vernon street, West Newton, at ten o'clock.

Mrs. Ella Sargent, delegate from the chapter to the Volunteer Aid Association, presented a report giving an outline of the work recommended by that body.

Voted; To send one hundred abdominal bands and fifty pjamas to the V. A. A. Mrs. Charles A. Dennison gave $5.00 towards purchase of materials.

Voted unanimously, to give up the usual field day and use the funds to join the Volunteer Aid Association. A rising vote of thanks taken to Mr. and Mrs. Hosmer for the first gift of material to be used for the soldiers.

Mrs. Vosburgh, Mrs. Thrasher and Miss Alexander offered to cut out the pjamas. Twenty-five ladies offered to sew, and a meeting for the purpose was appointed at the Unitarian church parlor, June 13th, at 8.30.

Mrs. Manning's reply, embodying the action of the National Board with regard to the chapter's pledge of $500 for a hospital ship, and the resolutions adopted at the National Board meeting read.

Voted, to send one-half of the money raised to Washington, the remainder to be used in our state for the army or navy, as occasion shall require.

Resolved, That if the sum raised by voluntary subscription does not reach $500, twenty-five dollars be taken from the treasury to add to the amount.

Voted, Those who do not wish to work may feel privileged to contribute money.

Voted, That members of the chapter set aside jellies and delicacies from their summer preserves for the army and navy.

Voted, That the members of the chapter assist Mrs. Fyffe in sending a box of delicacies to her son for distribution among the sailors.

The cordial good feeling and ardor manifested by those present was very strongly felt. It was an encouraging occasion.

Firemen's Memorial Sunday.

There was no street parade, no public exercises, no elaborate program of services, yet Newton's brave firemen did not forget their dead comrades last Sunday. It required no ostentation or grand display to mark the observance of Firemen's Memorial Sunday.

A bouquet of the rarest roses, or pretty bunch of the choicest pinks laid tenderly at the headstone of the grave told the story. Silent, yet befitting tributes, these showing clearly the feelings of the "red-jackets" towards those who years before stood by their side seeking to conquer the demon fire, and by their efforts winning for Newton its honored position among the greatest "fire-fighters" of the country.

Leaving engine 3's house at West Newton about 9.15 o'clock last Sunday morning, a committee of active fire department members boarded a barge, and driving to Newton arrived at engine 1's house about 9.30. Here the flowers were received, and a number of the local company having boarded the barge, the delegation started on its rounds to the cemeteries. Visits were made to the Calvary cemetery, Waltham, Needham cemetery, Needham, Newton cemetery and the Centre street burying ground.

The detail included Chief Randlett, Asst. Chief Humphreys, Engineers Judkins of engine 1, Colby of engine 3, Capt. Horrigan of hose 1, Capt. Nichols hose 2, Capt. English hose 3, Capt. Savage hose 4, Capt. Washburn hose 5, Capt. Hayden hose 6, Capt. Trowbridge hose 7, Capt. Murray hose 8, Capt. Watson truck 1, Capt. Corbett truck 2.

The Newton Veteran Firemen observed the day in a similar manner. A delegation headed by the president, W. Parker Leavitt, made a tour of the cemeteries, and on the graves of deceased members placed handsome floral tributes.

Natick, 15, Newton, 6.

Tuesday afternoon Natick high defeated Newton high, 15 to 6. It was one of the best games played in the Middlesex interscholastic association, and by winning, Natick high takes the championship. Natick played Somerville high Wednesday afternoon at Tufts oval. Somerville lost the game played with Natick on the latter's grounds early in the season. The score:

Work for the Soldiers.

To the Editor of the Graphic.:—

When, in times of great public emergencies, there comes special occasions where the work of the individual is quite as necessary as is that of the body politic, it not infrequently occurs that the opportunity for quiet, noble, action goes by through some real or fancied prejudice which it would be better to ignore.

Such may be the attitude of many in the present hour. Through no volition of our own, grim war has fastened itself upon us, and all that women can do in this anxious season is to try and alleviate the distress which follows in its train. Government can and will do much, but nowhere is the special aptitude of woman's nature shown more truly, than by attention to those minute details which too often are overlooked in the larger thought of the national safety.

It is to one such channel of providing for the sick and needy that public attention is again asked. It need no longer be urged that the Newton Branch of the Mass. Vol. Aid Association stands ready to carry on the work so well begun. Already 297 bands have been sent to the central organization. 100 pajamahs have been cut and are partially distributed. Surgical shirts are asked for, but funds are required to purchase material; more workers also are needed.

Shall the hour pass and man wage war for other's freedom be denied the common necessaries of life, through the inglorious ease of those whom they have left at home. To all who are willing to give of their time or substance, the headquarters of the Newton Branch of the M. V. A. A., at the Channing church parlors will be open for work on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday of each week. Gifts of old linen are requested. Per order of the Board, E. B. BATES, Sec'y.

Electric Railway Excursions.

Few people have an idea of the magnitude and rapid growth of electric railway traffic in Eastern Massachusetts and Rhode Island. A few facts from Derrah's Street Railway Guide, just issued, will surprise even those who are accustomed to take long rides in the electric cars. The number of miles operated by the street railways of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, included in Derrah's Guide, is 1,368.25, out of a total mileage of 1,738.50 in both states. The number of passengers carried last year by the street railways included in the Guide, was 312,000,000. These facts indicate the need of a work of this kind, and in addition to the complete tables showing routes, rates of fare, distances, etc., the edition this year contains more than 160 pages of reading matter descriptive of all the principal points of interest along lines of the street railways. This matter will be found of great value to those who make excursions on the trolley trips in summer. The volume is of a convenient size for the pocket, and is handsomely illustrated with some 90 half-tone views of places of interest. The author of the Guide has been connected with the West End Street Railway Company for the past nine years, and has made a special study of the street railways throughout New England.

The Guide has the endorsement of the Massachusetts street railways of the state. It is published by Robert H. Derrah, 115 Devonshire street, Boston, and for sale at all the principal hotels, news stands and railway stations. Price 15 cents.

Attleboro, 7, Newton Club A. A., 2.

At Attleboro, last Saturday afternoon, the local club won another victory by defeating the Newton Club A. A., 7 to 2. Ferris made a fine record at stealing bases. The double plays, in which Donovan, Robinson, Brady, Rodman, Shores, Dickinson and Winslow participated, were features of the game. The score:

Children's Sunday.

Hundreds of little folk attended the morning and afternoon services at the different churches last Sunday, and with fervent prayers and choruses of pretty song appropriately observed Children's Sunday. In all the churches were profuse floral decorations, which with programs of special music marked an occasion of more than common interest.

In Eliot church, Newton, there were exercises by the Sunday school scholars; at the Baptist church, Newton Centre, at 4 p. m., a children's concert was held, with a program of excellent numbers. At the Church of the Messiah in Auburndale, at 3.30 p. m., was a gathering of the pupils of the Sunday schools of the Episcopal, Methodist and Congregational churches. There were recitations and songs by the children and addresses by Rev. Mr. Matteson, Rev. Mr. Worth, Rev. Arthur P. Greenleaf and Rev. C. M. Southgate.

The services at the other churches throughout the city were quite impressive, and largely attended by members of the congregation and parents of the children.

Call Daily Expected.

Following weeks of expectancy Capt. Springer of Co. C has been assured that his command will, with the 5th regiment, be taken as part of the quota of this state on the second call.

This result has been brought about by the decision on the part of the general government not to increase the batteries of the 1st heavy artillery to 200 men each and its desire to further increase its infantry force by adding to the service another regiment completely outfitted in every part.

While the last to start, the 5th infantry will be found the peer of those that have already left the Old Bay state. In personnel, it is the equal of the best, and its companies are so situated that the recruits necessary to bring the command up to the war department requirements will be of the best brawn and muscle of the different sections.

AN OPERATION AVOIDED.

Mrs. Rosa Gaum Writes to Mrs. Pinkham About it. She Says:

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I take pleasure in writing you a few lines to inform you of the good your Vegetable Compound has done me. I cannot thank you enough for what your medicine has done for me; it has, indeed, helped me wonderfully.

For years I was troubled with an ovarian tumor, each year growing worse, until at last I was compelled to consult with a physician. He said nothing could be done for me but to go under an operation

In speaking with a friend of mine about it, she recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, saying she knew it would cure me. I then sent for your medicine, and after taking three bottles of it, the tumor disappeared. Oh! you do not know how much good your medicine has done me. I shall recommend it to all suffering women.—Mrs. ROSA GAUM, 720 Wall St., Los Angeles, Cal.

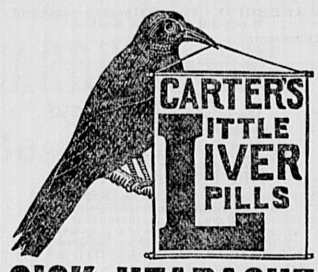

The great and unvarying success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in relieving every derangement of the female organs, demonstrates it to be the modern safeguard of woman's happiness and bodily strength. More than a million women have been benefited by it.

Every woman who needs advice about her health is invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass.

A child, of Aurora, Me., had Eczema on its face, head, and body, causing intense pain.

RANSOM CLARKE TAYLOR.

THE MAN WHO HAS REVOLUTIONIZED THE BUSINESS SECTION OF NEWTON.

The Granite Monthly of New Hampshire is publishing sketches of New Hampshire men who have made their mark in life, and in a recent issue gave the following account of Mr. Taylor, who has transformed the business section of Newton, by putting up so many handsome blocks about Nonantum square. It says:

"The heart of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts," as the city of Worcester is popularly styled, includes among its population of one hundred thousand people, some seven hundred men and women, who are sons and daughters of the state of New Hampshire. These people of New Hampshire birth are prominent in the ecclesiastical, educational, commercial, industrial, and political life of Worcester, and they have contributed in great degree to the city's conspicuous position in all these respective and distinct features.

To the growth and extension of Worcester's commercial and industrial interests no single individual has contributed more largely during the past twenty-five years than Ransom Clarke Taylor, who was born in the town of Winchester, N. H., Feb. 24, 1829. Beginning a business career at the age of eighteen, not only without financial means, but under an obligation to the extent of three hundred dollars to his father for three years' time of his minority age, his success is succinctly summarised in the statement that he is, in 1898, as he has been for some years, the largest individual taxpayer in the city of Worcester. Yet even this statement is incomplete as indicative of Mr. Taylor's success in his business career for he is a large tax-payer in the cities of Newton and Taunton, in Massachusetts, and Pawtucket and Providence, in Rhode Island. All told, the aggregate sum he pays annually in taxes in Worcester and elsewhere is fifty thousand dollars, a goodly fortune in itself, and such as is given to but comparatively few men to accumulate in a life time.

Mr. Taylor's parents were Charles and Susan (Butler) Taylor, and his ancestors for several generations were residents of Winchester. The homestead and ancestral farm were located in the easterly portion of the town.

When a mere boy, Mr. Taylor moved with his parents, to the town of Northbridge in Worcester county, Mass. In Northbridge, his father engaged in the retail meat business, and when only twelve years of age young Taylor was wont to assist in his father's business by driving the delivery team about the town.

In this picture of the boy of twelve years delivering the orders of his father's customers, are seen those traits of character, which, dominating the boy, and thoughtfully cultivated and shrewdly directed by him, developed that boy into the man of great business affairs, which affairs, considering that they are of his own creation, have few equals for their magnitude in the New England of today. Self reliant, fertile in resources, an ability to grasp and to correctly consider every detail and aspect of a given situation, a wise discretion and judgment, and a courage absolutely without hesitation, he has by these traits, aided by a constant industry, gained his notable success.

At seventeen Mr. Taylor went to Worcester and assumed charge for his father, of a factory and business for the manufacture and sale of the various products incident to the trade. Entire success attended this effort of young Taylor. At eighteen he bought his time of his father and embarked in business for himself in the town of Sutton, also in Worcester county. His start in business was with two men and two horses. After four years in Sutton he removed to Worcester, which city has ever since been his home. Continuing the business of manufacturing meat products, it was not long before he had branches in New York city, Albany, and Troy, N. Y.; Hartford and New Haven, Conn.; Springfield, Taunton, and other points in Massachusetts. His business ventures rapidly expanded and eventually gave employment to one hundred men and a like number of horses. When not long past his majority he was counted one of the most prominent among the business men of Worcester city and county.

At a comparatively early date in his business career, Mr. Taylor began to buy real estate in Worcester, a practice he has maintained, with an ever increasing magnitude, to this day. His first purchase was a property valued at $9000, and for this he made a cash payment of just one half the stipulated price. His Worcester realty holdings increasing and requiring his undivided attention, he disposed of his manufacturing property and has since dealt wholly in real estate as a business. His specialty in Worcester real estate has been the development of commercial and industrial buildings. His operations in these classes of property have been largely confined to Main and Front streets, the two principal business thoroughfares of Worcester. Of the second named street, Mr. Taylor owns above one half of its entire length of quite one half mile. Mr. Taylor built the first five-story, the first six-story, and the first seven-story business structures in Worcester. From the first he has always kept in advance of the growth of the city. Worcester has not given Mr. Taylor the opportunity to expand his business and increase his wealth to near the extent that he has given the city its opportunity to grow and develop along the many lines that afford Worcester its peculiar strength and stabie, never fluctuating prosperity.

Mr. Taylor is not one of those men who owe success in business to a train of fortuitous circumstances, but on the contrary he has made opportunities and favorable conditions arise from the wisdom of his own acts. As the business growth of Worcester has felt the need of more room and better facilities it has found Mr. Taylor awaiting its coming into new territory with new buildings, new streets, and improved facilities. He sees, and has ever seen, unlike some real estate owners common to all communities, that the acceptance of measures which tend to improve a town or city, tend also to increase and accelerate the growth of such city or town thereby, as a matter of course increasing the value of individual property. Hence it is that Mr. Taylor is always a warm advocate of all improvements in Worcester of a public nature, although his share of the expense, in the matter of taxes, is greater than that of any other individual.

Mentally and physically, Mr. Taylor is a well balanced man; well proportioned and finely developed in every respect, and having the body and mind to perform a great amount of work without worry or fatigue.

He is a financier whose judgment and discretion are widely recognized. For many years he has been prominent in the affairs of the First National bank of Worcester, and other moneyed institutions of that city. He is an ardent lover of horses and it is an especial pleasure for him to test his favorites on the speedways of the city, and in friendly contests of speed with the horses of his acquaintances.

Mr. Taylor is the most democratic of men and no person, however humble his condition may be, ever fails to receive from him the fairest consideration.

Politically he has no strong party ties. He has served a term of two years in the Worcester board of aldermen, and has been the candidate of the Democratic party for the executive council.

Mr. Taylor has been twice married. His first wife was Mary Louise Chase, of Sutton, Mass., and to her memory is named the largest of Mr. Taylor's buildings in Worcester, and it is also the largest commercial building, with a single exception, in the city.

The present Mrs. Taylor was Mary S. Steyens, of Newton, Mass. The children of both marriages are three sons and three daughters. Of the sons, Ransom Frederick and Forrest W. are associated with their father in business, while the youngest son, Willard S., is a pupil in one of the Worcester high schools. The daughters are Emma Sophia, Agnes Louise, the wife of Harry P. Davis, an electrical engineer with the Westinghouse company, Pittsburg, Penn., and Florence Clarke. The first and third named daughters live in Worcester.

Various religious and charitable associations, and many individuals, have reason to remember Mr. Taylor's generosity, but his deeds of charity are ever as free from ostentation as is his daily life.

Mr. Taylor lives in the fashionable South End of Worcester, and in a Colonial mansion of the purest type of that style of architecture. It is spacious in its dimensions, stately, yet full of repose, and pleasing in its details.

Sloyd in the Public Schools.

By a small majority the school board of this city has voted to discontinue the instruction in Sloyd the coming year.

This is plainly in disregard of the wishes of the great body of pupils, parents and teachers, who know the beneficial results of this work, even in the short time it has been in our schools. It is in disregard of the judgment of the leading educators of the land. Let me commend to those members of the board who seem to need it, the reading of the report of the committee of fifteen of the National Educational Association, published in Feb. 1985. Is manual training there put down among the "fads," or the things that may wisely be omitted or curtailed from the courses in our elementary schools? On the contrary, it is put down as an essential in child development. Its educational value is strongly insisted on.

Does our school board desire higher authority than this report written by Dr. William T. Harris, U. S. Commissioner of Education, and endorsed by all his colleagues? Some of them go further than he, and say that manual training should be in every grade of the elementary schools, beginning at the kindergarten. This is a sound position.

Oh, no: one cannot afford to give up the little ground gained in this direction. We cannot affort to take any backward steps. Caution is good at times, but in this instance it is a surrender of a great educational gain.

Conservatism is sometimes good, but there is no virtue in this step. It is a loss that cannot too soon be retrieved. The work in Sloyd should go on to more and better, developing with the city's growth and always equal to the educational standards and needs of the time.

There is no question that the board means well. Let it be advised by the highest educational intelligence and experience, and give Newton the results in a progressive and national course of school work, in which manual training is one of the essential elements.

NEWTON UPPER FALLS.

—Miss Kittie Stuart has returned from Gloucester.

—Mr. M. L. Pullen has returned from a trip to Nantasket.

—Mr. Horace Clark was in town this week visiting friends.

—Mr. Fred Kraus of Dedham has been in town this week visiting friends.

—Extensive repairs are being made to Mr. Eugene Fanning's residence on High street.

—George Chambers has recently closed a new contract with the government for the transportation of the mails between this place and Eliot.

—The members of the Newton Upper Falls Athletic Association were out in force last Friday evening to attend the monthly smoke talk held in the club rooms on High street.

—There was an interesting occasion at the residence of Mr. George Chambers on Thurston road last Sunday evening, when his two grandsons were christened. They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Chambers and Mr. and Mrs. Mayall.

—Some ambitious and enterprising patriot, who is certainly to be commended as a climber, mounted a tree over 125 feet high in Hemlock Gorge Reservation last Saturday night, and placed an American flag on the top of the uppermost branch.

—A lively baseball game between the N. U. F. A. A. nine and the Harbor Views of East Boston last Saturday afternoon on Dudley's field attracted a large crowd. The home team won by a score of 8 to 2. The playing of Billings catch for the Newtons and Hannafan, pitch, were features of the game.

—On Wednesday afternoon of this week the Pierian Club was entertained by its president, Mrs. Chas. Mills, at her home on Eliot street. The ladies passed a couple of hours very pleasantly on the lawn, in making needed garments for the Newton District Nursing Association. At four o'clock all adjourned to the dining room, where a very dainty lunch was prepared for them. The hostess was assisted in serving by Mrs. R. Haworth, Mrs. Jno. Coward, Mrs. L. P. Everett. The club adjourned late in the afternoon, each member feeling that thanks were due to Mrs. Mills for a most enjoyable time.

—Thomas White has left the employ of Contractor Cahill.

—There will be a baseball game on Dudley's field tomorrow afternoon.

—James Maloney has taken a position at the Newton Rubber works.

—Mr. William McDonald has been entertaining Boston friends this week.

—Mr. George Kerivan was up from Revere this week visiting relatives here.

—Mrs. Crawley of Central avenue is having her house repaired and improved.

—Mr. Edward Burke of Wakefield has been the guest of friends here this week.

—Mr. T. H. Smith of Smith's express has purchased a handsome new delivery wagon.

—The new steel smoke stack has this week been placed in position on the Silk Mill.

—Mr. and Mrs. James Connors of Sullivan avenue are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son.

—Mr. Louis P. Everett has broken ground for a house on vacant land formerly a part of the Jewett estate.

—The ladies sewing circle of the Methodist Episcopal church met yesterday afternoon and evening in the church parlors.

—Perseverance Lodge 10, G. T., will hold a public entertainment in Quinobequin hall on High street next Thursday evening.

—Miss Mamie Leary of Charlestown, who has been staying at the residence of Mr. James Collins of Central avenue, has returned to her home.

—Mr. Dennis Haggerty has returned from New York where he attended the annual reunion of the 99th N. Y. Volunteers. The company participated in the Civil War, and was considered one of the crack regiments.

—Mrs. Hopkins and her son William Hopkins, (Bud Brier of the Boston Globe), have taken the Billings house on Champa avenue, and began occupancy there last week. It is a fine old estate very beautifully located.

—The concert by the 1st regiment band in Hemlock Gorge park last Sunday afternoon was enjoyed by a crowd of several thousand people. The music was very good, and the management of the Newton & Boston street railway are to be congratulated on the success of the affair.

—There was a large attendance of members at the golf match played under the auspices of the Newton Upper Falls golf club on the Chestnut street links last Saturday. This afternoon a match is to be played, and will be followed by a party and reception on the grounds of Mr. Chas. Mills estate on Eliot street.

—No more desirable place for a concert on Sunday afternoon can be found than at Hemlock Gorge grove on the state reservation. Amidst a wealth of verdure and surrounded by a forest growth of hemlocks, chestnuts and other trees that remind one of the White Mountains, a concert was given last Sunday by the band of the First Regiment, Mass. Heavy Artillery, United States Volunteers, Frank L. Collins, bandmaster.

Think of living a year or two after one is dead; dead to all practical intents and purposes,—dead, with the autograph of death inscribed on brow and cheek and lip.

Thousands of women live for a year or two after all happiness and happiness have gone out of their lives. When a woman becomes hopelessly helpless and unhappy she is practically dead. The young woman to whom the future is a dreary waste, the young wife who is a helpless, nervous invalid, the mother whose babes are a burden instead of a blessing,—all these, unless they take the right measures to recover their health, are better dead than living. In the majority of cases these ghosts of women owe their condition to weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism. Frequently they have been deceived by the incorrect diagnosis of some obscure physician and do not understand the true nature of their trouble. It only costs a two-cent postage stamp for a woman to write and describe her condition to Dr. R. V. Pierce, an eminent and skilful specialist, for thirty years chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y. He will answer letters from ailing women without charge. He is the discoverer of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the greatest of all known medicines for women. It acts directly on the delicate organs concerned in maternity and makes them strong, healthy and vigorous. It banishes the indispositions of the anxious period and makes baby's coming easy and almost painless. It cures all disorders and displacements and checks exhausting drains.

"Previous to motherhood my wife was very sick," writes Dennis H. Connelly, Esq., of Clear Water, Wright Co., Minn. "Two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription made her well and strong."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure biliousness and constipation. One a dose. They never gripe.

CHRISTIAN AMUSEMENTS.

The question of what is proper for a religious body to do in the way of furnishing healthy amusement for young people is very suggestive of the change in religious sentiment, in that it is asked at all. Once all amusements were frowned upon, but more rational views are now taken of life, and it is not now considered that games are inconsistent with Evangelical Christianity.

One instance of the progress made is furnished by the Church Economist, a religious paper, which has been publishing a series of articles on the question whether a church is justified in including a bowling alley in its parish house, or secular wing. The articles were submitted to a committee of award, consisting of Rev. Dr. Henry Mottet, rector of the Episcopal church of the Holy Communion, and J. Cleveland Cady, elder in the Brick Presbyterian church, both of New York city. The committee decided in favor of a brief paper by Rev. J. P. Hearst of the First Presbyterian church of Jeffersonville, Ind.

The article was in brief that a church should not go into such a thing, unless it was ready for it, but if it was, by all means have the bowling alley. He cites Paul, in his numerous pronouncements for athletics, and says:

"Let the young man know that the church stands for everything manly, for bravery in every department of life, and you lay hold upon his imagination, his hopes, his highest ideals and aspirations. If afterward you can direct him into spiritual things, he will be worth a dozen ordinary men. Such an institution, in many places, would furnish a place where young men and boys could congregate off the street, free from contamination with evil, filled with influences for good, where men could be made to feel that Christianity is something more than attending church and Sunday school; that it means life in all its phases, in play and work as well as worship. By all means, if there is the demand, the opportunity, and the money, probably no better use could be made of the basement of a church."

That the pastor of a Presbyterian church should take such a stand as this, a church representing the extremest form of Calvinism, is significant of the change that has come in public sentiment. More and more people are coming to see that no healthy exercise for simple form of amusement, is sinful in itself, and that the true man is not the one who hedges himself round with prohibitions, but joins in the work and play of the world in a manly way, and makes them influences for good, not only for himself but for others.

The Young Men's Christian Associations, here in Newton and elsewhere, with their gymnasiums, their athletic clubs, and their games of all descriptions, are doing a great work for young people, in keeping them off the streets, and in seeing that their spare hours are pleasantly occupied.

THE school committee of Ward Six have sent out a circular to the parents of boys in their ward, with the intent to get at their real sentiment in regard to Sloyd. The first question was whether they considered that the work already done had been of benefit to their boy; 2d, if so, whether in any other way, than by the development of the hand and eye; 3d, if the two hours devoted to it each week had had an unfavorable effect on regular school work, and 4th, if they believed its continuance desirable. So far answers have been received from about half of the circulars, and the answers were in every case in favor of the continuance of Sloyd, and testifying the good already evident in their boys from the teaching. It is only fair to assume that were parents opposed to it, they would have answered, so the unanimity of the expression so far is taken to represent the general feeling. Probably the same result would have been obtained if letters had been sent out in the other wards. Of course it may be that those not heard from do not care either way, and so have not taken the trouble to reply.

THE debate in Congress over the claim of the Methodist Book Concern, South, and the charges that part of the sum paid went to a lobbyist, was an interesting affair. Our own guileless Senator Hoar, in an admirable speech, said that he thought that this was an opportune time to say to the country that in the presentation of claims to Congress there was never a necessity for the employment of agents or lobbyists. "When it was known that a claim was being promoted by agents or lobbyists, it was actually endangered." This is all right as far as it goes, but probably Senator Hoar knows as well as any one, that the justest claim that could be made out would stand very little show of getting through Congress without a strong lobby behind it. In view of the history of the claims that have been presented in Congress this "righteous indignation" of the Senate in this particular case is very amusing, even if it is chiefly for effect.

THE United States Circuit Court in Wisconsin is placed in a peculiar fix by its decision on the Milwaukee street car fare ordinance. The honorable court decided that the ordinance was unconstitutional, as it imposed an unreasonable low rate of fare, which was four cents. Yet immediately after the court gave its decision, the street car company was so inconsiderate of the reputation of the court, as to give notice that it would reduce its fares to four cents, if the city would make no further effort to test the validity of the four cent ordinance. It is certainly very awkward for the court, as it makes its decision ridiculous, and will only tend to confirm the populists in their claim that the courts can only see the corporation side in any case that comes up.

SENATOR FRYE must have rather startled the Dingleyites, when he said in a debate on Wednesday, "Within five years we have found 'that we must either have foreign markets for our manufactured goods or we must cut the wages of our working people." It would be unkind to recall that within those five years Mr. Fyre has proclaimed upon the stump that the only way to have high wages for our working people and general prosperity, was to shut out all foreign trade by a high tariff wall, as the possession of the home market was all sufficient. It seems now that Senator Frye really knew better.

THAT boulevard assessment matter is attempted to be revived again by some one who had a long and one-sided screed in a local paper last week. The other side is so well known by this time, that the article referred to has not caused any sensation. It is probably put forth now as a forlorn hope by those who have so far resisted the payment of any betterments.

NOW that the legislature has passed a law requiring the teaching of manual training in cities of over 20,000, in both the High and Grammar grades, it is probable that Sloyd will be reinstated in the Newton schools.

Y. M. C. A.

Eight members of the wheel club met with the Association Cycle League at Waltham last Wednesday evening. The Waltham Y. M. C. A. furnished an entertainment and the Women's Auxiliary provided refreshment. It was a royal good time for all. The next official run of the league will be at Quincy, July 2d.

Mr. J. A. Mellor of Waltham, a young man of rare talent and ability, and a member of the Y. M. C. A., will conduct the Sunday afternoon meeting for men, June 19th. All men invited. Song service begins at 4 o'clock.

Harold Stanton, George Haddow and Ray J. Barber will accompany Secretary Parker to the camp for boys at Willoughby Park, East Gloucester, July 6–20. $10.00 covers all expenses for two weeks, including transportation both ways.

At the first meeting of the new board of directors June 9, Mr. F. H. Tucker was elected president, and Mr. Thos. Weston, Jr., vice president for the ensuing year. It was decided to have the rooms open from 2 until 9 p. m., each week day during July and August. Water will be heated for bathing, Wednesdays and Saturdays only.

A small party from Newton are enjoying an excursion to historic Plymouth today, under the auspices of Mr. F. P. Speare, educational director of the Boston Y. M. C. A.

Mr. E. C. Wyatt, physical director, is preparing a unique and valuable manuel for gymnasium men. It will contain matter of interest to all athletes, and will be issued brfore the fall season begins.

Brookline Swimmers Won.

Several hundred people witnessed the opening water sports at the Riverside recreation grounds last Saturday afternoon.

The affair was under the auspices of the Boston physical education society, and many of the best swimmers and divers in the state took part. B. A. A., Brookline swimming school, Harvard A. A., Newton boat club and many other athletic associations were represented, and the result was some exciting contests.

Peter S. McNally gave an excellent exhibition of fancy and trick swimming, and George R. Heckle gave a clever exhibition of upsetting and righting a canoe.

The relay race between the Brookline and the B. A. A. teams was the most exciting event of the day. It was won by the former after a hard battle.

The half-mile swim was somewhat of a surprise, as Herbert Holm of Brookline easily defeated W D Hennen of N. Y. A. C. Holm's feat was all the more praiseworthy as he had not swam that distance since last August, and was not in the best of form. Hennen collapsed at the finish, but soon recovered.

The officials were: Herman J. Boos, referee, J. W. Bowler, starter, L. S. Drake, announcer, J. B. Moran, clerk, C. Eberhard, R. F. Johnson, P. S. McNally, timers, W. H. Corey, George S. Rich, Dr. L. A. B. Street, judges.

Daughters of the Revolution.

The Sarah Hull Chapter D. R. celebrated flag day by a trip to historic Lexington, whose townsmen were so loyal to their flag April 19th, 1775.

About forty members drove over in barges, enjoying the social pleasure as well as the beauties of scenery at this season, when the luxuriant foliage and vivid green of the lawns are so beautiful. They visited many points of interest to all patriots, and enjoyed a generous lunch at the Russell House, a very attractive family hotel.

They were specially interested in the Hancock House, where John Hancock and Samuel Adams were sleeping when aroused by the call of Paul Revere. And even more of interest was found at the Monroe Tavern, where Earl Percy had his headquarters and hospital. There they were most cordially received by Mr. Monroe, grandson of the owner of the house at the time of the battle at Lexington. He had many incidents to relate, particularly recounting Washington's visit in 1789. This was the last meeting of the chapter for this season, but their work will continue through the summer, as they have promised to the Mass. Volunteer Aid Association a generous donation of sheets and surgical shirts.

Windsor Hall School.

Windsor Hall School at Waban has just closed its second year most successfully. It now announces that pupils will be received for a summer term of ten weeks. Parents who are to be away during the summer may find an attractive home for their daughters with good opportunities for outdoor sports. Both boys and girls of the High and Grammar schools who would like to make the work of the next year lighter by a few weeks of study during the vacation, will receive individual instruction from competent teachers.

THE INPERIAL POLICY.

SOME OF THE DANGERS TO BE APPREHENDED FROM LAND GRABBING.

Gamaliel Bradford in his speech at the Faneuil Hall meeting, Wednesday, to protest against the land grabbing policy advocated in certain high quarters, said:

What of the future? The fourth of the resolutions which congress passed in the small hours of the morning of April 19th expressly renounced all desire or intention of retaining possession of Cuba. To go back on that would bring upon us the scorn and contempt of the world. It would seem absurd to retain Porto Rico without Cuba. If we do either, Spain will have provided, in retaliation for the harm we may do her, a revenge as bitter as even a Spanish heart can desire. But that is a trifle compared with the Phillipine islands. We are despatching a considerable army to take possession; which will need to be multiplied many times before we complete it. The forces at Washington are working hard under the lead, it is reported, of the junior senator from Massachusetts to enforce the permanence of that possession. When a war with Spain was wanted, "commercialism" was hooted at and despised. Now that the Phillipines are wanted, the advantages to commerce are worked for more than they are worth. Is congress so successful in the management of our domestic affairs that we can afford to burden it with the government of ten millions of Orientals on the other side of the world?

Let us try to picture the consequences. It seems certain that those Eastern seas are to become a gigantic arena of strife for the nations of Europe and Asia. With those islands we shall have a hand stretched out among them for any one, either to grasp at or to strike. When Germany also took Alsace and Lorraine in 1870, it meant that she should remain armed to the teeth for two hundred years to come They have already cost many times more than they are worth from the material, not to mention the moral side. With those islands we should never have in the next century a moment of security from foreign war. We must keep our coast fortified from Oregon to New Brunswick, at a cost which the imagination reels to contemplate. We must have by the hundred those marine monsters, the first cost of each of which would keep the poor of a great city in comfort for a year. We must have an immense standing army, for which sufficient service would not always be voluntary. And so to a population bowed down with debt and taxes beyond what any nation has ever felt would come that last of human miseries, an enforced military conscription.

The clergy of this country has shown of late a painfully defective sense of proportion. For the doubtful chance of raising the condition of some, no doubt, very wretched peoples, they are willing to risk infinite disaster to the people of the United States. Suppose some divine power were to say, "You can take those islands and devote yourselves to improving their circumstances, physical, moral and religious, but only on condition of repealing the vaccination laws of the United States, and allowing small pox to ravage as it did two hundred years ago," would we accept the islands on those terms? Yet a slight knowledge of history will tell us that the poison infused into our institutions will produce evils worse than the small pox ever did. When I contemplate these results, which no man can dispute as even improbable, I am reminded of the motto at Dante's entrance to hell, "Leave behind all hope, O ye who enter here."

All hope of peaceful reforms in internal administration; all hope of leaving to our children homes where they can enjoy their lives in peace; all hope of pointing out to mankind a way of escape from the miseries which mutual slaughter has inflicted upon them in the past.

In the name of the Pilgrims who planted at Plymouth the seeds of civil and religious liberty; in the name of Washington, who, after leading us through the war of Independence and seeing the Constitution launched in full glory, left us that noble legacy of warning, which has never had a deeper meaning than today; in the name of the martyred Lincoln who sealed with his blood the work he had done; in the name of humanity whose fate is bound up with our institutions; I appeal to the people of Massachusetts to protest against this rush of reckless and unbridled ambition.

WHAT A DINNER COSTS.

A Curious Calculation, Showing the Cost of an Ordinary Meal.

Recently a gentleman who is fond of arithmetic made up his mind that he would find out how much a dinner really cost. This gentleman asked how much a simple dinner (that he was eating) cost, and he was told 75 cents.

He contradicted this and then made out the following statement about the cost of that dinner: The pepper, he said, came from 10,000 miles away. It grew on a little bush about 8 feet high, which must have had a growth of at least five years. The pepper was picked green. It had to be dried in the sun, and this meant employing women. It took one ship and 1,000 miles of railroad to bring the pepper to the United States. The flour of which the bread was made came from Dakota. Some one owned the land and that meant the investing of capital, and then he had also to pay wages to workingmen. The flour had to be ground, and the building of the mill and the plant or machinery meant more money invested. The millers had to be paid, coopers had to be paid for making the barrels and, of course, the wood of which the barrels were made had to be cut and sawed and shaped, and this meant the employing of more men. Then the flour had to be shipped over the railroad and handled again by cartmen before it came into the house.

The tea on the table came from China and the coffee from South America. The codfish had to be brought from Maine. Men had to be employed to catch the fish. Other men and women were employed in drying, packing and boxing it and it, too, had to make a long railroad journey.

The salt came from the Indian reservation in the northwestern part of New York state. The spices in the cake came from the Spice islands in the Indian archipelago. The canned peaches came from California, and they, too, represented the employment of capital and labor. The little dinner represented, directly or indirectly, the employment of $500,000,000 of capital and 5,000,000 men.—Chicago News.

No Recollection of It.

One of the most noted of the hardy western frontiersmen was Kit Carson, to whom, with Daniel Boone, belongs the credit of having always dealt fairly with the various Indian tribes, as they themselves acknowledged. The withdrawal of Carson by the government was the cause of a great war. Captain Henry Inman, in his book, the "Old Santa Fe Trail," relates an amusing incident of the gallant pioneer.

My own conception of Kit Carson, as a child, was that he was 10 feet high, that it would have required the strength of two men to lift his rifle, that he usually drank a river dry and picked the carcass of a whole buffalo clean as easily as a lady does the wing of a quail. Years after, when I made the acquaintance of the foremost frontiersman, I found him a delicate, reticent, under sized, wiry man, the very opposite type of what my childish brain had created.

One day while Kit was at the fort I came across a periodical that had a full page illustration of a scene in a forest. In the foreground stood a gigantic figure dressed in the traditional buckskin.

On one arm rested an immense rifle. His other arm was around the waist of the conventional female of such sensational journals, while in front half a dozen Indians lay prone, evidently slain by the hero in the impossible attire in defense of the preposterous female. The legend stated how all this had been effected by Kit Carson.

I handed it to Kit. He wiped his spectacles, studied the picture intently for a few seconds and then said:

"Gentlemen, that thar may be true, but I hain't got no recollection of it."

Wasteful Western Rivers.

"Queer American Rivers" is the title of an article in St. Nicholas written by Mr. Spearman. The author says of western rivers:

All the rivers of the plains are alike full of yellow mud, because the soil of the plains melts at the touch of water. These are our spendthrift rivers, full to the banks at times, but most of the year desperately in need of water. It is only with the greatest effort that they can keep their places in the summer. There is just a scanty thread of water strung along a great, rambling bed of sand to restrain Dame Nature from revoking their licenses to run and turning them into cattle ranches.

No wonder that respectable fish refuse to have anything to do with such streams and refuse tempting offers of free worms, free transportation and protection from the fatal nets. Fancy trying to raise a family of little fish and not knowing one day where water is coming from the next!

Not but what there is water enough at times. Only those rivers of the great plains, like the Platte and the Kansas and the Arkansas, are so wasteful of their supply in the spring that by July they are gasping for a shower. So part of the year they revel in luxury, and during the rest they go shabby, like shiftless people.

A New Poet to Order.

An editor has received the following letter from a budding genius:

MY DEAR SIR—I inclose here with some Poems of my own composure the first I have attimpted to write. So if they are warth anything to you, You can Publish them, and if you know of any Publishing Co, who wish as for a poem writer. Please give thim my name and address. If you think warth while to do so. You will Oblige me very much. If you wish a poem on any Subject Just draw up what you wish and let me have a trial at same. Those I enclose are my first to write.

Clearly that poet has confidence in himself, "Just draw up what you wish" and send it on, and he'll fill all orders "with poems of his own composure." It's a big contract, but everything goes in "the literary business."—Chicago Times-Herald.

James Parton's Prediction.

In 1862 James Parton, the celebrated biographical writer, made the following prediction in regard to Abraham Lincoln:

History will say of Mr. Lincoln that no man of a more genial temperament, a more kindly nature, ever tenanted the White House; that he gave all his time, his thoughts, his energies, to the discharge of duties of unprecedented magnitude and urgency; that, hating no man, he steadfastly endeavored to win the confidence and love of all the loyal and patriotic, and that in spite of four checkered years of such responsibility and anxiety as has seldom fallen to the lot of man he bore away from the capitol the sunny temper and blithe frankness of his boyhood, returning to mingle with his old neighbors as one with them in heart and in manner, in retirement as in power a happy specimen of the men whom liberty and democracy train in the log cabin and by the rudest hearth to guide the counsels of the republic and influence the destinies of the people.

Appearance and Merit.

Girard, the famous French painter, when very young, was the bearer of a letter of introduction to Lanjuinais, then of the council of Napoleon. The young painter was shabbily attired, and his reception was extremely cold, but Lanjuinais discovered in him such striking proofs of talent, good sense and amiability that, on Girard's rising to take leave, he rose, too, and accompanied his visitor to the ante chamber. The change was so striking that Girard could not avoid an expression of surprise. "My young friend," said Lanjuinais, anticipating the inquiry, "we receive an unknown person according to his dress—we take leave of him according to his merit."

The Secrets Told In Delirium.

Every one fears that if he should become delirious he would give away his secrets and trot out every skeleton in his private closet. Calm yourself. People who are delirious tell nothing they know. An Atchison man who was recently so near death that he heard Moses sing raved constantly about his head being a Missouri Pacific freighthouse.—Atchison Globe.

Naturally.

"Scribbler's plots are all so improbable."

"Yes; he belongs to the realistic school, you know."—Philadelphia North American.

A correspondent of The Westminster Gazette calls attention to the curious juxtaposition of two finger posts attached to a public house near Bridgend. One reads "To the Asylum," the other "To the Cemetery."

It's not the little miller that flies around the house that makes the holes in your garments and other property; it's the sharp-toothed worm that is hatched from the miller's eggs. Spoil the miller and spare your clothes. Chemical Camphor will do it. One pound of it replaces five pounds of ordinary camphor.

Willcomb has resigned his position as secretary, and Mr. L. Jones of Waltham has been chosen to fill the vacancy.

—The alarm from private box 336 at 1.35 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, called the entire depart nent, a squad of about 15 police officers, and hundreds of residents from all parts of the city to the Woodland Park hotel, where it was expected that a terrible conflagration was in progress. On the contrary, there was nothing but a flaming pile of brush on vacant land off Woodland road, owned by Mr. E. B. Haskell. No damage.

—The second in the series of promenade concerts at the Newton Boat clubhouse at Riverside last Saturday evening brought out a large representation of the younger society set of the Newtons, Brookline and Boston. The clubhouse was brilliantly illuminated. From 8 until 9 an orchestra station on the clubhouse balcony discoursed popular operatic airs for the entertainment of the hundreds of canoeists, who formed an appreciative audience in the space in front of the clubhouse and between the two bridges At 9 the majority of the company adjourned to the clubhouse and dancing was enjoyed until midnight.

—The annual lawn party was held at the New England home for crippled children in Weston, last Saturday, and there was a large attendance, including a number from Boston, Brookline, Roxbury and Newton. The guests were received by Mrs. H. A. Joslin, president of the school, and she was assisted by Mrs. W. C. Ulman of Brookline. A very pleasing entertainment was given on the lawn by the children of the home. Many donations were received, and quite a sum was realized from the sale of refreshments. A hurdy-gurdy furnished music. The committee comprised Mrs. W. C. Ulman, Mrs. Warren Ward, Mrs. William Jones of Brookline and Mrs. Charles Butterfield of Roxbury. The Misses Ulman, Mrs. Charles Cross and Mrs. Harlow had charge of the sale.

—John Othmer and Michael Welch, residents of Staniford street, have an empty hennery and pig pen respectively, as the result of a visit from a marauding canine. Saturday night both of these citizens retired, feeling that all their earthly possessions were perfectly safe, and reposing the greatest confidence in the vigilance of the police, and the security of the locks on their back yard gates. It is not on record how, and though a hundred theories are offered, it is purely a matter of speculation, yet a dog forced its way in some manner or other into these yards. And quickly did he accomplish his work, for within an incredibly short space of time, he had succeeded in disposing of sixteen hens belonging to Mr. Othmer, and two pigs, the property of Mr. Welch. Patrolman Nagle dispatched the dog, who was captured soon after he had committed the depredations.

A substantial sum was netted, and will be given to the treasurer of the fund for the relief of soldiers at the front.

—P. G. Chisholm, D. G. C. T., and Mrs. Chisholm visited Auburndale Lodge, I. O. G. T. at the regular session of the lodge held in Good Fellows hall, Thursday evening, June 9th. There were present also visitors from Home Circle of Jamaica Plain and Loyalty, West Newton. After the regular business, including the initiation of one new member, a basket party was held, which was much enjoyed by the members present. The fortnightly sociable of Auburndale Lodge was held last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Keeman, Commonwealth avenue.

—John R. Hubbard, 16 years old, and living on North School street, Newton, caused a minature reign of terror among Vista avenue residents Monday night. About 11 o'clock that evening he was standing on the piazza of a house in that vicinity, when the householders becoming alarmed, telephoned to police headquarters that a suspicious character was lurking about his residence. Sergt. Purcell was soon on the scene, and found young Hubbard trying to get in a house, and saying that he had a message for the inmate. The residents disclaimed all knowledge of the young man, and told the sergeant to lock him up. In court next morning young Hubbard was charged with vagrancy, but the complaint was dismissed.

Newton C. E. Union.

The June meeting of the Newton Union was held in the First Church, Newton Centre, on the evening of June 13th. The speaker of the evening was Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, the temperance lecturer. She asks us what are we going to do with the new territory which is coming to us? Cuba and the Phillippines! Will it not imply a very high type of citizenship on our part? Great possessions imply great responsibility. Shall we or shall we not introduce alcoholic drinks into these new posessions?

Mrs. Hunt spoke briefly of the effect of temperance training upon the military and naval cadets. Hobson asked for coffee, instead of whiskey, as would have been done twenty years ago. He and his men needed strong heads and heads for their work.

The speaker closed with an appeal to the C. E. members to present a petition to the Newton school board begging that the statte requiring instruction in the evils of intemperance be enforced.

PERVERSE.

Cupid met me on the way,
Strung his bow and fixed his arrow.
Tired was I of yesterday,
Tired of waiting for the morrow.

Blithe, I flung my two arms wide
To receive the barb he carried.
"Shoot, I pray thee, Dan!" I cried,
But the willful youngster tarried.

Straight I donned my trappings new—
Visored helm and shirt of leather,
Greaves and breastplate, gauntlets, too,
Stoutly riveted together.

"Since you would not shoot," I said,
"Put your arrow by, false charmer!"
Cupid laughed, took aim. It sped
Through a joint of my armor.

THE GUILTY MAN.

She had nerved herself to meet her father. She glanced in the mirror and saw how pale she was. Her father would be pale, too, but how different his pallor from her own—his a pallor like none other in the world!

A shiver passed over her. Did she love her father? Her anger went out to him, not her love. Her love was for Jack, and he could never be anything to her. Last night she had written to Jack and told him the truth, and the truth would separate them forever. She was the daughter of a thief!

What uselessness it had been for her mother to move hundreds of miles from the old home. It had been done for the husband, not for the daughter. For the daughter there had been a half year's residence in this new place and a learning to love a man whom she had last night declined to marry. Her father had wrought this unhappiness as he had wrought so much more.

What grief had not her father wrought! The day he went to prison for the defalcation in the bank where he had been cashier and her mother's father manager, had not her mother's father fallen dead? The world had said the old banker could not stand the disgrace. And what more? Had not her mother's mother, always an invalid, been stricken by her husband's death and never been told of her son-in-law's crime? There had been a mass of deception, the poor, feeble woman being led to believe that her daughter's husband, whom she loved as a son, had gone away on business, and letters written in his prison cell had been read to her, and they told her of great prosperity in the west, with a cheerfulness that was appalling. Yes, the girl almost hated her father as she thought over the events of the past four years. And yet would she have hated him save for Jack?

She pressed her hands fiercely to her eyes.

Suddenly she started. There was a step on the stairs. Her mother was bringing her father up to her. How should she meet him? Had it not been for Jack she knew how she should have met him. But her father had forced Jack from her.

The steps ascending the stairs stopped. There was a cough outside the library door. She knew the sharp little cough. She used to fly to meet her father four years back when she heard that little cough in the hall in the dear old home. Now she did not move from the chair she sat in.

She heard a voice outside the door—her mother urging her father to enter the room. Then the handle of the door turned, and her mother led in a strangely aged man.

The girl rose. Her father stood before her, expectancy in his face. She went slowly to him and held her forehead up to his lips. Her mother looked angrily at her, but she went back to her seat and caught up some sewing.

"Annie," said the mother sharply, "is this the way to meet your father? Do you know that all that has occurred has been more to me than to any one else in the world? And yet I forgive because I love. And you who have a lover"—

"I have no lover," coldly interrupted the girl. "I couldn't deceive him any longer. I wrote him last night. I told him the truth and that I would not marry him."

"Ah," said the mother, "now I understand!" She turned to her husband. "Mark, do not mind it, dear. You have me, and I shall never fail you. Have I ever failed you? What is done is done. It is all wiped away. It is only remembered by your daughter, not by me, and you are as much to me after all the mistakes and sufferings as the day when I stood by your side and vowed to be a loving and true wife till God should part us in death. We always spoke of you, mother and I."

"Your mother," his dry lips said, "where is she?"

His wife caught his hand.

"Dear," she said, "can you bear a little more?"

He looked at her.

"Annie," she said sternly, "get me those letters."

The girl went and took from the bookcase a packet, which she brought to her mother.

"My letters to your mother," the man's lips seemed to say, "and unopened."

His wife fondled his hand.

"It was only a few months ago," she said. "I could not tell you the truth any more than I could tell her. The truth would have made you unhappier, and I wished to tell you myself. She loved you as she loved me. One morning one of your letters came, and until I could read it to her she asked me to let her hold it. An hour later we found her with the letter held up to her heart, and she was very white and quiet. There had been no struggle whatever, no pain. We laid her beside father, whom she had never ceased grieving for and who had given her every comfort in life, even when, I am sure, he could hardly afford the extravagances ordered by her physicians. It is all over, and happily over, for both of them, dear, and you were always kind and good to them."

A low, long sigh broke from the man. Then silence fell, the sound of the tram bells in the street came distinctly to them, and the ticking of the clock on the mantel was strangely loud.

There was a movement on the part of Annie. She rose and came and kneeled beside her father's chair.

"Father," she said, "you must forgive me. I am not very happy. I do not mean to be hard, but I can't go back from my reasoning. You have not only mother, but you have me also. I will do what I can. I am sure you know that, and after awhile you will not miss anything in me."

"Go back to your seat," commanded her mother. "Do you know that you are in the presence of a broken heart? Doesn't your father accuse himself of more than you accuse him of? Who are you, with your paltry love troubles, to come to him in a time like this?"

"Hush, Mary!" said her husband. "Hush!"

The silence fell again.

Annie sat alone. She was apart from everything. There was no love for her any more. Her father had expiated his sin in the eyes of the world. In her heart the sin that had been his still lived. For there was Jack, and she had given him up because of her father's guilt. There was a narrowing of the radius. No matter for Jack if her father were only an innocent man. Love surely created a desire for purity, for, since she had learned to love Jack, her father's sin had grown and grown upon her, and before that the sin had been tempered by her pitying love and her prayers for heaven's forgiveness.

The daughter of a thief! Oh, why had she met Jack? Why had she allowed herself to care for him? Why had she let herself feel glad when she knew that he loved her? Why had she greatly desired that he should tell her that he had given his heart to her and demanded her own in return?

How many sadly confused questions did she put to herself as she sat there in the miserable silence, her mother and her father at a greater distance from her than they had ever been before, while she vainly tried to accuse her heart and her daughterly affection of transgressing, even though Jack called through the silence that, but for her father's crime, she might have claimed woman's perfect happiness on earth!

Her mother and her father apparently failed to realize how much she was going through. It was only her lack of response to their love that touched them. Her adoration of a man who might have been her husband was merely a foolishness of hers and not to be placed in the same category with her duty as a daughter—the daughter of a thief! That miserable word, that disgraceful word, would come uppermost to her. But for Jack would this have been so? The daughter of a thief!

There came a tap on the door, and it sounded on her ear like thunder.

Her mother went to the door and opened it.

"Mark," she said to her husband, "it is cook. She wishes to speak to me about dinner. We are going to have all the things you used to—all the things you like. Of course the servants know nothing, dear. You have been west, you know. The servants have only been with us since we moved here. Would you like to come down stairs, or will you stay here in the library?"

"I will stay here," he said in his hushed way. "Here."

"Very well," returned his wife. "I shan't be gone long. See, here is all the old furniture, all your books, just as you used to like them, and the pictures."

She leaned over and kissed him before she went out and closed the door behind her.

Annie was alone with her father. She heard him moving carefully around, taking up a book, only to lay it down again. He went up and looked at his wife's picture hanging between two tall bookcases, then at that of his wife's father. Before this last picture he lingered, making no sound, but looking at the face of the old bank manager who had fallen dead the day his trusted cashier and his only daughter's husband had gone to serve a sentence in prison. Annie could not see him, but she knew all that her father did. Her back was toward him as she leaned over her sewing, and her heart beat fast when he turned from the picture at last and swiftly crossed the carpet.

When his hand was laid upon her arm, she almost shrieked aloud.

"Annie!" said her father's voice. It was a firm voice now, no quaver of doubt in it, and it forced her like a command she dared not disobey.

She rose from her seat and faced him.

Despite the physical changes in him she saw before her his old self—strong, not unbrave, not disloyal, not a criminal.

"You have given up your lover," he went on rapidly. "You have given him up because of me. Pay attention to me. I will tell you what I had hoped never to tell a living soul on earth. And I must speak before your mother comes back, for she must never know. But you must know, and the man who had asked you to be his wife and whom you refused on account of me. I will go to him, and I will tell him as I tell you that I have wrecked no life, that I have not wrecked my daughter's happiness. Do you hear me? I have not interfered with your right to be happy with the man you love. I have been adjudged a criminal. I have served a criminal's sentence. But I am an innocent man, and"—he turned and pointed to the picture of his wife's father—"that man knew it. I sacrificed not your mother, not you, but my own standing in society and the minds of men for the sake of my wife's father and his invalid wife."

She gasped. She understood him, and she trembled from head to foot.

"I would never have told you," he went on, "only that you gave up your life's happiness because of my disgrace. Your forfeited love for me would never have brought this confession, for what I did was done to save an old man and an old woman who had been as a mother to me. If nature could not make your love surmount my shame, that love is of little account. Your mother's father's sin made me a prisoner. It was he who took the money, and I the blame. I have proofs of all this, and I am glad I never destroyed them, for I must show those proofs to the daughter whose lack of love makes my word of no account."

"Father!"

There was a quality in her cry that told him more than many words. She sprang to his arms, her heart held closely to his. He was innocent, he was innocent, and though her life's greater love might be over and done the man who had asked her to marry him had not loved the daughter of a thief.

There was some one in the room, though neither of them heeded till the girl's name was spoken by the newcomer.

"Jack!" she cried out and clung the closer to her father. "Jack!"

"You did not hear me knock," said he. "I came to tell you that I refuse to obey your note. You love me as I love you, and you will be my wife. And, coming in here, I have heard what your father said to you. Your father—will he not let me call him mine?"

Her father's head was raised, and he looked deeply into the young man's eyes.

"Well, well!" said the bustling voice of the wife, coming into the library. "And Jack here! Mark, my dear; Annie—Mark, is this the happy end of all your sadness and pain?"

"Yes," said the "guilty man" as he placed the hand of his daughter into that of her lover. "Yes."—Spare Moments.

Colossus of Rhodes.

The Colossus of Rhodes, a bronze statue, was 105 feet high. It was made by Chares, who, aided by an army of workmen, consumed 12 years in its construction. It remained in position in the harbor of Rhodes for 66 years and was thrown down by an earthquake B. C. 224. It lay on the ground 894 years and was sold to a Hebrew for old metal. He carried away 900 camel loads, or about 720,000 pounds, of bronze.

L'OLONNOIS THE CRUEL.

He Was the Most Ferocious of All the Famous Buccaneers.

Frank R. Stockton is writing "The Buccaneers of Our Coast" in St. Nicholas. He says:

Among the buccaneer leaders who distinguished themselves as land pirates was Francis L'Olonnois, a Frenchman. In those days it was the custom to enforce servitude upon people who were not able to take care of themselves. Unfortunate debtors and paupers of all classes were sold to people who had need of their services. Boys and girls were sold for a term of years, somewhat as if they had been apprentices, and it so happened that the boy L'Olonnois was sold to a master who took him to the West Indies.

There he led the life of a slave until he was of age, and then, being no longer subject to ownership, he became one of the freest and most independent persons who ever walked this earth. He began his career on the island of Hispaniola, where he took up the business of hunting and butchering cattle, but he soon became a pirate and enlisted as a common sailor on one of their ships. Here he gave signs of being so brave and unscrupulous that one of the leading pirates on the island of Tortuga gave him a ship and crew and set him up in business. The career of L'Olonnois was much like that of other buccaneers of the day except that he was abominably cruel to his Spanish prisoners.

All the barbarities attributed to the pirates of the world were united in the career of this wretch, who does not appear to be so good an example of the true pirate as Roc, the Brazilian. He was not so brave, he was not so able, and it would be impossible for any one to look upon him as a hero. After having attained in a short time the reputation of being the wickedest pirate of his day, L'Olonnois was unfortunate enough to be wrecked upon the coast near Campeachy. He and his crew came safely to shore, but it was not long before their presence was discovered by the people of the town, and the Spanish soldiers attacked them. There was a fierce fight, but the Spaniards were stronger, and the buccaneers were utterly defeated. Many were killed, wounded or taken prisoners.

Among the wounded was L'Olonnois, and when the Spaniards walked over the battlefield he was looked upon as killed. When the soldiers had retired, he stealthily arose and made his way into the woods, where he staid until his wounds were well enough for him to walk about. He divested himself of his great boots, his pistol belt and the rest of his piratical costume, and adding to his scanty raiment a cloak and hat which he had stolen from a poor cottage, he boldly approached the town and entered it. He looked like a very ordinary person, and no notice was taken of him by the authorities. Here he found shelter and something to eat, and he soon began to make himself very much at home in the streets of Campeachy.

A Song of Ecstasy.

In The Century there is a paper on the "Songs of American Birds," by John Burroughs. Mr. Burroughs says:

A very interesting feature of our bird songs is the wing song or song of ecstasy. It is not the gift of many of our birds. Indeed, less than a dozen species are known to me as ever singing on the wing. It seems to spring from more intense excitement and self abandonment than the ordinary song delivered from the perch. When the bird's joy reaches the point of rapture, it is literally carried off its feet, and up it goes into the air, pouring out its song as a rocket pours its sparks. The skylark and the bobolink habitually do this, but a few others of our birds do it only on occasions. Last summer, up in the Catskills, I added another name to my list of ecstatic singers—that of the vesper sparrow. Several times I heard a new song in the air, and caught a glimpse of the bird as it dropped back to the earth. My attention would be attracted by a succession of hurried, chirping notes, followed by a brief burst of song, then by the vanishing form of the bird. One day I was lucky enough to see the bird as it was rising to its climax in the air and identified it as the vesper sparrow. The burst of song that crowned the upward flight of 75 or 100 feet was brief, but it was brilliant and striking and entirely unlike the leisurely chant of the bird while upon the ground. It suggested a lark, but was less buzzing or humming. The preliminary chirping notes, uttered faster and faster as the bird mounted in the air, were like the trail of sparks which a rocket emits before its grand burst of color at the top of its flight.

Couldn't Take All of It.

One of the most popular men in local banking circles, and a rising young financier, with an admitted future, is John Dempster McKee, cashier of the Tallant Banking company. He is fond of a good story, and tells the following one about himself:

When he was a boy, his tendency to stutter was a severe affliction to Dempster, but he has since then lost his sensitiveness, although his speech has not been greatly improved. Not long ago he engaged a new stenographer, who was anxious to succeed and nervously desirous of pleasing her employer. It was her first situation.

After he had summoned her to receive her first dictation, Mr. McKee noticed that his stenographer was somewhat perturbed.

"It's q-quite easy," said the cashier kindly. "Just t-take it d-d-down the w-way I s-say it."

"Oh, Mr. McKee," exclaimed the poor little typewriter, more nervous than ever, picturing to herself a letter full of dashes and disjointed letters, "I am afraid I could not take all of it down!"—San Francisco News Letter.

A Few Palindromes.

The palindromist sends us the following list of words, clipped from some paper, which may be spelled forward or backward: "Anna, bab, bib, bob, bub, civic, dad, deed, deified, did, ecce, eve, ewe, eye, gog, gig, gag, level, madam, noon, otto, pap, peep, pip, pop, pup, redder, refer, repaper, reviver, rotator, sees, sexes, shahs, tat, tit, toot." This leads us to ask, "What is the matter with Hannah?" Her name is also palindromical. Dr. Moxom's family name is equally capable of being spelled backward. But can we not add to the above list? Adam's alleged remark to Eve, "Madam, I'm Adam," and Napoleon's "Able was I ere I saw Elba," should be barred on account of age.—Boston Journal.

Then He Sighed Again.

Softleigh (sighing)—Ah, would I were your muff, that I might hold both your fairylike hands!

Miss Gyett—Oh, wouldn't that be just too lovely for anything! And I've always wanted a monkey muff so much!—Chicago News.

BOOKS AND MAGAZINES.

EVELYN INNES.

George Moore's new novel, Evelyn Innes, just published by D. Appleton & Co., is an unusually interesting work, which appeals rather to the intellect than to the emotions. It is in the main an analysis of a conflict between art and the world on one side and religion upon the other. The theme is developed with a penetrating insight into motives, a grasp of character, and a mastery of literary technique which make Evelyn Innes a notable book. The action of the novel passes in large part in London and Paris. It is a story of the present day, characterized by a vivid perception of the doubts and complex conditions of modern life. The musical motif which has so large a part in the development of the story is interwoven with others which in their unfolding show a rare subtlety and power of expression. It appeals especially to thoughtful people, who will find much valuable material in abstracts of conversations and exceedingly bright and incisive, and informatory discussions of operas, books, abstract ideas and religious doctrines. These are splendid as interpretations of Wagner's best works, of the differences between ancient and modern music, of the weaknesses of Agnosticism, and of the impossibility of finding happiness and freedom from misery in a life of sin. One feels at times that there is too much of this discussion and exposition of ideas for a novel. Yet the manner of the doing is wonderfully fine. Mr. Moore's artistic work provokes one's admiration again and again. Through long chapters devoted to the abstract ideas, the twinges of conscience, the endeavors to reach the real meaning of the heroine's part in some opera, and the earnest efforts to see light ahead, and to perceive what is right and best for her to do—to such, to reminiscences, and to other thoughts that flow through Evelyn's mind when alone, Mr. Moore makes each sentence have an important bearing upon the development of the story. D. Appleton & Co., $1.50.

THE STANDARD BEARER.

S. R. Crockett's last novel has been rather severely treated by the critics, but although it is not a masterpiece, it is a very entertaining story of the religious persecutions in Scotland. Quintin MacClellan writing in after years, tells how in the "terrible year" (1685) as a lad he saw the soldiers hunting two covenanters in the hills, and how he took Mary Gordon through the lines by the help of a raft. That is the beginning of his love story. When, as a young minister, he meets her again he goes to work in the wrong way to win this spirited girl, by telling her of his income and his comfortable manse, and after she has refused him he offers his hand to a comely rustic maid, who fortunately proves consumptive. Then the internal war in the church broke out, Quinton gives up his handsome income and his comfortable manse, and then with feminine perversity Mary Gordon is ready to marry him. But her father, one of those half-crazed demoniacs whom Mr. Crockett portrays so often, is of quite another mind, and there is an exciting chapter in which Quintin traves the old man and his blunderbuss in the inaccessible garret in which he had taken refuge. The less troublous love story of Quintin's brother Hob furnishes a more tranquil interlude. The dissension in the church is set forth with great minuteness, and Mr. Crockett's familiarity with the subject gives this part of the work special value. Published by D. Appleton & Co.

Mr. Frank Vincent's romance and realities of "The Animal World" (Appleton) is as good as a circus, in the light of entertainment for boys and girls who love zoology, and contains numerous incidents and facts which stimulate the pupil and really interest him the more in his studies. The various papers are admirably chosen to awaken the curiosity of readers and arouse them to independent observation and investigation. Some appropriate extracts of verse are introduced for the sake of variety, and to each book is added an analysis, in order to aid the reader in separating the essential points from unessential, and give each its proper share of attention. The illustrations are numerous and interesting in character.

"Torn Sails" is an idyllic love story, whose scene is laid in a Welsh village, and the author, Allen Raine, has written several other popular Welsh stories. Although there is atmosphere and local quietude about "Torn Sails," the author's artistic setting of picturesque Welsh phrases and words does not make the story seem far away. It is a bit of a pleasant dream in its picture of ultimate happiness, and it bears much truth in its plain simplicity. It is delightful to find a romance which does not drift away from the better things in life in order to attain the desirable degree of interest. The story has its lesson; money cannot make up for love or bring much comfort to aching hearts, but a conscious effort to be true to one's vows may do much to lesson misery. The agony is dwelt on at some length, to be sure; but there is too much truth and harmony and genuine solicitude in the story to make the strain unbearable. Altogether "Torn Sails" is an ideal blending of love and pathos, knowledge and strength. D. Appleton & Co. in Town and Country Library.

"Materfamilias" is one of Ada Cambridge's Australian novels, and although not up to the "Three Miss Kings" is still very readable. It begins with the marriage of the heroine, who tells the story, and describes the events of her life, her children, the trials attending their marriage, and so on, wholly from the mother's standpoint. Her descriptions of her sons-and-daughters-in-law are very amusing, though not intentionally so, as she fails to see anything in them to attract. She is a very sweet but very unreasonable woman, always impulsive, and changing about so suddenly as to astonish her family, who, however, seem to understand and love her just the same. One of the trials of her life is when her children try to show her how much better their way is than her way, and sit in judgment upon her. The story is very amusingly told, the humor of the situations being irresistible. D. Appleton & Co., in Town and Country Library.

John of Strathbourne is a romance of the days of Francis I, by R. D. Chetwode, is brimful of adventures and sensations, and all who like a thrilling tale will find it one of the best of the kind. The hero is ignorant of his origin, and begins life as a stable boy, but by a series of plausible happenings he finds strong friends, discovers his relatives, and rises to high rank among the fighters of his time. The days of chivalry are painted in very lively colors, and marvellous deeds of daring follow closely upon each other. The story is well told and the book will be an admirable vacation volume, when one wishes to lose sight of his surroundings. D. Appleton & Co., 50 cts.

The Trooper of the Empress, of whom Clinton Ross writes in the story of that title, is not a "Trooper Halkett" by any means, but his biography is lively and vigorous, and furnishes an up-to-date contribution in the guise of fiction to the history of South African development. D. Appleton & Co., 50c

It is hard to conceive why Robert Morell could have forgotten his great sin, but his creator, Dorothea Girard (Madame Longard De Longgarde), assumes that he did, and then proceeds to show how at last it found him out in the person of the unhappy child, of whose existence he had not dreamed. The character of the latter, a fascinating popular singer, known by her stage name of Signora Belveda, is the best drawn one in the book, and the generosity that finally conquers her hot desire for revenge upon the betrayer of her mother wins for her the reader's sympathy and admiration. A Forgotten Sin is not a pleasant story, but it points a moral. D. Appleton & Co.

The Successful Remedy for Nasal Catarrh

must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will by its own action reach the inflamed and diseased surfaces. ELY'S CREAM BALM combines the important requisites of quick action and specific curative powers with perfect safety to the patient. This agreeable remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. All druggists cheerfully acknowledge that in it the acme of Pharmaceutical skill has been reached. The most distressing symptoms quickly yield to it. In acute cases the Balm imparts almost instant relief.

His assailants did not offer to rob him.

Muzzling Speech.

To the Editor of the Graphic:—

Many good and patriotic people, who strenuously opposed the jingoes of congress, and the press in opposing President McKinley's peace policy, now, that war has been unjustly entered upon, not only hesitate to speak their sentiments, but denounce those who will not keep silent. The jingoes are now imperialists, urging a radical change from the peaceful policy inagurated by Washington and his compatriots under which our country's marvelous prosperity has been maintained during the past century. This beneficent policy, it is now proposed to change, and by whom is this change urged? by the wise and good in science, literature, men and women of high character, who have made our state illustrious in the higher walks of life. No! not at all but by the opposite. All the evil disposed and by those who hope to enrich themselves through some of the many avenues made easy by war, especially by our political demagogues. These last are found largely, it is regretfully believed among congressmen, led by our junior senator, who misrepresents the better sentiments of Massachusetts, as Webster did in his advocacy of the Fugitive law in 1852.

What was the conditions of our controversy with Spain, two months since? M. G. C. in the Woman's Journal of 21st states this in the following admirable manner. "Consider the concessions which had been obtained by the presidents peaceful diplomacy, from the liberal party of Spain under Sagasta, before our declaration of war. 1. The recall of Weyler, the disavowal of his brutalities and the appropriation of $600,000 to the relief of non combatants 2. Permission to the reconcentrados to return to their homes. 3. A suspension of hostilities by the Spanish forces. 4. The establishment of an autonomy, similar to that enjoyed by Canada and Austraila, whereby Home Rule would have been enjoyed under a Spanish Protectorate. 5. The admission of supplies of good food and clothing for distribution by the agents of the Red Cross under Clara Barton. 6. An invitation to the Insurgents to unite with the Autonomists, which carried with it, an amnesty for all hitherto proscribed as rebels. 7. A disavowal of complicity in the Maine disaster, and an offer to submit to the decision and award of an impartial tribunal, making all possible reparation in case of an adverse award.

Surely such concessions granted by the Spanish authorities, at our request, deserved kindly recognition on our part. A reasonable amount of time to put them in operation, and a frank acceptance of what would have given to America a virtual protectorate of the island and a guarantee of the fulfilment of the "Spanish pledges." Let us not forget the above concessions of a proud people. The closing sentence of the noble and truly patriotic address of Prof. Charles Eliot Norton, which should be read in full as found in the Transcript of June 8th, undoubtedly is in entire harmony with the best Massachusetts sentiment today. "My friends, America has been compelled, against the will of all her wisest and best to enter into a path of darkness and peril. Against their will, she has been forced to turn back from the way of civilization to the way of barbarism, to renounce for a time her own ideals. With grief, with anxiety, must the lover of his country regard the present aspect and the future prospect of the nation's life. With serious purpose, with utter self devotion, he should prepare himself for the untried and difficult service to which it is plain he is to be called in the quick coming years. Two months ago, America stood at the parting of the ways. Her first step is irretrievable. It depends on the virtue, on the enlightened patriotism of her children, whether her future steps shall be upward to the light or downward to the darkness."

The above lofty sentiments undoubtedly voice the feeling of those in Massachusetts, who represent its highest type of civilization. Too many of the clergy babble on the same low plane, a travesty upon the religion of Jesus, but some of us recall that it was thus with a majority of the D. Ds. as they defended the "Divine Institution of Slavery."

NEWTON CLUB.

The third in the series of promenade concerts given by the Waltham band on the ground adjoining the clubhouse, Wednesday evening, was as marked a success as those which have preceded it. More than 1200 members of the club and their guests were grouped about the tables on the enclosed space on the jawn and massed on the piazzas for the enjoyment of a delightful program of operatic and patriotic music. Light refreshments were served at the small tables, and the large open space in the centre of the enclosure was reserved for dancing. The grounds were brilliantly illuminated, and the electrical effects were even more beautiful than on the previous evenings.

Daily Through Drawing Room Car Service to the Adirondacks, via the Fitchburg R. R., will be inaugurated June 27th. Boston Office, 260 Washington street, is the place to apply for space.

Does Baby Thrive?

If your baby is delicate and sickly and its food does not nourish it, put fifteen or twenty drops of Scott's Emulsion in its bottle three or four times a day and you will see a marked change.

We have had abundant proof that they will thrive on this emulsion when other food fails to nourish them.

It is the same with larger children that are delicate. Scott's Emulsion seems to be the element lacking in their food. Do not fail to try it if your children do not thrive. It is as useful for them in summer as in winter.

Ask your doctor if this is not true.

OF HISTORIC INTEREST.

A Cane Made From Wood From the Spanish Warship San Pedro.

"I have in my possession," says Mr William W. Birth, the senior member of the Oldest Inhabitants' association, "a walking stick the history of which is at the present time very interesting. It was a part of the hand rail of a stairway leading to the cabin of the commander of the Spanish warship San Pedro, which was blown up in the Caribbean sea off the coast of Venezuela or Colombia the year before the termination of the long continued and persistent struggles of the South American states for their freedom from Spain.

"In 1819, I think it was, the San Pedro was sent from the mother country with several hundred troops to take the places of a similar number who had served their allotted time and were to be returned to their homes. There was also on board the ship about $1,000,000, sent to pay off the troops and meet other demands. While the ship lay off the coast, transferring troops, a fire broke out on board and reached the magazine. How many persons perished I have now no means of ascertaining, but the presumption is there was a very great number. The money all went down with the ship and was at the bottom of the sea undisturbed for more than a quarter of a century. A wrecking company of Baltimore got permission of the South American government off whose coast at a known locality the ship lay to search for treasure, paying probably a percentage of the result to Venezuela or Colombia. The find was the recovery of some $25,000 or $30,000 in silver. Several years after this effort another attempt was made to recover something of value, but the motion of the sea had so covered the ship with heavy masses of sand that only a small amount was secured.

"On leaving the wreck the mahogany rail of the stairway was taken off to be made into canes. The treasure, together with the rail and a small brass cannon found on board, was deposited in the Union Bank of Maryland in Baltimore. I had then living a lifelong friend, an officer of the bank, who was presented with one of the canes made from the rail of the ship's cabin. He had the stick mounted with a silver eye and silk cord and tassel and presented it to me. And for a number of years I have been and am now using it.

"I saw at the bank black masses of the coin recovered, which the intense heat of the burning ship had melted and mixed with coal ashes and cinders."—Washington Star.

Unqualified.

A young woman who has a position as assistant librarian at one of the largest public libraries in Pennsylvania says that she has a keen sympathy for the ticket agents at railway stations—a sympathy born of kindred woes.

One day two well dressed young women approached the desk. One of them took a memorandum from her pocketbook.

"Can you tell me how many yards—oh, that's the wrong list!" she said, hastily bringing forth another slip of paper. "Here it is. Will you please tell me who is Rudyard Kipling's favorite author?"

"I am unable to tell you, never having heard that he had one," I admitted.

"Dear me!" said the young woman irritably. "It's one of the questions for our next club meeting. Well, which one of Thackeray's books brought him in the largest income?"

"That you can probably find out by consulting a book the number of which I will give you," I said, turning to one of my reference drawers as I spoke.

"Oh, I can't stop to look it up!" she said hurriedly. "I thought you could tell me at once. Well, there's one more thing. Bessie Cummock, my cousin in St. Louis, had a splendid book when I was there last year for anecdotes of famous people. I can't remember the name of it or who wrote it, but it was about so big"—illustrating with one finger on the desk—"and it had a dark green cover. Now, can you tell me what it is? Some day when I have time I'd like to get it out. Of course you must have it in the library."

For the third time I was obliged to confess my inability to give her direct information. She looked at me with a piercing gaze and turned away, saying audibly to her companion: "There! That just shows what all this talk about their being examined for positions in public libraries amounts to! Three perfectly simple questions, all on literary subjects, and she couldn't answer one of them!"—Youth's Companion.

The Dressmaker's Trick.

One of the most successful modistes in town owes her prosperity very largely to a scheme so simple it is strange that no one had ever thought of it before. It is as follows: The dressmaker's establishment is in a double house—that is to say, one with rooms on either side of its hallway in the middle. One side is dedicated to one sort of customers, the fat; the other to another sort, the lean. No "plump" woman was ever known to pass beyond the portals leading to the side not intended for her, and no "sylph" has ever yet been permitted to acquaint herself with the mysteries of the apartments consecrated to those of adipose figure. Of course, it is the mirrors. Every dressmaker has them of the two sorts, but not every dressmaker has been shrewd enough to keep the two so distinct and separate.

The fat customer at this particular establishment sees herself on all sides in glasses that make her look like the sylph she isn't, while the living skeleton herself would present rounded contours if reflected by the magic mirrors lining the walls of the thin rooms. "Thick" and "thin" is the way the two sets of apartments are designated by the employees of the establishment. The audience room into which a brand new patron is ushered for the first time is without mirrors of any kind, and the first thing that Elise says to Celeste, when she announces the new arrival, is, "Shure, an is she thick or thin?"—New York Sun.

According to "The American Primary Teacher," the following answers were recently given in a written examination to the question, "What Causes Rain?"

"Fog."
"Faucet."
"God."
"The ocean."
"Heaven."
"Pipes from the ocean."
"The sun gives it."
"The sun gets it from the ocean."
"At night the sun goes down and gets it."

NEWTON HIGHLANDS.

—Mrs. Nelson has gone to Hull for a stay of several weeks.

—The picnic of the Congregational Sunday school has been postponed to Saturday, July 2d.

—The Shakespeare Club took a barge ride on Saturday last, and went to Wayside Inn, Sudbury.

—Mr. H. S. Hiltz, station agent at Eliot, is taking his annual vacation, and has gone to Nova Scotia.

—Mrs. Phipps has been elected a member of the executive committee of the Newton Education Association.

—Mr. W. F. Shaw has taken a suite of rooms in Mr. McAdams' two apartment house on Floral avenue.

—Rev. Harry L. Hartwell, wife and child from New Hampshire, are the guests of Mr. E. Thompson and family.

—Cadet Harry C. Loud has returned from the Highland Military Academy at Worcester, where he has been at school the past year.

—Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Wood of Hyde street have gone to Maine for a stay of two weeks, and will be the guests of his parents.

—Mr. Thomas McKenzie, who has occupied a suite of rooms in Patterson block, has moved to the W. A. Moore house on Cook street.

—Rev. Mr. Phipps has returned from Worcester where he has been attending the graduating exercises of the Highland Military Academy.

—Mr. John Walsh, one of the carriers at the postoffice, who has lately been married, has gone to housekeeping in the house on Cook street, near the rail road crossing.

—Mr. H. M. Beal of Eliot, who has been serving on the jury at the Cambridge court house, for the past three months, the term of court having been completed, is now off duty.

—Rev. E. P. Hooker, D. D., and family of Winter Park, Fla., who have been the guests of Mrs. Robbins for a few days, have gone to Marshfield, where they have taken a cottage for the summer season.

—The Hon. Gorham D. Gilman will give his famous lecture on Hawaii, illustrated with maps and charts in the Congregational church, next Sunday evening at 7.30 o'clock. The public are most cordially invited to be present.

—Rev. T. W. Bishop will preach at the Methodist church next Sunday morning and evening. Sunday school at 12 m. Young people's meeting at 6.45. The Children's Day Sunday school concert last Sunday evening, was a most interesting one, and drew a large congregation. The floral display was fine.

—At the Congregational church on Sunday last, children's Sunday was observed, and the rite of baptism was administered to three children, and six received Bibles, of those who were baptised ten years ago. The Sunday school concert in the evening was an occasion of much interest, and a large audience was present. The floral decorations around the pulpit were very attractive.

—Rev. Wm. H. Pierson of Somerville will preach in exchange with Rev. Wm. Safford Jones at All Souls Unitarian church, Highland club hall, Sunday morning at 10.45. The Sunday school meets at noon. All are cordially invited. Mr. Pierson was formerly minister of the Orthodox Congregational church in Somerville, and is now minister of the First Congregational Unitarian society. He is an able preacher.

—Railroad officials and passengers waiting about the stations of the circuit branch of the Boston & Albany railroad last Friday evening were treated to the unusual sight of seeing the 7 o'clock express to Newton Centre go flying through with a drunken man balancing on the cow-catcher of the engine. As soon as the station agents could regain their breath, they were not slow in telegraphing ahead what was taking place in front of the engine of the express, with the result that at this place the train was stopped and the man placed under arrest by Patrolman Nat Seaver. To the officer he stated that his name was Charles Glenwood, and that he belonged in Westboro. Several days ago he had come to Boston with considerable money, and having lost it all and having nothing left to get home with, he had got on the engine at the Kneeland street station. In the local court Saturday morning, his case was placed on file. Just what kept Glenwood from falling off the engine is not known, but even had he succeeded in remaining on the train, it being on the circuit branch of the road, he would soon have found himself back in Boston.

—Mrs. Geo. G. Phipps addressed the Home Missionary Society at Wellesley, on Tuesday.

—Mr. W. H. Seaver has gone to Connecticut on a business trip, and Mrs. Seaver has as her guest her cousin, Miss Gage of Portland, Me.

—Miss Sarah Thompson, who has been a teacher in a school at New Salem, is at the home of her parents on Hartford street, and is now taking her summer vacation.

—The Epworth League of the Methodist church will give a concert on Thursday evening at the church. They will have the aid of the choir and other friends, and have secured Miss Bartlett of Newtonville as a reader.

—Miss Lucy A. Blake, daughter of Mr. Wilbur F. Blake of this place, formerly of Haverhill, was married to Mr. Ralph P. Hoagland of Boston, son of the late Dr. Pratt Ralph Hoagland, at high noon, Wednesday, at the home of the bride's parents, No. 32 Griffin avenue. The Rev. Charles E. Havens of the Congregational church officiated. The parlors of the residence were tastefully decorated with flowers. Music was furnished by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. Joseph B. Proctor. The bride was arrayed in white Swiss muslin over white taffeta silk, trimmed with lilies of the valley. The sweet simplicity and loveliness of the bride won the silent applause of the guests as she entered the room leaning on the arm of her father, and moving to the music of Lohengrin.

The Successful Remedy for Nasal Catarrh

must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will by its own action reach the inflamed and diseased surfaces. ELY'S CREAM BALM combines the important requisites of quick action and specific curative powers with perfect safety to the patient. This agreeable remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. All druggists cheerfully acknowledge that in it the acme of Pharmaceutical skill has been reached. The most distressing symptoms quickly yield to it. In acute cases the Balm imparts almost instant relief.

WABAN.

—Many from here attended the Wellesley float Tuesday evening.

—Mrs. Fred Weston has returned from a long visit to New York.

—Mr. B. S. Cloutman left Sunday on an extended business trip through the West.

—Mr. Heaton's house on Chestnut street has been sold and owner will soon occupy.

—Mr. F. W. Webster has been making quite a few repairs on his place the past week.

—Mr. E. L. Zeis arrived home Sunday from the West, after his regular three months business there.

—The Rev. Julian C. Jaynes of West Newton preached the baccalaureate sermon to the students of Waban school last Sunday afternoon, in the church.

—Mr. P. Jennings has sold the land owned by him on Collins road to a Mr. Shattuck of Boston. We hear that Mr. Shattuck has refused 20 cents a foot for some of it.

—Frank Reed, an employe of the Newton & Watertown gas light company, while driving through this place last Saturday morning, fell from his team, and sustained a severe injury to his back.

—Rev. Wm. Hall Williams was taken ill last Sunday morning with an attack of ptomaine poisoning. The children's service was postponed till next Sunday, when Mr. Williams expects to officiate.

—The Waban school students held their third annual field sports Monday. The closing ceremonies of the school took place Tuesday evening with a reception by the principal, and a dance in Waban hall.

—Mr. Edwin P. Seaver of Woodward street was re-elected Tuesday night by the Boston school board, superintendent of the Boston public schools for the term beginning Sept. 1st, 1898, and ending Aug. 31, 1900. Mr. Seaver has held the position for a number of years.

—Charles Reed, who takes care of the arc lights on this side of the city, met with an accident last Saturday, when about to ascend one of the poles, his horse starting and throwing him from the team. He was unconscious for a short time, and the ambulance was called, but he was not seriously hurt, other than stunned and getting a pretty good shaking up.

—Student R. C. Batcheldor added new laurels to his many already won, at the National Interscholastic Association meet at New York last Friday. He ran against the best association runners in New York and Long Island in the 880 yard run, and came in first in fast time of 1.59 2-5, making a new track and association record. He was accorded a great reception on his return home. He was to take part in the water sports at Riverside, Saturday afternoon, but did not arrive in time. One of his fellow students, Groynne Evans, captured 2nd prize in the submarine swim at that place.

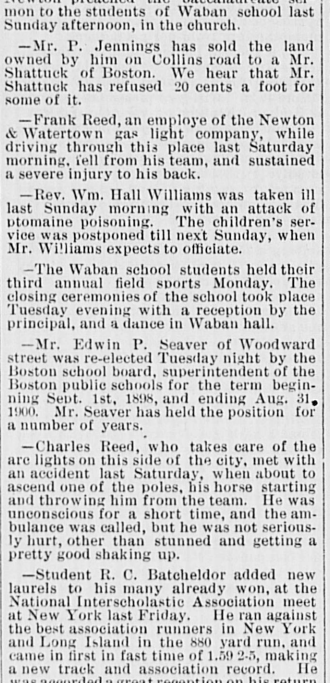

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

HE HIT A WOMAN.

It Wasn't Chivalrous, but It Was a Case of Necessity.

Colonel Jake Haager is one of the most gallant as well as one of the handsomest men who ever sat in the chair of the chief of police and bossed the bobbies in blue. He is a native Kentuckian, full of respect for the fair sex, gentle as a summer zephyr and as full of sympathy as a can is of cove oysters. Yet upon one occasion he drew back his fist and gave a woman a blow in the face that shook her from the tip of her velvet toque to the end of her gum overshoes.

In days gone by the notorious Carrie McBride, who is now dead, was noted as the worst woman in the city. She was a rawboned, powerful creature, with a fist on her like a battering ram, and at least once a week for 20 years it was necessary to arrest her. Policemen shivered when they saw her drinking, for they knew they were in for a fight before the day was over. She knocked them down and tore their uniforms, battered their faces and made them objects of ridicule on their beats. Out of their meager wages they had to replace the uniforms she destroyed, and their families suffered in consequence. Of course it would not do to strike a woman and thus place a blot on the fair name of Kentucky. Years went by, and Carrie became worse than ever with age.

Colonel Haager was keeper in the Central police station one day when she was brought in, fighting desperately. As soon as she saw him she said:

"Since when did all you boys get on the police force? Well, I'll just take a fall out of you!"

Then she drew back her fist and prepared to give him a beating. Like a flash the fist of the young man shot out, and Carrie dropped with a dull thud against the iron door of the station. With a dazed look on her bloated face she arose and staggered toward him. Down she went again as suddenly as before. Raising herself on one elbow, she contemplated him for a moment and said:

"Say, you're all right. I'll give up, and you'll never have any more trouble with me."

The spirit of the noted virago was broken and ever afterward she was gentle as a lamb.—Louisville Commercial.

EATING IN ZUNILAND.

The Table Manners Are Accommodating and the Cuisine Is Varied.

The code of differential politeness in the home as taught by the matron of the casa is a very definite and exacting one. No matter how hunger panged a family may be, it will not dine until all be present or their absence accounted for, and as soon as one has finished eating all desist. But it is also an unpardonable breach of etiquette if any one is so badly mannered as to stop at his eating while any other has his hunger still unsatisfied.

The Zuni cuisine is a varied one, and a dinner as placed on the floor before a family and its guests will sometimes number a dozen platos, almost any one of which is a puzzle to a stranger. Corn, chiles, meats and vegetables are the main compounding ingredients of most of the dishes, and the results are generally satisfactory, although sometimes surprising to an alien. The greatest delicacy in all the list, according to native judgment, is made of stuffed and roasted sheeps' intestines, with their original and half digested contents still remaining undrawn. A yard or more of the entrails of an animal, with added bits of suet, are wound upon a spindlelike stick and toasted. The outside only is well crisped, and as the eater slowly unwinds his bologna bobbin during the course of a long dinner he will frequently lean it before the hearth blaze or lay it upon the embers to continue its roasting. Corn and wheat breads are made in great variety, and the yeast for their lightness is prepared by the women, who chew samp of corn. After being thoroughly masticated the corn is mixed with fine meal and warm water and fermented in small ollas left standing near the fireplace, when lime flour and some old yeast are added. The sa-ko-we, as Zuni yeast is called, is an excellent leaven, if one will but calmly strangle his remembrance of its molared milling. By its use meal made from blue corn will be changed to green or yellow meal to blue during baking.—Edward Page Gaston in Woman's Home Companion.

Henry Clay's Fame Abroad.

R. Hall McCormick, a wealthy Chicagoan and a Bar Harborite and an earnest searcher after art treasures, relates the following anecdote which came under his personal experience while straying through a London art gallery on a recent tour abroad.

While gazing at a large oil painting of Henry Clay a passing employee of the gallery stopped, and Mr. McCormick, in order to start a conversation, said quizzically, "Can you tell me, sir, whom does this picture represent?"

The attendant, realizing that his questioner was an American, replied in a rather pedantic manner: "Why, sir, do I understand you to mean that you don't know who that 'ere is? Why, sir, that's 'Enry Clay, sir."

"Henry Clay," repeated Mr. McCormick, with a merry twinkle in his eye. "Why, I never heard of him. Who is he, pray?"

"Why, sir," ejaculated the pitying Briton, "and you don't know 'Enry Clay, and you an American, sir? Why, 'Enry Clay's the man what makes the cigars, sir." And with a contemptuous frown the attendant went about his business.—Bangor Commercial.

Fooled the Teacher.

The Sunday school teacher had reached a point in the lesson where she was dwelling upon the future reward of those who behaved properly here when the audacious small boy, who frequents most Sunday schools, spoke up and asked if all good people went to heaven.

"Certainly," replied his teacher.

"Well, has my grandmother gone to heaven?" persisted the youngster.

"Surely she has, my boy, if she was a good woman."

"No, she hasn't," declared the fun loving youngster. "There she is over there!"

The teacher turned to other phases of the lesson.—Congregationalist.

Wifely Insight.

"I don't know whether to take my old umbrella or my new one."

"Are you coming home early or late?"

"What difference does that make?"

"Lots of difference. When you come home late, you never have any umbrella."—Detroit Free Press.

MIDDLESEX, ss.
PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs-at law, next of kin and all other persons interested in the estate of Charles W. King, late of Newton, in said county, deceased.

WHEREAS a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court, for probate, by Emma H. King and Joseph H. Caldwell, who pray that letters testamentary may be issued to them, the executors therein named, without giving a surety on their official bond.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court, to be held at Cambridge, in said County of Middlesex, on the fifth day of July, A. D. 1898, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioners are hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once in each week for three successive weeks, in the Newton Graphic, a newspaper published in Newton, the last publication to be one day, at least, before said Court, and by mailing, post-paid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate, seven days at least before said Court.

Witness, Charles J. McIntire, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this fourteenth day of June, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight. S. H. FOLSOM, Register.

Newton Free Library 21Oct97

Windsor Hall School.

The summer term of Windsor Hall School begins July 5th, and continues ten weeks. Both boys and girls are received as day pupils; girls only as boarding pupils. Special attention will be given to pupils of the High and Grammar Schools who have found difficulty in keeping up the work of their classes. A few weeks of individual instruction will wonderfully lighten the work of such pupils during the next school year.

Pupils expecting to pass college entrance examinations in September will also find opportunities to work up any subjects in which they are deficient. Circulars will be sent on application.

The fall term begins September 21st.

Address Dr. Charles H. Clark, Waban, Mass.

—The Rev. Francis B. Hornbrooke, last Sunday evening, at the Channing church, gave an interesting memorial paper on the Rev. Mr. Woodward and Dr. Kendall, who were pastors of the First church in Weston from 1751 to 1814. The Rev. Mr. Hornbrook was pastor of this church from 1876 to 1879, and was called from there to Newton.

—Thieves made an unsuccessful attempt to enter the premises of Mr. Fred Trowbridge of Newtonville avenue, some time Sunday night or early Monday morning. A rear window was forced, but the noise of the burglars operations aroused the members of the family, and the would-be house breakers were frightened away.

—The Newton cricket club went to Lynn Saturday, and there played a game with the Lynn club, which was marked by some very heavy batting on the part of the home team, by which they won with only three wickets down. The visitors went to bat first, and played well for 101, when the Lynn men went to work and hammered everything until they had scored 109 for three wickets. Young for Lynn took five wickets for 20 runs.

—During the summer months special Sunday evening union services under the auspices of the Young People's Societies connected with the Evangelistic churches, will be held at the Methodist church. The leaders of the meetings will be as follows: July 3, Mr. Pitt F. Parker; July 10, Mr. Chauncy Allen; July 17, Mr. S. P. Thrasher; July 24, Mr. F. E. Sites; August 7, Mr. J. Luther Roll; August 14, Miss Jennie Smith; August 21, Rev. Walcott Calkins; August 27, Mr. D. J. McNichol; Sept. 4, Mr. D. Fletcher Barber.

—The patriotic strawberry festival and sale in the vestry of the Methodist church last evening, won the liberal patronage of a large number of church members and friends. About the walls were elaborate decorations, with the "Stars and Stripes" the predominating feature. Booths for the sale of useful and fancy articles were loaded with good things, but before the evening had closed, eager purchasers had carried off the majority of the articles. An entertainment program made up of very pleasing numbers was presented by capable artists, and added greatly to the pleasure of the evening. The affair, which was given under the auspices of the Ladies Society, netted a substantial sum.

—There was an immense gathering of representative Newton people on the grounds of Mrs. George S. Harwood's beautiful estate, "Sunnyhurst," last Friday afternoon and evening. The attraction was the out door fete given under the auspices of the ladies of the Immanuel Baptist church, and was a complete success. Booths heavily laden with a variety of saleable articles were liberally patronized, while amusement features as pony rides, a sleight of hand performer, palmist, phrenologist, etc., furnished abundant entertainment. The following ladies assisted by a large number of young society ladies had the affair in charge: Mrs. George E. Merrill, Mrs. George S. Harwood, Miss Ethel Harwood, Mrs. John Lodge, Miss Lucy Stiles, Mrs. F. H. Tucker, Mrs. James Blake, Mrs. S. A. D. Sheppard, Mrs. Hosea Hyde and Miss Delia Hyde. About $700 was realized.

—There was a well-attended union meeting of the Young People's societies and the general congregation in the Immanuel Baptist church last Sunday evening. Mr. R. A. Wood and several co-workers from Boston, engaged in the college settlement work gave very interesting accounts of their labors and the results that had been accomplished.

—While Henry Proctor of Chelsea was riding a bicycle on Tremont street, Wednesday evening, his wheel collided with a wagon. Proctor was thrown to the ground. He sustained a compound fracture of the left arm, a fracture of the left collarbone, and a fractured rib on the left side. After receiving medical attendance he was taken to his home.

—The ceremonies attending the flag raising next Monday evening promise to be unusually elaborate. The flag was purchased this week and will be suspended across Centre street between Eliot and Brackett's block. The subscriptions from the merchants and public spirited citizens were quite generous. The order of exercises will include addresses by prominent citizens, singing by a chorus of school children, and selections by a band.

—Rev. Dr. W. H. Davis, accompanied by his son Robert, will leave next Wednesday for Portland, Oregon, to attend the National Congregational council to be held in that place. During his absence the pulpit of the Eliot church will be occupied by the following clergymen: July 3, Rev. Dr. C. H. Daniels, secretary of the American Board of Foreign Missions; July 10, Rev. W. H. Marren of Michigan; July 17, Prof. Lewis O. Brastwo of Yale University.

—The following is the list of the church officers of the Methodist church, who have been chosen to serve the coming year: Stewards—W. A. Alexander, L. L. Tower, J. E. Lawrence, J. C. Rochford, H. S. Leonard, Robert Falconer, W. T. Earle, G. M. Weed, H. Campbell, A. G. Barber, D. F. Barber, W. H. Doane, Chas. H. Peterson; trustees—E. W. Gay, Chas. Lawrence, J. W. Barber, Chas. Burgher, A. E. Wright, A. S. Weed, Thos. Kingsbury, A. R. Weed, Jas. Stevenson; recording steward—D. F. Barber; district steward—Geo. M. Weed.

—Brilliantly illuminated by hundreds of colored electric globes, and thronged by over 300 members and friends, the spacious grounds about the Hunnewell clubhouse presented a charming scene, Tuesday evening, at the first promenade concert held under the club's auspices. The representation of society folk was unusually large, and the affair was pronounced a decided success. The lawn was covered with canvas, and small tables were placed about the grounds. The music was furnished by the Boston Cadet Band Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. George H. Rowell. A program of unusual excellence was enjoyed and refreshments served.

—Though his method was different, and his intentions none the more honest, he was equally successful in victimizing storekeepers as those Saturday night highwaymen who, by their actions, added to the fame of the burgs of Lynn, East Boston and Cambridge, when the storekeepers and customers were robbed of their possessions. This man, whom several local merchants would like to see for about $5 each, visited Newton last Saturday night, and by one of the most ingenious confidence schemes successfully worked a number of unsuspecting business men. Who he was or where he is no one can tell, yet all are ready to testify he is a past-master of the swindling art. The beauty of his plan lay in its novelty. Therein also reposed its success. Here is how he operated: Calling on a local Italian fruit merchant he gave orders to have a quantity of bananas, value 50 cents, sent to a certain house on Vernon street. The inmates of the house, he explained, would pay for them. They however, possessed no change save a $5 bill, and the merchant should give his messenger $4.50, that there might be no delay in the transaction. A boy was despatched to the house, where his customer was met on the front steps, standing with key in hand and about to enter the front door. "Take the fruit around to the back door," said the man, "and they will take it." "You can give me the $4.50 now," he added, "and I will give you the $5 bill at the back door." Perfectly guileless the boy gave up the money and trudged around to the back door. Sitting on the steps he waited for about twenty minutes. No one appeared, and becoming suspicious he pulled the bell. The person who answered his summons was quite indignant, declaring no bananas had been ordered. A search was made for the slick individual but he had departed. The strangest part of the story of this man's escapades is that he operated in several of the villages with like success, and within an hour and a half. It is estimated that he gathered in about $20.

—Remember the Newton Bazar when you are buying for the 4th. Lowest prices.

—Mr. W. H. Blodgett is again a guest at The Hunnewell, with Mr. Ernest Blodgett.

—Miss Mildred Springer gave a musicale at her home on Arlington street, Saturday afternoon, June 18th.

—The Boston variety store, Taylor building, offers all sorts of Fourth of July goods at low prices. See adv.

—The Hunnewell is having a very successful season, as nearly every room has been engaged for the summer.

—Israel Hall of Somerville was sentenced to six months in the Concord reformatory Wednesday morning, on the charge of the larceny of a bicycle from A. E. Dresser.

—Mr. Frank Briggs returned from Haverhill the first of the week for a short visit with his parents, at their home on Washington street.

—The graduating exercises of the parochial school of the Church of Our Lady on Washington street, will take place next Thursday evening, in the school hall.

—Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Hazlewood have as usual taken rooms at The Hunnewell for the summer, and divide their time between the hotel and their summer home at Pembroke.

—Rev. E. H. Byington has arrived in Portland, Oregon. While in Pasadena, California, Sunday, June 5, he preached at the morning service of the First Congregational church in that place.

—Mr. Robert L. Van Buskirk, well known in our village, as he was formerly a resident for some years, will sing at the evening service next Sunday at the Methodist church. Service begins at 7.30.

—The defective roadway on the Centre street bridge, which has harbored pools of water since the bridge was built, was repaired yesterday, much to the gratification of the public. But that stairway to the station platform has not yet materialized.

—The annual church picnic of the Newton Methodist Episcopal church, held at Forest Grove, Waltham, last Saturday, was enjoyed by over a hundred church members and friends. A variety of amusements was furnished and the day throughout proved a most enjoyable one. Special electrics on the Newton street railway carried the picnicers to and from the grove.

—The New York mail was about four hours late in arriving, Wednesday morning. The reason for the delay, it is said, was the repairing of a bridge near New Haven, which had recently become defective. All trains at that point were switched off to a branch in a rather round about way, making the distance greater from New York to Boston, from 25 to 30 miles. The New York newspapers, which generally reach here at noon, were not received until night.

—Dr. E. R. Utley testified in the investigation of the charges against Miss Hartwell, matron of the Somerville Hospital, yesterday. He said that he had known Miss Hartwell for 30 years. His father and himself had been the attending physicians in Miss Hartwell's family during this period. She had never been seriously ill and never was a sufferer from any form of nervous disease, and, so far as he knew, her temperament was even. She was well qualified by education, health and disposition to fill the position of matron. It was upon the suggestion of his father that she went to John Hopkins Institute to prepare for a nurse.

—Mr. W. F. Bowman of The Hunnewell has taken the Breakewater, at Wood's Holl, again this season, and it will open July 4th. The hotel had the most successful season in its history, last summer, under Mr. Bowman's management, and many of the guests have written for rooms this season. It is located on one of the most beautiful spots along the New England coast, and the water being on both sides, there is always a cool breeze, while the harbor is a noted resort for yachts and pleasure craft. The natural beauties of the place are such as to attract wealthy people, and many handsome estates are in the neighborhood, which lend interest to the many beautiful drives. Not the least attraction to many people is the excellent table kept by Mr. Bowman, which is not excelled by any hotel of the kind, and the same care that has made the Hunnewell famous in this department, will be given at the Breakewater. For the whole summer, or for a few weeks, it will be a very satisfactory place to visit.

NOBLE RESPONSE.

YOUNG MEN OF NEWTON NOT LACKING IN PATRIOTISM—CALL FOR VOLUNTEERS IS READILY ANSWERED.

Newton, through her brave young men, has responded nobly to the call for volunteers. With 106 men in its ranks, inclusive of officers, Co. C will leave next week for Camp Dewey at So. Framingham, there to be mustered in the regular United States service, and prepared to execute all further orders.

Having received official instructions from army headquarters Monday afternoon, Capt. E. R. Springer and Lieut. R. W. Daley began the work of recruiting the company to the number of 106 as required by the Governor's orders. On Tuesday, a notice printed on cards a foot square calling for recruits was posted in conspicuous places throughout the city.

The recruiting officers placed a large flag on the front of the building. A private in dress uniform was stationed at the front door, and the old armory had every appearance of a full-fledged recruiting station. The number of applicants since then has been unusually large. In Nonantum a branch office was established in charge of Lieut. R. W. Daley on Thursday, and many names have been enrolled.

Recruits are being received daily, and up to this noon 93 names are on the list. Major C. C. Foster and Adjt. Hugh Bancroft conducted a physical examination Wednesday. Out of some 80 that were examined over 60 were accepted. Those who have volunteered since that time will be examined tomorrow and next week.

Newton residents are determined that the company shall go forward thoroughly equipped, and private subscriptions are being solicited for this purpose. It is thought likely the city government will appropriate money to furnish the men with necessary clothing. It is expected the company will start next week for South Framingham, there to remain a few days before departing for the south.

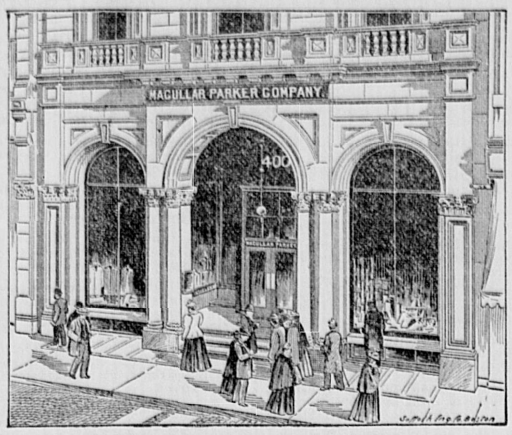

Lieut. H. B. Inman, who has been 1st lieutenant of the company for a number of years failed to pass the physical examination. It is much regretted by every member, as he was exceedingly popular. In all probability Lieut. Daley will fill the vacancy, and a promotion be made from the ranks.

Adirondack information of all kinds is obtainable at Fitchburg Railroad City Office, 260 Washington street, Boston.

THREE HOURS' SESSION OF THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN MONDAY EVENING—MATTERS OF COMMON IMPORTANCE OCCASION NO LITTLE DISCUSSION—MAYOR COBB CRITICISED.

The length of Monday evening's session of the board of aldermen made it necessary for the board members to avail themselves of a portion of the recently appropriated $500, that they might be driven to their homes in carriages. A glance at the docket before the meeting would give one the impression that there was little other than routine business, yet for three hours, lacking eight minutes, the docket with several side issues, was seriously deliberated.

There was no absence of oratory. The order appropriating $10,000 for the remodeling of the upper part of city hall and the police station, and the J. H. McAdams petition caused no little discussion. The former called forth criticism of those who had the matter of remodeling the building in their charge, and one alderman even suggested that it might be called a misapplication of the public funds. The reason for the criticism is, apparently, because the money was expended for the work before the amount had been appropriated. Some doubts as to the propriety of such proceedings seemed to fill the minds of several aldermen, and as a result the order was referred to the public property committee.

Another matter, the consideration of which seemed a little unusual, if not irregular, was J. H. McAdams' petition to move a building at Newton Highlands. Permission was refused him at the regular meeting of the board, June 6. Another petition was presented at Monday evening's meeting, and after being granted was later reconsidered and granted. The attending circumstances had their humorous side, and even the aldermen themselves laughed. The board was called to order at 8 o'clock, President White wielding the gavel. The first business was a hearing upon the widening of a portion of Lexington street, Auburndale.

Mr. R. M. Saltonstall, representing Mrs. Miller, who owns the lot at the southeast corner of Auburn and Lexington streets, spoke in opposition.

He felt that Mrs. Miller's property would be seriously affected. As for the widening there was no public demand, the street was amply wide for all purposes. Mr. Saltonstall pointed out on the city engineer's plan the advisability of taking land entirely on the opposite side of the street, although economy necessitated using both sides This seemed more desirable as there were building restrictions on the land, the southeast side shade trees would not be affected, and the thoroughfare would be entirely straight, not uneven in appearance as the plan showed.

Mr. Saltonstall suggested that the widening would greatly benefit a certain street railway, and that the company should be made to share the expense. Inasmuch as the Massachusetts legislature were about to pass a bill that would compel street railways to contribute to the cost of street widenings made for their benefit, he thought it desirable that action should be delayed. Mrs. Miller's lot would be ruined if 3660 feet were taken.

Mr. P. A. McVickar thought the widening desirable, unless it was taken to benefit a street railway. The terminus of a street car line at the head of Lexington street would not be looked upon kindly by Auburndale residents. They did, however, want to see Lexington street widened.

Mr. A. C. Farley favored the widening of Lexington street, and felt he voiced the sentiment of Auburndale residents. It was very desirable that this thoroughfare should be made to form a dignified approach to the center of the village. The future of the village should be considered. It was sure to develop, and this important matter should be looked at in connection with the widening. It would be cheaper for the city to widen both sides, and of great benefit to Auburndale to have the street widened any way. The street railway had already signified their willingness to contribute toward the widening cost, and there was no need of awaiting the legislature's proceedings.

Mr. Farley having concluded his remarks the hearing was closed.

COMMUNICAIONS, PETITIONS, ETC.

In a communication from Mayor Cobb it was suggested that an additional sum of $10,000 be appropriated for remodeling the police station, court house and city hall.

Members of hose company 8 invited the board to attend the flag-raising at Nonantum. Accepted.

R. Bennett and eight others asked for two street lamps on Virginia road. Referred to the street light committee.

H. E. Bothfeid petitioned for street lights on Grasmere street and Graymere road. Street light committee.

The same gentleman asked that a sewer be constructed on a portion of Grasmere street. Referred to the sewer committee.

The petition of F. McGrouty for a common victualler's license was granted.

Max Fruchtman asked for a reconsideration of his petition for a junk license. The matter was laid on the table.

Petitions for concrete crossings and sidewalks on Lowell avenue, Highland avenue and Allston street were referred to the highway committee.

On the petition of the telephone company for conduits on Lexington, River and Cherry streets a hearing was ordered for June 30th.

Samuel W. Tucker was appointed an auctioneer.

Newton Highlands residents asked that repairs be made to the park at the intersection of Hillside road and Bowdoin street. Referred to the committee on parks. The Newton Highlands Improvement Association asked repairs to sidewalks and edgestones on several streets in that village. Highway committee.

J. H. McAdams asked for permission to move a building at Newton Highlands.

Alderman Chesley said he understood that Mr. McAdams stood ready to expend a thousand dollars on the building if the permit was granted.

Alderman Lyman asked for information from the license committee, and Alderman Whittlesey explained just what action had been taken by the committee.

Alderman Lothrop expressed his opposition to the granting of the petition.

Alderman Ivy thought the question for the board's consideration was the safety of trees and wires on the streets, where it was proposed to move the building, and not a question of whether or not the house would be a desirable acquisition to the neighborhood. All other considerations than the safety of the trees and wires should not be brought before the board. As regards the neighborhood, the house, if moved there, would be as tenantable as any in the vicinity. The land was in poor condition, and the house at any time would not be occupied by other than a cheap class of tenants.

Alderman Lowell spoke in favor of granting the petition, and was anxious for a settlement of the matter.

A vote was then taken and resulted in a tie, 8 in favor and 8 opposed. President White then cast the deciding vote against the granting of the petition. This did not settle the matter, as soon after Alderman Heymer's arrival, an hour later, the matter was reconsidered and finally disposed of in Mr. Adams' favor.

Petitions for concrete crossings and sidewalks on Beacon and Lincoln streets, for street watering on Nonantum place, for street numbering on Islington road, for concrete crossings and sidewalks on Henwall, Berwick, Grasmere and Cabot streets were referred to the highway committee.

Residents of California street petitioned for a police signal box on that thoroughfare.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The committee on highways reported recommending street watering on Ruthven road, Ward 7; Waterston road, Ward 7; Exeter street, Ward 3. Recommending setting of edgestones, Centre place, Ward 1; Nonantum place, Ward 7. Recommending construction of concrete crosswalks, Centre street at Centre place, Ward 1-7; Walnut street, at Centre street, Ward 5. Recommending reference to committee on claims of petition of James T. Allen for damages to swimming pool; recommending leave to withdraw on petition for crosswalk on Fisher avenue, Ward 5.

The journal committee's report recommending the approval of June 6th records, and a report relative to enrolment of an ordinance regarding width of streets were adopted.

The license committee reported recommending granting licenses to G. A. Guenther to erect frame building for bakery on Border street, Ward 3; E. E. Marden, Evergreen avenue, Ward 4, innholder; Norumbega Park cafe, Commonwealth avenue, Ward 4, common victualler; O. Anderson, Commonwealth avenue, Ward 4, common victualler; recommending that leave to withdraw be granted to Antonio Bontembo, 31 Curve street, Ward 3, wagon; F. Negrotti, 372 Watertown street, Ward 2, innholder; Mrs. M. A. Bennett, Commonwealth avenue, Ward 4, common victualler; Mary A. Barthelmes, West street, Ward 2, common victualler; Max Fruchtman, Waltham, junk; Thomas Roach, Pine street, Ward 4, junk; Nime Platten, 420 Watertown street, Ward 2, junk; Louis Kniznik, Waltham, junk; Max Meilman, Crafts street, Ward 2, junk; John Mullaney, Wellesley, junk. George Kimball's license for permission to buy junk was referred back to the committee.

The committee on rules and orders reported recommending amendment to Art. 2 of rules and orders, (Sect. 12) in new draft, accepted.

The street light committee reported recommending granting the N. & W. Gas Light Co. attachments to poles on Woodland road, Ward 4; Chestnut street, Ward 3; recommending location of street lights on Champa avenue, Ward 5; Ellis street, Ward 5; Pearl court, Ward 7; Grove street, Ward 4; recommending leave to withdraw on petitions for street lights on Dudley street, Ward 5; Rowe street, Ward 3. Reports accepted.

The sewer committee reported recommending correction of sewer assessment on William Connell, Walnut street, Ward 6; recommending additional appropriation of $150 for completing work at the Newton Cemetery; recommending leave to withdraw on petition for sewer in Derby street, Ward 3; recommending sewer construction in Breamore road, Ward 7.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS AND ORDERS.

The first matter of unfinished business to be taken up was the order appropriating $1500 additional for furnishing the new High school. Alderman Shattuck of the finance committee said the furnishings required were absolutely necessary. The school committee wanted some $2000, but the committee deemed $1500 sufficient. There was no discussion and the order was adopted.

Alderman Hunt moved that the order discontinuing taking land for sewer purposes in the Bartlett estate, Ward 7, be taken from the table and "be not adopted."

The president thought such a motion out of order, and advised the alderman to move it be adopted, and then voted it down. This did not seem to satisfy Alderman Hunt nor his supporter, Alderman Lowell, so the motion was made that it be rejected. This motion was carried.

Another subject of unfinished business was the report of the finance committee on the expenditure of $2,564.74 dog tax for use of the school committee. Legally the money can be used for no other purpose. It has been the custom for the past fifteen years to adopt this order during the first part of the year with a quantity of routine matters. For the gratification of several members it was laid over, but Monday night a unanimous vote adopted it.

These orders were adopted: Authorizing street watering on Ruthven road, Ward 7; Waterston road, Ward 7; Exeter street, Ward 3; authorizing setting of edgestones on Centre place, Ward 1; Nonantum place, Ward 7; authorizing construction of concrete crosswalks, Centre street, at Centre place, Wards 1-7; Walnut street, at Centre street, Ward 5; appropriating $150 for completion of sewer work at Newton cemetery; correcting sewer assessment on William Connell, Walnut street, Ward 6; rescinding order taking land for sewer purposes through Bartlett estate, adopted June 6, 1898; authorizing sewer construction in Breamore road, Ward 7; Franklin street, Ward 7; granting N. & W. Gas Light Co. attachments to poles on Woodland road, Ward 4; Chestnut street, Ward 3; authorizing location of street lights on Champa avenue, Ward 5; Ellis street, Ward 5; Pearl court, Ward 7; Grove street, Ward 4.

The routine orders for the observance of Independence Day by displaying of flags, ringing of bells, etc., were adopted, with the amendment that the bells be rung at 7 a. m. instead of sunrise.

Alderman Lyman wanted the money for displaying flags expended, but the amount appropriated for ringing bells devoted to the Soldiers' Relief. No action was taken on this, however.

The water board was authorized to expend $655 for the construction of water main.

CRITICISM OF THE MAYOR.

It was the order appropriating $10,000 more for finishing the work of remodeling the upper part of city hall and the old Pierce school that gave opportunity for debate. Of course the McAdams business tested each members' knowledge of parliamentary ruling, yet it lacked truly "sensational" features.

An order was presented authorizing the issue of a $10,000 twenty-year bond for the completion of the interior improvements at city hall and the Pierce school.

Alderman Lowell thought it unwise and improper to act upon the order without its reference to the public property committee.

Alderman Baily said he would protest against the expenditure of public money before an appropriation had been made. If an appropriation was nearly exhausted it was the duty of the executive officials to notify the board before laying out a further sum. This should be done instead of going ahead with the work, and then bringing in an order to be adopted as though the board were a lot of machines.

As chairman of the public property committee, Alderman Nagle said he had no desire to shirk his duties, but he felt that he would rather have the order referred to the finance committee.

Alderman Lowell was still in favor of the order going to the public property committee and could not accept any amendment to the contrary. He endorsed Alderman Baily's remarks.

Alderman Lyman referred to the first time the improvements were brought before last year's board for consideration. He did not think the members understood fully what it meant. The plans meant nothing, and were not fully comprehended by those who voted in favor of the scheme. To go ahead and expend this money before it was appropriated was a misapplication of the public funds.

To the persons who had done this it was anything but creditable. If such things were to be done among the higher officials of the city, what could be expected of the city's minor servants? As an amendment to Alderman Lowell's motion he moved that the matter be referred to the public property committee, and that body be instructed to provide the board with a history of the entire transaction, from the time that the plans were first presented to the present date.

Alderman Ivy seconded the motion made by Alderman Nagle, that it be referred to the finance committee. He had full confidence in the integrity and ability of the mayor. Anyone who was familiar with the conditions before the changes knew what was an urgent neeessity at City Hall, and the old lock-up was a nuisance. The work had been done judiciously, carefully, and had been properly supervised. Nothing could be gained by suggestions of public censure.

Alderman Lyman thought the motion of Alderman Ivy inconsistent with the proper consideration of the subject.

It was moved by Alderman Ivy that the board consider the matter in a committee of the whole and in executive session. With the alderman, Messrs. Chesley, Hunt and Whittlesey voted in support of the motion.

It failed to pass, and the discussion continued.

Alderman Baily—This matter of censure is a side issue which has been ingenuously introduced. The matter is simply a question of the business-like procedure with which the expenditure has been carried on.

Alderman Nagle withdrew his motion.

Alderman Ivy still contended that the finance was the proper committee to consider the subject.

Alderman Lyman claimed the public property committee did not seem to be aware that anything had been done. If it has been done they should know by whose authority. The council chamber was the place for such transactions and not the offices of the executive.

Alderman Baily thought the matter should be referred. If it was all right the public property committee would have a nice pleasant task, and the report would be one that all would be glad to listen to.

Alderman Ivy moved that the public property committee be instructed to consider the debt, the expenditure, and the necessity therefor.

After further, though brief discussion, a vote was taken and the motion lost.

Alderman Lowell's motion that it be referred to the public property committee, was then put. He refused to accept an amendment of Alderman Lyman to have a history of the entire transaction with the report of the committee.

The vote was then put and carried.

THE MCADAMS PETITION AGAIN.

Alderman Heymer moved a reconsideration of the McAdams petition.

Alderman Waite refused to entertain the motion of the Ward 5alderman, saying that he was sorry but it was no fault of the board that Alderman Heymer was absent during the early part of the evening, but as he was, it would be impossible.

Alderman Baily said he thought it would be necessary for a motion for reconsideration to come from one who had voted with the majority.

This President White ruled as proper.

Alderman Forkna l appealed from the ruling of the chair. His appeal was not sustained. In the meantime an order relating to the members remaining in their seats to the end of the session was presented, and after it had been disposed of, Alderman Hadlock, who had voted with the majority on the McAdams matter, moved its reconsideration. There was more parliamentary juggling on the part of several members, but the vote was soon put. It resulted in a victory for Mr. McAdams, he having been granted his petition by a vote of 10 yeas against 7 nays.

ALDERMAN NAGLE'S ORDER

or amendment to the rules of the board whereby each member is required to remain in his seat until the close of the session, caused a little breeze.

It was opposed by Aldermen Lowell, Whittlesey and Alvord. They felt that the right to leave when he desired, should be the privilege of every alderman, although he should remain until the business of the evening had been finished.

Alderman Nagle spoke in support of his proposed amendment, and was endorsed by Alderman Baily. The latter thought that the members should stay until the close of the session, that it was their duty to attend strictly to the city's welfare in considering all important matters.

Alderman Ivy objected to further consideration of the subject until next meeting, under the 11th section of the new charter.

At 10.52 o'clock the board adjourned.

SCHOOL BOARD.

WEDNESDAY EVENING'S SESSION DEVOTED TO THE TRANSACTION OF ROUTINE BUSINESS—FULL ATTENDANCE OF MEMBERS.

There ws a full attendance of members at Wednesday evening's session of the school board in the old Claflin school building at Newtonville. Promptly at 7.45 o'clock Chairman E. E. Hardy called the board to order. The first business was the confirmation of the following appointments: Edith A. Matteson and Louise Billings as instructors in sloyd, with salaries of $820 and $750 respectively; Caroline Long, assistant in the Bigelow school, with a salary of $620; Cora E. Braley, assistant in the Rice, with salary of $620; Harriet J. Brooks, assistant at the Pierce, with salary of $650; Marion E. Weld, assistant at the Wade, with salary of $620; Josephine M. West and Delia Griffin, unassigned assistants; Mary E. Haskell, assistant at the High school with a salary of $750.

There was no general report offered by the superintendent. The committee on rules, which had been authorized to prepare a new draft for the board's consideration, reported progress, and will present their report at the next meeting.

The finance committee reported recommending that the maximum salary of sewing teachers be at $550, and that the teachers now employed be paid the maximum salary.

It was voted that the salary of the instructor of music be made $1800. This is an increase of $300 over the amount he is at present receiving.

The finance committee reported the school department expenses for the month of June to be $18,113.25. An order authorizing the appropriation of this amount was later adopted.

The special committee of truancy reported through Chairman Benner. A long history of the employment of truant officers in Newton was given, with the recommendation that one man be employed who could give his entire time and furnish a horse and team for his own use. Such a man, the committee thought, could be employed for about $1,000. The committee's attention, Mr. Benner said, had been called to the matter by Judge Kennedy, who was desirous that some such plan as the committee suggested should be employed.

Orders appointing George Linn and J. Sampson as truant masters with a salary of fifty cents an hour for actual service, and W. J. Furbush as a truant master with a salary not yet fixed. It was voted to request the city government to appropriate a sum sufficient to employ a regular truant official.

On recommendation of the finance committee it was voted that the salary of the janitor of the Eliot and Jackson schools be fixed at $45 a month.

The same committee recommended that clerical assistance be employed at the High school, not to exceed in cost $12.50 a week.

The sloyd subject was brought up for consideration, and after some discussion was finally adopted.

WABAN.

—Mr. S. R. Reading has gone away to improve his health.

—Mr. A. G. Kemp has returned from a two months' trip abroad.

—Mrs. M. A. Dresser has just returned from a three weeks' visit with friends in Maine.

—Mr. W. R. Dresser has recovered his bicycle, which was stolen from him some time ago.

—Charlie Flint severely sprained his ankle one day last week while playing tennis. He will be laid up some time with it.

—The report has reached us that some boys are making a practice of shooting robins in this vicinity. It is hoped that it is untrue.

—The Waban school students are fast taking their departure for home, and now but a few remain. Principal C. E. Fish expects to leave for Cotuit in a about a week, to open his summer school there.

—Mr. J. W. Heaton's house and land, 17,500 square feet, on Chestnut street, has been sold to Mrs. F. L. G. Wiley of Cambridge, for residence. Terms private. Mr. H. H. Hunt's Dutch colonial house on Plainfield street has been sold to Mrs. Ida S. Davidson of Newton. There are 12,000 square feet of land with the place. The sales were made by Mr. F. A. Childs.

—Quite an amount of money has been subscribed for the fireworks display the 4th, but there are some yet who have not been heard from, and it is urgently requested that those who would subscribe to leave the amount with Mr. A.B. Harlow as soon as convenient, so that proper arrangements can be made. It is to be a big celebration, and one the town will long remember, so friends step forward and make the project doubly sure. The display will take place on the vacant land adjoining the Henshaw block.

Two Thousand Present.

With an illumination of unusual brilliancy, and a crowd of unlimited proportions the Charles river and its banks at Riverside, presented a most pleasing spectacle last Saturday evening.

All private and public boat houses were elaborately decorated with hundreds of paper lanterns, while a number of colored electric globes added to the effectiveness of the illumination. It was the third in the series of promenade concerts under the auspices of the Newton Boat club that brought out such a large throng.

By 8 o'clock the river space in front of the clubhouse and between the two bridges was filled with a solid mass of canoes, which effectually barred passage either up or down stream. At this hour the Waltham Watch Factory band stationed on the balcony of the clubhouse began the concert program. In addition to the band's selections, Mr. Clarence B. Ashenden sang "Annie Laurie" and "The Star Spangled Banner" in such a manner as to call forth storms of applause.

With the coming of dusk the thousands of colored lights and lanterns which outlined the front of the clubhouse and the adjacent boathouses were lighted, bringing the dark river with its freight of gliding boats into brilliant relief. Colored lights on the wooded shores across the river flashed out at the same moment, casting fantastic shadows upon the water, while every bridge and abutment was also outlined against the black stream in lines of fire.

The fairyland effect was completed by the dancing lights on scores of artistically decorated canoes.

The brilliant scene upon the river lasted until 10 o'clock, and dancing was enjoyed.

THE ILLS OF WOMEN

And How Mrs. Pinkham Helps Overcome Them.

Mrs. MARY BOLLINGER, 1101 Marianna St., Chicago, Ill., to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I have been troubled for the past two years with falling of the womb, leucorrhœa, pains over my body, sick headaches, backache, nervousness and weakness. I tried doctors and various remedies without relief. After taking two bottles of your Vegetable Compound, the relief I obtained was truly wonderful. I have now taken several more bottles of your famous medicine, and can say that I am entirely cured."

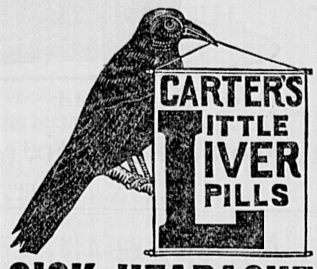

Mrs. HENRY DORR, No. 806 Findley St., Cincinnati, Ohio, to Mrs. Pinkham:

"For a long time I suffered with chronic inflammation of the womb, pain in abdomen and bearing-down feeling. Was very nervous at times, and so weak I was hardly able to do anything. Was subject to headaches, also troubled with leucorrhœa. After doctoring for many months with different physicians, and getting no relief, I had given up all hope of being well again when I read of the great good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing. I decided immediately to give it a trial. The result was simply past belief. After taking four bottles of Vegetable Compound and using three packages of Sanative Wash I can say I feel like a new woman. I deem it my duty to announce the fact to my fellow sufferers that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable remedies have entirely cured me of all my pains and suffering. I have her alone to thank for my recovery, for which I am grateful. May heaven bless her for the good work she is doing for our sex."

ANNUAL JUNE DRILL.

INTRICATE COMPANY MOVEMENTS CLEVERLY EXECUTED BY MEMBERS OF THE NEWTON HIGH SCHOOL BATTALION.

Fulfilling in every measure the expectations of a large crowd of admiring friends, the members of the Newton High school are to be thoroughly congratulated on the success of the annual out door drill held last Saturday afternoon on Appleton green, Newtonville.

Unusual interest was manifested by the audience, which did not hesitate in demonstrating its hearty approval by frequent applause. The conditions were most favorable.

The afternoon, with its clear skies and cool weather, was an admirable one for the manoeuvres, which were executed with a decided snap.

Over 500 spectators witnessed the exercises. Delegations were present, representing the city government and school board.

A concert by the school band opened the program at 2.30 o'clock. This was followed by the battalion drill.

The company competitive drill, next in order brought out the best efforts of the boys, each trying hard to gain for his company the company prize as well as the sword trophy offered by the school. From the start Co A in charge of Capt. Hollings handled themselves in fine style, and were easy winners. Company C, in charge of Capt. Waters, won second place.

The intricate work of the signal corps was followed by the individual competitive drill.

Attractive features of the afternoon were the dress parade and the manoeuvres of the artillery corps. The latter won great praise for their work in handling the gun.

At the close of the drill Mr. Charles F. Avery of the Newton school board, after mak ng brief congratulatory remarks, presented the prizes, awarding the competitive prize, a sword, to Capt. Waters of company A, and a silk marker flag to Capt. Hollings of company C. The other prizes were awarded as follows: First individual prize, Corp. Waitt, company B; second prize, Sergt. Logan, company D; honorable mention, Sergt. Mandell, company A, and Sergt. Howes, company C.

The judges were former officers of the battalion, Capts. Higgins, Paine and Davis.

One Won, One Lost.

Judging from the scores of the Newton Club's A. A. baseball team in the last two games, it would seem that Newton's talent find conditions more favorable at home than abroad. Last Friday afternoon in one of the scrappiest games which has been played on the Cedar street grounds this year, Newton Club A. A. won from the strong North Attleboro nine, 8 to 0. The visitors could do nothing with Dowd, only scoring hits, while the Newton players found Woodcock an easy mark, touching him up for eight singles, two doubles and two three-base hits. Crolius and Mahoney led at stick work. Woodcock was in poor form and had evidently not recovered from his recent sickness. The score:

But twenty-four hours passed when the North Attleboros had revenge. Bacon of Bowdoin made his debut for the home nine and did quite well. The easy manner in which the local nine solved Dowd's curves must have grieved him greatly, because he kept up a continual kick at the umpire, who finally asked for an officer to remove the pitcher from the diamond. Poor support from his fielders may also have caused Dowd's ugliness.

NEWTON LOWER FALLS.

—Green Harbor will be the resort for many families here during July, who have rented cottages there during the month.

—A fire among some carboys at Billings & Clapp's laboratory last Saturday afternoon was extinguished with little damage.

—An electric car was stalled near the bridge Monday evening, by motors getting out of order, and made quite a delay to travel during the evening.

—The overseers of the different departments of the Dudley Mills gave Mr. Severson a complimentary dinner at Nantasket, last Saturday prior to his departure from here.

—Mr. Chas. Severson, asst. supt. of the Dudley mills, is to sever his connection with the concern about July 1st, and will make his home in New York where his family is now located.

—Miss Sadie Miller gave a very pleasant birthday party to her many friends and acquaintances last Saturday evening at her home. The grounds were handsomely illuminated, and all festivities held on the lawn.

—The M. E. Society held their annual lawn party on the church grounds last Friday afternoon and evening. The affair netted quite a sum from sales of ice cream, cake, etc., and making a pleasant occasion for the large number attending.

—A horse attached to a light wagon owned by Ralph Seaverns, and in charge of two hired men, took fright by the breaking of a breeching strap, Monday night, when coming down the Concord street hill, and turning the corner of River street, succeeded in getting partly over a 4-foot fence when stopped. The fence was removed from the animal and the extent of damage was to the harness alone. The occupants of the wagon escaped possible injury by jumping out.

Sloyd in the Public Schools.

To the Editor of the Graphic:—

I believe your paper has not published the report of the committee on text books and courses of study, presented to the school board at its meeting of March 23, 1898.

I intended to send you a copy sometime ago but accidentally omitted to do so.

As the report was the result of much labor and painstaking investigation and expressed the unanimous opinion of that committee, I have no doubt you will gladly publish it in the interest of a full knowledge of the course of the discussion by your readers.

Inasmuch, however, as the present legislature has just passed an act, of which section 4 is as follows:

"Every town and city of twenty thousand or more inhabitants shall maintain as part of both its elementary and its high school system the teaching of manual training." It seems as if the members of the school committee who are opposed to the instruction in sloyd may feel constrained to yield their opinion to the authority of the legislature, and consent to a reconsideration of the adverse action of the board at its May meeting and permit the instruction in sloyd to proceed in some manner.

It will be observed, that the statute does not require that parents shall compel their children to take instruction in sloyd, or that the school board shall make such instruction compulsory.

The section quoted is part of an act entitled, 'An Act Relative to School Attendance and Truancy," and thus, doubtless escaped the opposition of many, who are opposed to such legislation, but did not suspect it to be lurking under such a title.

The section is so loosely drawn that it would be easy to resist it if one were inclined to do so.

I do not now intend to enter into a public discussion of the matter, outside of the school board, (where I have always welcomed discussion) but I will simply state my individual opinion, which is that if we continue to encumber our public school curriculum with instruction of inferior educational value, we shall see the children of the educated and of all who can afford it, withdrawn more and more from the public schools and sent to private schools which will be conducted more wisely.

A serious result of this is likely to be that less and less interest will be taken in the public schools by a portion of the community whose influence would be most beneficial, and the public schools will be looked upon, as they have been to a great extent in New York city, as good enough for the poor.

I have shown the above to Dr. Huntington, who authorized me to say that he approves of it fully. I have been unable to see Mr. Crehore but know his opinion of the matter and have no doubt that he agrees with Dr. Huntington and me.

Very respectfully,
FRANCIS T. BENNER.

NEWTON SCHOOL COMMITTEE—REGULAR MEETING, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1898.

(Copied from the official record.)

Dr. Huntington, for the committee on text books and courses of study, presented the following report, which was received:

The committee on text books and courses of study, to which was referred the recommendation of the superintendent, Mr. Geo. I. Aldrich, that a sloyd outfit be put into the Peirce grammar school building to accommodate those grammar schools of Newton not now provided for at the Hyde school, begs leave to report as follows:

1. That it is not expedient to extend further the sloyd instruction in bench work in the Newton grammar schools, for the following reasons:

(a) Because it is a subject of inferior value as a discipline and intrudes upon the more important and more legitimate courses of our grammar schools.

(b) In so far as it is a discipline, either for mind or morals, it does not offer anything, especially new or valuable.

(c) In so far as it is recreative, there seems to be no necessity of putting recreation into school hours, to count as work, since all such elements of our pupils' training belong outside the curriculum and in vacation seasons.

(d) It adds a subject which has only a limited educational value to an already overcrowded curriculum. Enrichment of grammar school courses has already gone on until we are in serious danger of superficial results by pupils whose minds are confused with a multiplicity of subjects. A wise direction of this range of public education must begin to discriminate against an omnibus schedule.

(e) The sloyd training is simply an advanced grade of the kindergarten. It appeals to the initiative, not to the constructive and originating powers of the mind; it is especially adapted to the boy of slender endowment, holding his attention by the help of tool, hand and eye. There is a serious question whether the principle of the kindergarten getting knowledge through amusement, ought to go much beyond the infantile period.

(f) The sloyd plan rejects all notions of utility. The training is not intended to lead toward industrial skill and the earning of daily bread. Hence its most manifest end is ignored.

(g) If sloyd training is good for boys, it is equally good for girls, and if we once commit ourselves to this form of training we shall be obliged to incur the expense necessary to accommodate both boys and girls.

(h) We have no "congested districts" in Newton, and no ignorant or partially civilized immigrants who are totally unacquainted with the ordinary household operations, and therefore we are not affected by the reasons which are sometimes given in Boston and other large cities for the introduction of sloyd and cooking into the schools.

(i) It may be admitted that sloyd training is useful in developing power of attention in feeble minded children or in those of weak will power, but the public schools ought to be organized mainly for the average child, that is, with a view to the needs of children of ordinary capacity.

II. The committee furthermore reports, that since by a statute of the Commonwealth, all cities of over 20,000 inhabitants are required to maintain, as a department of their High schools, manual training as an organic part of the school system, (see Statute 1894 Ch. 471), it is not expedient to go further in a course for our grammar schools, prescribed by our legislature, until we have provided some means for executing the mandate already given by statute in respect to manual training in the High school.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. —Mr. James Schefflin hss removed to Hopkinton.

—Julius Peterson raced at Gloucester last Saturday.

—John Burns has left his position at the Newton Rubber Co.

—There will be a band concert at Hemlock Gorge Reservation next Sunday afternoon.

—There are letters in the postoffice for John Kowlaick, Kate Brown, Woscrech Podulatio.

—Mrs. George Carter of Atlanta, Georgia, is visiting her father, Mr. H. H. Williams of Ellis street.

—The highway department is busy constructing large concrete crosswalks on Chestnut and Ellis streets.

—Mr. Desgardins of Newton Centre lead the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting at the M. E. church Tuesday evening.

—Miss Mary Mitchell of Hudson is in town the guest of Miss Tucker of High street. Miss Mitchell has recently returned from college in Brooklyn, N. Y.

—A large delegation representing Echo bridge council, Royal Arcanum, will attend the exercises to be held next Monday evening under the auspices of Mt. Ida council at Newtonville.

—Clerk Edward Billings of the postoffice is receiving subscriptions for the government loan of $200,000,000. Quite a number of patriotic Upper Falls residents have added their names.

—Rev. Nathaniel Fellows and Mrs. Fellows of Lynn were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Howe of High street. Last Sunday morning at the Methodist Episcopal church Rev. Mr. Fellows administered communion.

—The first holiday tourney under the auspices of the Newton Upper Falls golf club took place Bunker Hill day on the Chestnut street links. Both morning and afternoon matches were played. At night the members and friends met at the residence of Mr. Charles Mills on Eliot street, and enjoyed an informal reception.

—A large number of admiring parents and friends gathered in the upper hall of the Wade school building Monday evening to view an exhibition of the articles produced by the classes in sloyd, drawing and sewing. The results seemed to be most pleasing and satisfactory, and much commendation of both teachers and pupils was heard.

The public schools teach almost every known branch of study but the one most important branch of all. What does it profit your son if he has an intellect like a Newton, and is mentally an Admiral Crichton, if he has a weak and puny body and not the remotest idea of how to care for his health? A boy should be taught from the start that his health is his most precious endowment. Without health, all the talent, all the genius, and all the ambition in the world are worthless. A boy should be taught that success in any walk of life, that happiness, and life itself, are dependent upon his care of his health.

When a man feels that he is losing his health and vigor, when his cheeks no longer glow, his step is no longer elastic and the sparkle of health is no longer in his eyes, he should work less, rest more and resort to the right remedy to restore his bodily vigor. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a natural medicine—a scientific medicine. It does no violence to nature. It works with and not against nature. It promotes the natural processes of secretion and excretion. It imparts vitality and power to the whole system. It gives plumpness and color to the cheeks, sparkle to the eyes, steadiness to the nerves, strength to the muscles and the animation of health to the whole body. It makes the appetite keen and hearty. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and nerve-tonic and restorative. Medicine dealers sell it and have absolutely nothing else "just as good."

"I was afflicted with pimples and boils, and running sores on face and neck," writes Robert S. Wert, Esq., of No. 615 Galloway Ave., Columbus, Ohio. "I took Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets,' and was cured."

Constipation is the commonest beginning and first cause of many serious diseases and it should always be treated with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets used in connection with the "Discovery." These are the most perfect natural laxatives and permanently cure.

WASHINGTON'S FAREWELL ADDRESS.

Washington's farewell address has been so sneered at of late by certain congressmen and others who favor the imperial policy that it is well to recall just what he said.

"The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations is, in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements, let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith. Here let us stop. Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties in the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities.

Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. If we remain one people, under an efficient government, the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality we may at any time resolve upon to be scrupulously respected; when belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will not lightly hazard the giving us provocation; when we may choose peace or war, as our interest, guided by justice, may counsel.

Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor or caprice?"

Really, to people who have not lost their heads by the dazzling vision of a world-wide conquest, these words would appear to have been written with especial reference to the state of affairs that exists today. Ask any of these men who favor such a radical departure from our established policy, which has proved its wisdom by a century of trial, the same questions that Washington asked, and see if they can give a reasonable reply.

They say we need a wider market, but our trade with Canada alone far surpasses anything we could ever hope from Hawaii, the Phillipines and Cuba and Porto Rico combined. The gain would be insignificant, and the cost might prove fatal to our national well-being, as the cost of an army and navy to maintain our control of those islands would be greater than the benefit we would derive from them. Why should we entangle our peace and prosperity for such a small gain, and acquire something that would cost more to keep than we could ever get out of it.

MR. BENNER of the school committee, gives the other side of the Sloyd case, in a letter in another column. Sloyd, in itself, may be harmless enough, but it represents only one of the mass of irrelevant things that are being crowded into our school curriculum, things that represent the pet fads of enthusiasts, who think only one thing is really necessary in education, and that is the particular fad they have taken up for the time being. But the great question in education nowadays, is what to leave out of all the important things it is desirable for children to know. Some think that the evils of eating meat should be taught to young children, others that the evils of drunkenness should be taught in a "scientific" way, others favor teaching the evil effects of tobacco, and then there are the evil effects of strong tea, of root beer, and a thousand other things, all of which would have their advocates, until our schools, from being the best that exist, would become the laughing stock of the whole world. Sensible people must make a stand against all these pet schemes somewhere, and every one can see the absurdity of teaching other people's hobbies. Some other states have given their schools over to ignorant legislators to such an extent that only those send their children to public schools who cannot afford to patronize the private schools, but here in Massachusetts it has been the boast that our schools were so good that they were patronized by both the rich and the poor. Many people think that the public school is like a free dispensary, where patients are willing to try all sorts of new remedies because they cost nothing, but sensible people do not wish experiments tried upon their children, when the school years are all too short for the teaching of what years of experience has proved to be really necessary. Possibly, as Mr. Benner hints, all these fads that have been crowded into the schools, may have something to do with the starting up of so many private schools, and their patronage by parents who believe in common sense and in the excellence of old-fashioned methods of education. Some educational authority has said that the "New Education" is only fitted to make cranks of the rising generation, and whether this is true or not, a certain degree of conservatism in our school methods would do no harm.

THE Farlow Hill property is being developed in a very business like way, and sewers, water and gas are being put in the streets as they are being built. On the Waverley avenue side, the owners are reserving land for the widening of the street to 90 feet, which will come some day, and they are making plans to connect with the boulevard which is to be laid out by Boston through Strong's pond. They should make an effort to connect with the Boston or Newton electrics, so as to make their property easy of access. The railway to be constructed along the new boulevard past Strong's pond, would be of great benefit to all that section of Newton and people along Kenrick street especially could well afford to give all the land required for extending the boulevard. Probably some day a railway will be laid on Waverley avenue, and this would be of more direct benefit to Newton, as it would call the residents to Newton, while the Strong's boulevard cars would only take them to Boston and Brookline, so that they would feel very little interest in Newton.

SOME criticism was made last week of the discourtesy shown by the school committee in not replying to Mayor Cobb's suggestions in regard to the observance of flag day. As a matter of fact, Superintendent Aldrich wrote a reply to Mayor Cobb the day his letter was received, and put it in the office himself. At last accounts, Mayor Cobb had not received the letter, which is a suggestive commentary on the folly of those who mixed up Newton's post office business by placing the central office at Newton Centre. Probably the letter will get to Mayor Cobb in two or three weeks more. People who are in any hurry when they wish to sent a letter from one village of the city of Newton, Newton Centre, Mass., either send it by special messenger or take it themselves.

THE Metropolitan Park Commission is making good progress with the development of Charles River, and have made a number of seizures of land on the Weston side of the river, between Waltham and the Weston bridge, and also between Lower Falls and Upper Falls, on the Newton side.

THE railroad corporations were easily able to defeat Speaker Bates' bill for the removal of the East Boston grade crossings, when it came up in the senate, Speaker Bates represented the residents directly interested in the matter, but that did not count with the senators.

Canoe Races at Quinsigamond International Regatta.

It is probable that no better contested canoe races have been held this season than the "tandem" and "club 4" single blade events at the regatta at Worcester, Tuesday. The Wawbewawas were represented by John B. May and Geo. R. Heckle in the tandem event, and by May, Heckle, Wm. J. Osgood and Edw. Lawrence, Jr., in the "club 4" race.

May and Heckle met in the tandem race the Wachusett boat club crew, Edw. H. Ten Eyck, winner of the Diamond Sculls at Henley last year, and Chas. H. Lewis, the well known sculler. The race was one of the finest in the regatta. The Wawbewawas gained a slight advantage in the start which they held, at 60 strokes to the minute, for about three quarters of the distance when the Wachusetts drew up nearly even, but the Newton men had something up their sleeves and increasing their stroke to 65 they crossed the line, winners by about two canoe lengths in 4 m. 42 4-5s., Wachusetts in 4 m. 46 1-5s. This time in canvas canoes, which the rules required, is the fastest time ever made over the Quinsigamond course for tandems. The most valuable prize ever offered in a canoe race was awarded in this event, May and Heckle each receiving a 40 pwt. gold medal bearing an embossed Indian's head. The Wawbewawa Canoe Association that entered them for the event, received a silver shield on an oak plaque, and in addition to this the "Quinsigamond Tandem Canoe" trophy which will be held by them until the next regatta, the estimated value of all the prizes for the event being $150.

The "club 4" race, on account of number of contests, was run in heats. The Wawbewawas met in the first heat the Wachusett crew of Edw. N. Ten Eyck, G. T. Cavanaugh, Jas. F. Herbert, and Chas. H. Lewis. When the start was made the Wawbies got away first with an advantage of half a length. This lead they held for 200 yds. when the Wachusetts drew up even. The Newton men once more drew away, and again the Wachusetts cut down the lead, but the Wawbies had a spurt in them also and they crossed the line two lengths ahead. Time 4 m. 41s., and 4 m. 44s for Worcester crew.

In the final in "club 4" the Wawbewawa team met the Lakeside boat club; Ames, Robbins, Flint, and Kelley. This crew already held the championship of Lake Quinsigamond and were perfectly fresh, not having paddled before in the regatta. This race was the greatest contest of the day with the exception of the eight oar shell race. At the word the Lakesides secured a magnificent start gaining an advantage which they never lost. At the quarter mile the Auburndale men spurted but the Lakesides responded, and a few seconds later, Capt. Heckle again called for a spurt but the Newton men had had too much paddling for one day and were unable to raise the stroke, but they held on gamely and prevented the Worcester men from increasing their lead and with no change in positions the crews crossed the line in 4.33 Lakesides, and 4.39 Wawbewawas, but both crews inside of the Lake record for the course.

The Newton men were very nicely entertained at the fine clubhouse of the Lakeside boat club after the regatta, and thoroughly enjoyed their trip to Worcester.

Retires From Business.

Mr. George H. Braman of Ivanhoe street is about to retire from active business and will devote himself to the care of his property and his handsome estate. He has been in the dry goods business in Boston over 52 years. Jan. 1, 1846, he entered the house of Waterston, Pray & Co. on Kilby street. Remaining with this house a while, with credit to himself and all concerned, he then entered the house of J. C. Howe & Co. He was with them 14 years, when he begun business "on his own hook." He made a beginning in the dry goods commission business, and by push, good judgment and strict integrity, he has won a competency.

For over 30 years he has handled the account of B. B. & R. Knight & Co., manufacturers of "Fruit of the Loom" bleached goods, a make of bleached cottons that is better known than almost any other. He has a list of customers he has had throughout his business career, which includes about 160 jobbing and manufacturing houses, in dry goods, woollens, hats, and millinery goods. Each individual house he distinctly remembers, with each of the partners and their peculiarities. He is able to make almost an encyclopedia of the above trades in Boston during the past 50 years. Of his 160 customers only a few remain—only six houses strictly in the dry goods jobbing business.

Through his study of the trade and his customers he has been able to manage his business successfully, even in periods of excitement and depression, when others were failing. When asked how he has succeeded in avoiding bad debts, he answers that he has done it through declining to give credit to those unworthy of it, and always requiring accounts to be settled promptly at the time agreed upon.

His memory, always prompt and reliable, has been of great service to him in a business career so marked. Memoranda have not always been necessary to him, and his customers have usually relied upon his recollection of transactions, while his word has always been considered as good as his bond, or that of any other man.

—One of the local dealers was somewhat puzzled the other day at the demand of a customer for a "fleece-lined" yeast cake. After a few inquiries it was discovered that the would-be purchaser desired a "Fleishman."

—An accident occurred at the power house on Homer street, Wednesday morning about 6.30. The supply pipe over the engine burst, and the engineer, Patrick Pendergast was badly burned. Travel on the street railway was stopped for nearly two hours.

—An alarm was rung in Friday noon for a fire in the two apartment house on Clarendon avenue owned by John M. Case, and occupied by Messrs. F. W. Henderson and William Armstrong. The fire started in a closet on the second floor, probably from a defective flue. The loss was about $1200.

—The alarm from box 231 last Friday afternoon was for a lively blaze in a double house on Clarendon avenue, owned by M. J. Cooke and occupied by W. Armstrong and F. M. Henderson. The fire was caused by a defective chimney, the damage amounting to $800. Insured.

—Frank Amidon of Brooks avenue, while out riding on his bicycle Sunday morning, got off the machine near the boulevard and went into a field to pick some wild flowers. Amidon had no sooner reached the field than a man who was standing on the sidewalk jumped on the wheel and rode off.

—Last Friday evening residents in that vicinity of the High school building complained at police headquarters that a number of women and children were insulted and frightened in that vicinity the night before by a man, who is described as about 40 years of age, with black hair streaked with gray, and dressed in black coat and hat.

—Methodist Episcopal church—Sunday evening at 7.30, the pastor, Rev. Franklin Hamilton, will preach a sermon especially adapted to the vacation time about to begin. The subject will be "Christ and Hot Weather." There will be a special musical program and the services will be short. All seats free. All young people especially are invited. In the morning at 10.45, Mr. Hamilton will preach as usual. All strangers are most cordially invited.

—The annual picnic of the Methodist Episcopal church will be held at Waushakum Grove on the shores of Lake Waushakum, South Framingham, on Saturday, June 25. A special car has been chartered on the Boston & Albany road, and will leave Newtonville station at 9 o'clock a. m. The charge, 25 cents, in each ticket is merely nominal, being less than half the actual expense. There will be exceptional opportunities on the beautiful lake shore to which the picnic is going, for games, boat, races, base ball, etc. The parents and friends of the children are invited, and any who may desire to join the party will be most cordially welcome. Each one will carry a basket lunch.

—An entertainment program, made up of a host of novel amusement features, will furnish abundant enjoyment to those who attend the garden party to be given under the auspices of St. John's Episcopal parish on the grounds of Mr. Charles F. Avery's estate on Crafts street, tomorrow afternoon and evening. The elaborate decorations of the grounds will together with the arrangement of the booths, etc., form a most charming and attractive spot for this outdoor carnival. In the afternoon there will be athletic sports for the boys, and prizes are offered to the successful ones. A Maypole dance will add to the gaiety of the occasion, while a sleight-of-hand performer, a palmist, phrenologist, and fortune-teller will contribute to the extensive list of attractions. In addition there will be a sale of useful and fancy articles and refreshments. An illumination in the evening will add to the brilliancy of the scene. Barges will leave Newtonville square at frequent intervals for the accommodation of patrons.

—Mr. F. S. Sherman will pass the summer season at Point Allerton.

—The family of Mr. J. L. Richards are summering at Point Allerton.

—Mr. M. W. French and family will spend the summer at East Jaffrey, N. H.

—P. G. D. Bailey will be the orator at the Union meeting of Samoset lodge at Taunton in July.

—Mr. Belcher and family will pass the summer months at Canton, for which place they left this week.

—Rev. E. S. Tead of Somerville occupied the pulpit at the Central Congregational church, last Sunday.

—Mr. George L. Keyes and family left this week for Hull where they will pass the summer months.

—Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Allen and J. M. Allen will pass the summer season at the Atlantic club, Point Allerton.

—Mr. J. W. Fenno and family of Cabot street are at the seashore where they expect to remain during the warm season.

—"True Friendship" was the subject of the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting at the Central Congregational church, Sunday evening.

—Miss Savery, who has been the guest of Miss Winnifred Pulsifer of Walnut street, has returned to her home in Troy, New York.

—Mr. Thomas Carson, who was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Curtis at their home on Lowell street, left this week for Dalton, Mass.

—Mr. Arthur J. Mundy and family, who have been abroad during the past year, are occupying their summer cottage at Norwood's Heights.

—There are letters remaining in the postoffice for Ludigi DiTeso, Thomas Farrell, Charles Lawson, Howard Felton, William McKenzie, Miss Mary A. Fallon and Miss Cynthia A. Kendall.

—The square on the south side of the track has been much improved the past week. A new road bed has been made and the steam rollers have been busy. A new curb stone was placed on the south side of Bowers street near the M. E. church.

—Mr. M. A. B. Allen and daughter of Washington terrace, sail Thursday for Europe where they expect to remain several months. They will make it a combined business and pleasure trip, and will visit many of the celebrated places in the old country.

—Mr. J. E. Butler, 149 Linwood avenue, will close his house here the 30th to reopen his cottage "Wimona" at Green Landing, East Booth ay, Me., July 1st, for the season, over which his wife and daughter, Miss M. Fay, will preside. They will have as guests Mr. E. Clifton Butler and family, and Mr. Estabrooks, Mrs. Butler's father of Fredericton, N. B.

—"Heathcote" the handsome home of Mrs. D. C. Heath was the scene of a pretty lawn party Tuesday afternoon. The occasion was the spring reception of the Newtonville Woman's Guild. The following ladies received: Mrs. Heath, Mrs. H. H. Carter, and Mrs. Mary R. Martin. About one hundred ladies were present and a pleasant afternoon was passed. A light collation was served.

—A patriotic lawn party was held Wednesday afternoon at the home of Miss Jackson, corner of Crafts street and Cheesecake boulevard, for the benefit of the Newtonville Baptist Division. The grounds were handsomely decorated with flags and bunting. The musical program consisted of patriotic songs and instrumental renditions. The tables were decorated with the national colors, and the young ladies who poured wore patriotic emblems.

—Mr. Lester Ramsey of Washington park met with a serious bicycle accident in Boston recently. While riding on Commonwealth avenue, the handle bar broke, throwing him to the ground with great violence. He struck on his head and shoulder fracturing a collar bone and severely cutting and bruising his face. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and taken to the Emergency hospital. He was afterward removed to his home, and is reported as comfortable as could be expected.

—Norumbega Tribe, No. 76. I. O. R. M., celebrated their tenth anniversary on Wednesday evening, June 15th. About thirty members were present together with a number of brothers of Quinobequin tribe of Waltham. After completing the regular business, the banquet hall was opened, and the brothers partook of a bountiful spread of "Corn and Venison." Pipes were then lit and short addresses were made by P. G. S. Walter S. Butts, D. G. S. Abbott W. Hayden, Past Sachems J. G. Kilburn, L. F. Ashley, Geo. B. Cook and many others. Past Sachem W. H. Pearson officiated as chairman and master of ceremonies in his usual able and pleasant manner.

—It is to be hoped that the families who pass the summer season enjoying the cool breezes at the shore or mountain will remember the many families left with little or no means of support during the next few months, and leave a sum of money with Mrs. Martin for the relief of destitute cases. It seems to be a common mistake among well to do people that there is no suffering among the poorer classes in the warm weather, but if they consider the crowded tenements and miserable apartments occupied by the working classes they must realize the utter despondency to which they are reduced, and will do all in their power to prevent suffering and perhaps crime.

—The election and installation of the officers of Newton Royal Arch Chapter, was held Tuesday evening. The following officers were elected: M. E. H. P., John Glover; E. K., Charles A. Kellogg; E. S., Edward P. Hatch; treas., Lewis E. Binney; sec'y, George F. Williams; chaplain, Gorham D. Gilman; C. of H., J. Walter Hamilton; principal sojourner, C. H. Fessenden; R. A. C., H. W. Jackson; master of the third veil, George E. Thompson; master of second veil, James M. Beck; master of first veil, Horton S. Allen; S. S., Edward W. Bailey; J. S., Richard W. Douglas; tyler, James Pickens. The installation ceremony was performed by Excellent Companion George G. Davis assisted by Excellent Companion Lewis E. Binney as Grand Marshal. A banquet was served at the close of the business exercises.

Windsor Hall School.

The attention of parents is called to the advertisement of Windsor Hall school on page 1. Special help is offered to boys and girls who are to enter college in September, and to those who have found the work of the high and grammar schools difficult. Parents who are to be away from home may also find a pleasant home for their daughters, with much or little study as desired, and with good opportunities for out door sports.

—Inspector Fletcher arrested Israel Hall of Somerville, last Monday evening, on a warrant charging him with the larceny of a bicycle. In court Tuesday morning the case was continued for a week.

—The residents on Chestnut street appreciate the increasing thoughtfulness of the Pierce school children. Little if any paper is thrown down making the thoroughfare present a much neater appearance.

—The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of West Newton has been circulating a petition to be presented to the school authorities asking that a systematic course be laid out and text books provided for the study of physiological temperance as required by the state law of 1885. The petition contained the signitures of over 400 citizens.

—The regular meeting of John Eliot Lodge, A. O. U. W., was held Wednesday evening in Odd Fellows hall. Two candidates were initiated. A smoke talk was enjoyed and speeches were made by Past Master Workman Leddell of Newton Centre, brothers Chandler, Stevenson, and others. Piano and vocal solos were rendered by Messrs Shackley and Leddell.

—The Father Light society connected with the Baptist church gave an entertainment Monday evening in the church vestry. A pleasing program was rendered including musical and literary renditions. The evening closed with a pleasant social hour. Refreshments were served by the young ladies to whose thoughtfulness was also due the tasteful decorations of the parlors.

—Captain George H. Wadleigh left yesterday morning for Mare Island navy yard, San Francisco, where he will take command of the protected cruiser Philadelphia. It is not decided whether this cruiser will be sent to join Rear Admiral Dewey's squadron or act as the flagship of Admiral Kirkland, who it is expected will command the squadron that will probably be sent to Hawaii if that country is annexed to the United States. Capt. Wadleigh's family will reside in Lexington during the summer.

—In a game of baseball last Friday afternoon in this place the West Newton nine was defeated by the Silver Lake team. The score was 22 to 3. The features of the game were the pitching of Moore, the catching of Wilson and the fielding of Garrity, Kinsella, Nally, Mallen, Harrington, Charlton and Timmons.

—The twenty-eighth annual conference of the New England Seventh Day Adventists on Allens field closed last Sunday after a ten days' session. The conference has been attended by over 12,000 people, services being held twice daily, in charge of President H. W. Cottrell of the New England conference. During the week the annual meetings of the New England Mutual Aid Corporation, New England Tract and Missionary Society and the New England Sabbath School Association have been held. Among those who have addressed the conference are Allen Moon, Philadelphia: President A. E. Place of the New York conference, G. E. Fifield of Waltham, C. H. Edwards of Worcester, D. W. Reavis of New York, S. A. Farnsworth of Amesbury, F. W. Mace of Amherst, N. H.; Professors J. H. Haughey, M. D. Matson and D. D. Lake of South Lancaster Academy, F. C. Gilbert of Rochester, N. H.; A. H. Clark of Lowell and H. C. Giles of Everett.

—On Wednesday, June 1st, the nuptials of Miss Florence, daughter of Mrs. John Gibbs, of Kings road, London, and Mr. Philip N. Perrin, formerly a well known resident of this place, were celebrated at St. Andrew's church before a large number of personal friends of the bride and groom. The ceremony which was fully choral, was performed by Rev W. Manning, assisted by Rev. G. W. Emmett. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. G. F. Gibbs, and Mr. Grailly Hewett was best man. The bride's dress was ivory corded silk and pearl ornaments, with brussells net veil and orange blossoms. The bridesmaids were Miss Maud and Mabel Gibbs, sisters of the bride and Miss Agnes Gibbs of Liverpool. They wore charming costumes of pale mauve, with cream Indian muslin sashes and gold bangles, gifts of the groom. The wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride on Kings road. Mr. and Mrs. Perrin left for an extended tour on the continent.

—An exhibition of the new "Vapor Stoves" will be given at A. J. Fiske & Co's, next Monday. An advertisement setting forth the merits of these stoves will be found on another page.

—The dedication of Warren Memorial hall will take place Tuesday. Special music will be rendered by the Pierce school pupils. Col. Thomas Wentworth Higginson will be present and make an address.

—The Adventists, who have conducted a camp meeting during the past week on the lot known as West Newton common, have decided to continue the religious meetings during the summer and a portion of their number will remain here for that purpose.

—At the Veteran Firemen's muster at Lynn Friday, the Nonantum had the first play and made a good showing in spite of the fact that the wind was against them. Later, the wind changed and favored the last players. The Nonantum broke down the same day and will be thoroughly overhauled and put in repair before attending another muster. A new bottom will be put in, the last being put in over forty years ago.

—The inmates of the Newton Hospital appreciates the thoughtfulness of the W. C. T. U., which provides them with so many of the beautiful flowers. Many more could be used to brighten the many tedious hours of suffering. During the summer months when so many estates are vacant it would be a good plan to give the flower committee permission to cull some of the choice beauties which otherwise would waste their fragrance on the air.

—At the annual meeting of the shareholders of the West Newton cooperative bank, held recently, the following officers were elected: President, Marcus Morton; vice-president, C. F. Eddy; secretary and treasurer, Henry F. Pierce; directors, C. M. Whittlesey, J. H. Nickerson, H. H. Hunt, John Purcell, H. L. Burrage, A. L. Barbour, Ellery Peabody, H. L. Whittlesey, E. P. Hatch, C. E. Hatfield, S. P. Darling; auditors, M. A. Richards, J. Monaghan and Clarence F. West.

LOVE'S EPIPHANY.

Thus much the implacable face of life defies,
Thus much defies death's absolute decree,
One hour that claims of fate immunity
By right divine of birth; not suppliantwise
But calm, triumphal, in competent guise,
This one redress, this salvage, falls to me,
This one hour spared of all eternity,
Saved of the sacrificial flames that rise,
We two, within the cinctured silence there,
Looking on God's fair world with quickened sight
In that awed hush when souls meet face to face,
Through the heart's deep discernment were aware
Of rushing wings and sudden blinding light,
As of love's visible presence in the place.
—Elizabeth C. Cardozo in Century.

EXAMINED UNAWARES.

A Timorous Barnard Student Never Knew It Till She Had "Passed."

One of the brightest and incidentally the prettiest girls in Barnard college was also the most nervous at least at examination. Her affliction, not apparent ordinarily, rendered her miserably hopeless then. She was bound to stumble and fall over the simplest questions, and she knew it. She despised herself for it. As the fatal time approached she held herself in increasing contempt until she felt she was not worthy to live.

At Barnard she was preparing herself for a professorship in mineralogy and geology. She had done brilliant work through the year, both in laboratory and in recitations, so that those of her classmates who did not know of her weakness predicted certain honors for her. But the hideous finals were upon her and she was in despair.

The examination was to be oral and public, and to complete her agony they would be conducted by a Harvard professor, who was coming on for that especial purpose. A friend of hers in Barnard knew this professor and met him on his arrival. She told him of the trepidation of her brilliant friend.

On the morning of the fatal day, some three hours before the finals were to begin, the professor was walking through the Museum of Natural History and met there quite by chance his acquaintance and her nervous friend. He was introduced and begged the ladies to show him over the hall of mineralogy and geology.

The older of the young women excused herself, having an engagement, but the younger said she woud be only too happy. The honor was more than grateful, she said, for it would allow her to forget the torture in store for her. She took the professor all over the building, which was perfectly familiar to her. He asked her many questions, which she answered with wonderful accuracy, growing enthusiastic as she proceeded and talking brilliancy on her hobby.

Both the professor and his fair guide forgot the time until a messenger warned him. The girl looked like one suddenly awakened from sweet dreams to find herself on the edge of a precipice.

"Why should you fear now," said the professor as he took a pen from his pocket and hastily filled out a blank. "This is to certify what you have passed with honor."
—New York Press.

Not a Bit Like a Man.

I must tell you of something which happened less than a month ago. Several young women had been invited to attend a young companion on the occasion of her marriage, and a few days before, or perhaps only one day before, the ceremony a married kinswoman of the bride elect gave them all a breakfast. The married kinswoman is a woman of ideas, and as an entertaining feature of the affair she arranged a list of toasts. A girl from New York acted as toastmaster. She was almost an utter stranger to the other guests, but she made an exceedingly witty speech. In closing it she said:

"I shall ask Miss Blank to respond to the first sentiment, a sentiment which I am sure she will deal with earnestly and with feeling. Miss Blank, I give you, 'Why I Prefer Single Blessedness.'"

Everybody turned pale. Miss Blank flushed painfully, half rose from her chair, tried to speak, and then, to the New York girl's utter astonishment, she burst into tears and ran out of the room. The New York girl found out later that Miss Blank had once been betrothed to a western gentleman who had eloped with one of her friends almost on the eve of her wedding day. The New York girl was so angry at the hostess for putting her in the way of making such a false step that she took the next train home, and her place in the bridal procession was empty.—Washington Post.

A Parisian Puzzle.

During the last few weeks the Paris postal officials have been troubled with many letters which they find it impossible to deliver. They are all in one handwriting and are addressed for the most part to celebrated personages who have long since passed beyond the reach of earthly correspondence. One envelope bears the inscription, "M. le Marechal de Saxe, a Paris," and there is added the direction, "In case of absence forward immediately to the seat of war." Another letter is addressed to "M. Corneille, to the good care of his majesty, in Paris." The most extraordinary thing about the letters is their contents. All ask the question, "What influence do you think the employment of automobile cabs will exercise on contemporary journalism?" The writer signs himself, "Emile Ce Girardan, the Pantheon."

Parchment Paper.

Parchment paper may best be softened by spreading or rubbing with or dipping into a mixture of glycerin and calcium chloride, which will affect not merely the surface, but enter the pores. The distinctive indifferent character of the paper is not altered as by oil, which causes a stiffening of the paper, only to be softened by heat.

A Study of Love.

Love between a man and a woman of equal mind is like fluid in a U tube—always at a level in the two arms. Great love on one side and little love on the other exists only in novels. There can be one-sided physical love, but that is not worthy the name love.—Austin O'Malley.

Necessary Material.

"Yes, I've got lots of fresh material for my new story."

"What is it?"

"Pens, ink and paper."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The city of Banian, in Great Bucharia, is cut in the side of a mountain. There are 12,000 artificial caves, some very large, and two statues, one 90 and the other 20 feet high, each hewn from a single stone.

Chimneys were unknown to the ancients and are not mentioned by any Greek or Roman architect. A hole in the roof let out the smoke.

MASK AGAINST MASK.

The White Ones Scared the Burglars and Saved the Silverware.

We were telling ghost stories one rainy evening at a house party in a Maine town, says a Youth's Companion contributor, when a young lady remarked, with a laugh, "Mine is not exactly a ghost story, but is something like one, and it is, besides, a personal experience.

"I was spending a week with a friend, Frances Livermore, a few years ago, during the absence of her father and mother. The housemaid was called home by illness in her family, and my friend and I were left alone but for the company of a big hound. We were not at all timid, for Tigo was an excellent watchdog.

"On the last day of my stay we went to a picnic, from which we returned very tired and with faces sadly sunburned. We applied buttermilk and then covered them with white linen masks, with holes cut for eyes and mouth. We had great merriment over our comical appearance.

"Frances expected her father and mother to return that evening, and we sat up rather late awaiting them. At last, however, we gave them up and retired to bed and were soon asleep, with our masks still on.

"Along in the night we were awakened by a noise in the rooms below stairs.

"'They've come!' whispered Frances. 'I'll run down and see if they're all right,' saying which she rose, lighted a candle and started down stairs.

"As soon as she had left the room I decided to follow her, and lighting another candle I threw on a white wrapper and hurried after her.

"The sounds came from the dining room, and we proceeded in that direction. Frances opened the door, expecting to see her mother and father. Instead we beheld two masked men hurriedly putting the silverware into a bag.

"The burglars looked up as we appeared, then hastily dropped bag and silver and fled to the kitchen and out of an open window.

"We did not scream, but stood for a moment petrified with astonishment and terror. Then we looked at each other and did not wonder that our appearance had frightened the burglars. We were in white from head to foot, and with those masks, by the weird light of the candles, we must have looked like veritable ghosts.

"Tige, it appeared, had been lured into the stable and shut up, making it apparent that the burglars were men whom the dog knew. Mr. and Mrs. Livermore had been detained a few miles from home by a broken bridge.

"Frances and I rallied from our fright, hunted up Tige and sat up the remainder of the night, but nothing further occurred. The burglars had carried off nothing."

The Oasis In the Desert.

"No," said Percy de Goncourt, "I cannot modify my declaration. You are my pole star. Around you I must revolve. Without you I must become motionless, inert! Darling, you believe me, don't you?"

Sylvia McAllister looked up at him, with a mist in her great, fawnlike eyes, and, suddenly catching sight of his Adam's apple, cried out:

"Oh, heavens, Percy, what is that on your neck?"

"Where?" he exclaimed, a wild fear taking possession of him.

"There," the beautiful girl said, "right above your collar—that big lump there. Percy—tell me—you haven't swallowed your false teeth, have you?"

With a gay laugh the handsome young man explained what it was that had frightened his sweet companion and begged her to calm herself.

Sylvia McAllister was only 25; she had no brothers; her father and mother had been divorced while she was still in her teens, and it is little wonder that the sweet, innocent girl had been frightened, for Percy de Goncourt had an Adam's apple on him that stood out in bold relief and was calculated to attract attention almost anywhere.

"Ah, Sylvia," he resumed, after quiet had been restored, "tell me that you will be mine. I cannot exist without you. My life, as I look back upon it now, has been a dreary desert. Now I have found in you a fair oasis, where, instead of the lifeless waste of the past, all is sweet, fruitful and heavenly."

She put her soft, white arms around his neck, raised her rich red lips to his, and after a long, long, blissful kiss, murmured:

"And tell me, Percy, am I the first little oasis you've ever had?"

"Yes, darling," he replied, "I swear it."

With a glad cry she flung herself into his arms, and then when she had become calm again said:

"I wish I could have gone into the oasis business years ago."—Cleveland Leader.

Talking to Tennyson.

Arriving, I sent up my name and heard presently a rather heavy step in the adjoining room, and there stood in the doorway the most un-English looking man I had ever seen. He was tall and high shouldered, careless in dress, and, while he had a high and domed forehead, yet his brilliant eyes and tangled hair and beard gave him rather the air of a partially reformed Corsican bandit or else an imperfectly secularized Carmelite monk than of a decorous and well groomed Englishman. He greeted me shyly, gave me his hand, which was in those days a good deal for an Englishman, and then sidled up to the mantelpiece, leaned upon it and said, with the air of an aggrieved schoolboy: "I am rather afraid of you Americans. Your countrymen do not treat me very well. There was Bayard Taylor." And then he went into a long narration of some grievance incurred through an indiscreet letter of that well known journalist.

Strange to say, the effect of this curious attack was to put me perfectly at my ease. It was if I had visited Shakespeare and had found him in a pet because some one of my fellow countrymen had spelled his name wrong. I knew myself to be wholly innocent and to have no journalistic designs, nor did I ever during his lifetime describe the interview.—Colonel T. W. Higginson in Atlantic.

Force of Habit.

"Strong indeed is the force of habit," says the Buffalo Enquirer. "The police justice had formerly been a bartender. He had gone into politics and had been elected by a big majority. This was his first case. Mary McMannis was up before him for drunkenness. The justice looked at her for a minute and then said sternly, 'Well, what are you here for?' 'If ye please, yer honor,' said Mary, 'the copper beyant pulled me in, sayin I was drunk. An I don't drink, yer honor; I don't drink.' 'All right,' said the justice, his former bartender habit getting the best of him. 'All right; have a cigar.'"

ELEVATORS CARRY MILLIONS.

More Than Forty Thousand Passengers Each Hour In Thirty Buildings.

An estimate of the number of persons carried by elevators in New York business houses is purely a matter of conjecture. One of the members of a large firm engaged in the manufacture of elevators gave his estimate that 500,000 passengers are carried daily in about 30 of the sky scraping buildings alone. Another person connected with the same firm said that this estimate should be doubled to be correct.

It is difficult to keep a record of the persons using elevators. In the case of the elevated railroads, surface roads and other common carriers, the tickets or money collected can be used as a means of obtaining statistics, but nothing of this kind is possible with the elevators, which are patronized daily by thousands of persons who pay nothing for the privilege.

It is estimated that in the average building using several elevators trips are made about every minute and a half. One large retail store in Sixth avenue has 32 elevators. Many of the buildings have eight and ten, and the number in other buildings varies from one to six. Taking 30 buildings with six elevators, each carrying six passengers per trip, it will be seen that in one hour 43,200 passengers would be carried. In five busy hours 216,000 passengers would represent the number of persons carried in only 30 buildings. From this it may be seen that with thousands of elevators in use in New York the figures are enormous. In 1887 it was estimated that 16,000 persons were carried in one day by the two elevators in the Potter building.

In the clearing house 250 passengers patronize the elevator regularly between 12 and 1 o'clock. The New York Life building has eight elevators in operation, and it is reported that each elevator carries 2,000 passengers each day. In the Mutual Reserve building 5,000 passengers are carried daily. The Postal Telegraph building elevators average 2,700 hours' work per month. A low estimate of the number of passengers carried may be put at 300 passengers per hour, equal to 810,000 persons in one month. When it is remembered that this represents the service in one building, it will be seen that the amount of work done by elevators is vast.—New York Commercial.

QUEER QUESTIONS ASKED.

Some of the Conundrums With Which the Smithsonian Officials Are Assailed.

The doorkeepers of the Smithsonian institution have a hard time of it in answering the questions propounded them by the visitors to that place. These questions are original, if nothing else, and cover all varieties of subjects. One of the men who has been there for a number of years has become so accustomed to hearing these that he would not be surprised, he said, if some one should ask him gravely, where the right molar tooth of George Washington's grandmother's great aunt could be found. Neither would he think that the propounder of the question was a lunatic.

Strange to say, though in some places it might not be regarded as strange, most of these peculiar questions are asked by the feminine portion of the visitors to the institution. Some time ago a lady, who had every appearance of being such, in addition to having an intelligent face and cultivated manners, stepped up to a doorkeeper and inquired, in a tone of voice which showed that she was in earnest:

"Would you kindly direct me to the portion of the institution where I could find the relics from the Garden of Eden. I understand there are a number of them here, and I should like to see them very much."

The doorkeeper did not know whether she wished to see the traditional fig leaves or the core of the apple which Adam is related to have eaten with such dire results to the human race, but told her very frankly that the institution was not possessed of such treasures. The lady seemed surprised and stated that she had been informed correctly, she thought, that the relics were there. With an air of disappointment she went inside to see what else she could unearth.

One day recently another lady asked a doorkeeper where the bottles containing the elements of the universe were located. In spite of his experience in such things the doorkeeper was rather nonplused and shook his head.

"Why, I was told that they were here, and was also informed that they were kept in bottles for inspection," the lady said.

"The only elements of the universe that I know of," the doorkeeper replied, "are whisky, air and water, and they are common most everywhere, I believe, madam. Further than these I know of none."—Washington Star.

Field Sports In Shakespeare.

When I began to collect and arrange the allusions to field sports and to horses scattered throughout the writings of Shakespeare, nothing was further from my mind than to enter the field of criticism. But as my work progressed I discerned more and more clearly the true nature of these allusions, how they for the most part well up spontaneously as from the poet's inmost soul, and are seldom suggested by the plot or character in hand at the moment, with which indeed they are often out of keeping. And according as I became better acquainted with the works of his contemporaries it was more and more evident that this peculiar mode of thought does not happen to be shared by other dramatic writers of his age. Thus the thought was suggested that the presence or absence of this distinctive note might be of some aid in distinguishing the workmanship of Shakespeare from that of certain other dramatists with whom Shakespearean criticism is mainly concerned. From the admitted writings of Shakespeare it is never wholly absent. In the admitted works of Fletcher, Greene, Kyd or Marlowe, or in certain of the anonymous plays attributed to Shakespeare, it is never found.—"A Study of Shakespeare and of Elizabethan Sports," Right Hon. D. H. Madden.

The Mighty Cæsar.

It was on his way to the battlefield of Pharsala that Cæsar uttered the famous saying to the fishermen. He had come down to Brindisi to cross to Dyrrachium, and, finding no galley, commanded the owner of a small sailing boat to put him across the Adriatic. On the voyage a violent storm occurred, and even the experienced mariners were terrified, but the great captain said: "Have no fear! You carry Cæsar and his fortunes."

Paris consumes 209,000,000 liters of milk a year, which comes to about only two-fifths of a pint daily for each inhabitant. City cows yield 21,000,000 litres, suburban cows within a radius of 12 miles 53,000,000 liters. The remaining 153,000,000 liters come by rail from a greater distance.

GETTYSBURG.

Longstreet Says Lee Was Responsible For Pickett's Disastrous Charge.

Ever since the suppression of the rebellion historians have differed as to whether Lee or Longstreet was responsible for the disaster at Gettysburg, the friends of each claiming the other was to blame. The narrator was present on the scene of the great battle a few years ago when the great soldiers, both Union and Confederate, who had mingled in that bloody fray met there again for the first time since the memorable events of 30 years before. Longstreet made little concealment then regarding his contention that it was Lee who ordered the disastrous Pickett charge and lost the day. On that occasion many errors of history were recorded. The guide who directed the movements of the distinguished party adopted a bold move to surprise Longstreet into a declaration of his feeling on the subject. Said he, standing beside the Confederate leader, who held a sound gathering hand to his dulled ear: "When the flower of Virginia's chivalry, Pickett's division, arrived on the night of the second day, General Lee determined to employ these fresh troops to make an assault the next day on Cemetery hill under cover of a terrific cannonading by General Alexander's guns, while an assault in the rear was to be made at the same time by General Stuart's cavalry, who had been sent around to the left for that purpose. It is generally believed, General Longstreet, that he ordered this in the face of your protest; that he commanded Pickett to take this commanding position occupied by the Union troops."

Longstreet's face glowed with suppressed excitement. In a voice that showed no quaver of age and at the same time striking forth with his right arm as though he would smite a foe he cried out: "He said, 'We'll strike them right here; we'll strike them right here.'"

And with a repetition of Lee's words the arm again shot forth. The guide told how Pickett's men had marched to their death across the wheatfield.

"What is the distance from here to where they emerged from the woods?" asked Longstreet abruptly.

"Exactly one mile and a quarter," was the response.

"Ah!" exclaimed the veteran. "Lee said before the charge that the distance was 1,140 yards. I said it was a mile. I was nearer right than he. In all history prior to that time there were never charges of a greater distance than 600 or 700 yards. Then there was never before a charge of such length."—Philadelphia Times.

KEY CONCEALED IN A RING.

It Occupied Only a Small Space, but Unlocked Everything.

A Cincinnatian but lately returned from England tells of a rather novel innovation in the way of locks and keys, or, to speak more correctly, key.

At a country place he visited he was surprised to see his host unlock the gateway of the place with a small key that in some mysterious way was produced from a large seal ring he wore. Yet the ring was not large enough to be conspicuous by reason of its size or style. As he expressed some surprise in the matter his host said:

"This is a master key. You see, it slides under the set in the ring and occupies no space whatever. It will unlock every lock about the place, even my dressing bag, my trunk, my bond box and wine cellar."

He was asked as to the arrangement in general, whether one key, say of the butler, would unlock the front door.

"Not at all," he replied. "The locks are all arranged in suits. The butler can unlock all the doors that are in his department, and the housekeeper can unlock the linen closets and other doors under her supervision, but she cannot get into the butler's domain. And in every other department about the place from end to end every one has his or her key, but I have only the master key. All of the doors open to me. My valet can open my dressing case and closets, but he cannot get a bottle of wine. Of course the arrangement in a seal ring is novel, but it is very handy for me. In the first place, I cannot lose it, and in the second place, everything opens to me without asking a question."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Saved His Life by a Jest.

Amelia Wofford tells of "The Court Jesters of England" in St. Nicholas. The author says of one of them:

Archee Armstrong was the well beloved jester of King James VI of Scotland, afterward James I of England, and this is the traditional story of their introduction:

"One day a shepherd with the carcass of a sheep upon his shoulders was tracked to his cottage on the moorlands by the officers of justice. In the cottage they found a vacant faced lad rocking a cradle with more attention than a boy is accustomed to give that duty. This, however, did not arouse their suspicions. They searched the cottage thoroughly, but failed to discover the sheep. They were about to depart when one of their number accidentally looked into the cradle, and the stolen sheep lay there. The lad, who was supposed to be the thief, was brought before King James VI of Scotland. He was tried, convicted and sentenced to die. He began to plead with the king. He was a poor, ignorant fellow, he said. He had heard of the Bible and would like to read it through before he died. Would the king respite him until he did so? The king readily gave his consent, whereupon the culprit immediately said, 'Then hang me if I ever read a word o't as lang as my een are open.'"

The witty reply captured the king. He pardoned the prisoner and took him into his service as jester. In this capacity Archee was soon a prime favorite.

A Curious Widow's Cap.

A very curious cap forms the "widow's weeds" of the Australia aborigine in one part of the great island continent. Near the northeast bend of the Murray river it is the custom for widows to attend upon the tombs of their departed lords. Then, after shaving their heads, they cover them with pipe clay, kneaded into a paste. The head is first covered with a net to prevent the clay from sticking too tightly to the skin—a misfortune which is partly averted by the amount of grease with which every Australian native is anointed. A layer of this clay several inches in thickness is plastered over the head, and when dry forms a sort of skull cap exactly fitting the head on which it was molded. As it weighs several pounds, the widow's cap cannot be comfortable.

The cocoanut tree is the most valuable of plants. Its wood furnishes beams, rafters and planks; its leaves, umbrellas and clothing; its fruit, food, oil, intoxicants and sugar; its shells, domestic utensils; its fibers, ropes, sails and matting.

The oldest statue in the world is of the sheik of an Egyptian village. It is believed to be not less than 6,000 years old.

SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT,
April, 1898.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court.

RESPECTFULLY represents Michael McDonald of Newton in said County, that on the first day of May, 1862, Josiah Rutter of Waltham in said County, conveyed to your petitioner, by warranty deed, recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, Book 880, Page 258, a certain parcel of land situated in said Newton, and bounded and described as follows, to wit: "beginning at the northeast corner of the premises at a private way leading from Moody Street,and by land now or late of E. H. Derby; thence running southwesterly on said Derby's land, six hundred and ninety-nine (699) feet to land of Patrick Gannon; thence northwesterly on said Gannon's land, two hundred and fifty-two and two tenths (252 2-10) feet, to land of Francis Buttrick; thence northeasterly on said Buttrick's land six hundred and ninety-eight (698) feet to said private way from Moody Street; thence on said private way southeasterly two hundred and fifty-two and two tenths (252 2-10) feet to the point of beginning: containing four acres more or less, being a part of the premises conveyed to said Rutter by S. B. Whitney and others by deed dated May 6th, 1858, with the right of way to Main Street named in deed of F. C. Lowell to S. B. Whitney and others."

That your petitioner thereafter continued to own the said premises until June 28, 1897, on which date he conveyed the same together with other lands, in fee with covenants of title and warranty to Mark C. Meagher of Brookline in the County of Norfolk and said Commonwealth, which deed to said Meagher was recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, Book 2572, Page 432.

That on April 1, 1861, said Josiah Rutter mortgaged the said premises together with other land to The Waltham Mutual Loan & Fund Association to secure the payment of One thousand dollars ($1,000) in six months from the date of said mortgage, which mortgage was recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, Book 859, Page 212; that the said Josiah Rutter, the mortgagor and those having his estate in the premises, have been in uninterrupted possession of the said premises for more than twenty years after the expiration of the time limited in said mortgage for the full performance of the conditions thereof, and that for more than twenty years no payment on account of the debt secured by said mortgage has been made, nor during that period has said mortgage been in any way recognized as a valid mortgage, but that the record title to said real estate is incumbered by reason of said mortgage being undischarged.

WHEREFORE your petitioner prays that this Honorable Court will, after due notice to all parties interested, make a decree for the settlement of the title to the real estate above described under the provisions of Chap. 237 of the Acts of 1882, and Chap. 427 of the Acts of 1890.

NONANTUM.

—Rev. Daniel Greene is enjoying a vacation.

—Miss Fannie Beales is working at the Carpet lining factory.

—Charity lodge of Good Templars held a strawberry festival and sociable last Wednesday evening.

—Micilo Lupo, Angellica Dombazu and Pasquelle Tombazio of this district were in court last Saturday charged with disturbance. They were fined $5.

—James Gallagher, driver for Ferrin's express company of Watertown, reported to the police last Friday that a bundle was stolen from his wagon on Watertown street. Gallagher says the package was about a foot long but did not know what it contained.

—Thanks to the energetic and enterprising members of hose 8 company, Nonantum has had its flag-raising. The occasion was most fittingly marked by a program of exercises full worthy of a public demonstration of patriotism. The event will always be remembered by the residents of the village as one which marked an important epoch, manifesting the spirit of the times in this place. Over 3000 men, women and children gathered at the corner of Bridge and Watertown streets, standing on the street and sidewalks opposite hose 8 house where the ceremony took place. A band stationed on the lawn discoursed patriotic airs. Shortly after 8 o'clock the guests of the evening with members of the company took seats in front of a temporary stand. The latter was handsomely decorated with flags and bunting. Master-of-ceremonies Joseph Nevins made the opening address, and was followed by Aldermen Nagle and Forknall. At the close of Mr. Forknall's speech a little daughter of Mr. Frank Boughan released the flag, and it was flung to the breeze amid an outburst of cheers, the ringing of bells, booming of cannons and an elaborate display of red fire. As soon as the applause had subsided, Mr. Daniel J. Gallagher mounted the speaker's stand and made a very stirring address. He spoke chiefly of the need of volunteers, and directed those who wish to enlist as to the proper plan for entering the service. Among the guests were members of the city government and representative citizens. 'Lieut. Robert W. Daley and an detachment from Co. C were present, and witnessed the ceremony. The committee which had the affair in charge included Driver M. Turner, Capt. Murray, Messrs. Joseph Nevins, E. J. Burke, F. Turner, F. Boughan and Dr. D. W. Stearns. At the close of the evening refreshments were served.

—Mr. Plunkett has moved from California street to Chapel street.

—Mr. Wilkes, shoesmith of Crescent street, has gone to Lowell.

—A petition is being circulated for a police box to be located on California street.

—The public bath house was opened this week, and is in charge of Mr. C. E. Davis.

—The Nonantum Industrial school will begin its eleventh year Tuesday, July 5th. 2t.

—Miss Goldie Roy was in charge of the meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. last Sunday evening.

—Mr. George F. Barthelmes has opened a bake shop in his new building on West street.

—The Fourth of July picnic at the North church will be held in the new Robert's grove, Waltham.

—Mr. and Mrs. Wischart of California street are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter.

—Mr. Francis Weldon of California street left last week for Colorado, where he has obtained a position.

—Miss Margaret Moore of Philadelphia will spend the summer with her aunt, Mrs. Galway of California street.

—Mr. E. P. Burnham, who has purchased the Town estate on California street, is making extensive improvements.

—Miss Jennie Cairns of California street has gone to Philadelphia where she will spend the summer with her sister.

—Rev. E. Y. Mullins of the First Baptist church, Newton Centre, will preach at the Beulah Mission next Sunday afternoon.

—Mr. Arthur S. Kelly of Auburndale gave an address at the North church last Sunday morning. Rev. William H. Davis of the Eliot church, Newton, preached at the evening service.

—Mr. James E. McCabe of 8 Middle street is reported missing since June 15. He was last seen in West Newton on that day. He is described as 40 years of age, 5 feet 7 inches in height, with dark curly hair. He wore a black coat and hat, dark trousers and a blue necktie. Up to the time of his disappearance Mr. McCabe held the position as collector at the Cambridge office of the metropolitan life insurance company.

Spirited Athletes at Riverside.

The Recreation Grounds at Riverside was the scene of spirited athletic contests both Friday and Saturday of last week. On Bunker Hill Day was held the second of a series of athletic meets under the joint auspices of the Boston Physical Educational Society, and the Boston Turnverein, was somewhat of a novelty. Turners from Boston, Roxbury, Malden, Manchester, and others participated. The affair was directed by Herman J. Boos, physical director of the grounds and of the M. I. T.

The program included club swinging by a class of women, and competition horizontal and parallel bar exercises, and an interesting exhibition of iron wand swinging.

Saturday afternoon the sixth annual interstate athletic meet of the Young Men's Christian Associations of Massachusetts and Rhode Island was held. Some 75 amateurs from Boston, Cambridge, Malden, Melrose, Fitchburg, Pawtucket and Providence participated.

The contestants were handicapped by a heavy wind, which blew steadily across the track all the afternoon, but despite this some excellent records were made.

The program included individual competition and all around team contests between Lynn and Boston, the latter in shot put, running high jump and 300 yards run. The Lynn men carried off a major part of the honors in the individual contests, and S. G. Ellis of Lynn won the individual championship, with a total score of 371 points.

In the team contest Boston won first place, total 1229 points, against Lynn's 1193 points.

A First-Class, Respectable, Comfortable Home In New York.

Thousands of people would like to spend a week in New York, but the grand hotels are too expensive, and the cheap ones are too cheap. Mr. Tilley Haynes, of Boston, has made a great success of his famous Broadway Central Hotel: the location is absolutely unequalled for business, sightseeing, or pleasure. The new Cable Cars on Broadway reach every fashionable Store, Theatre, and Attraction of the City, and transfer with all cross-town lines, reaching every Station, Dock, and Ferry in town. Guests arriving at Grand Central Depot, Forty-Second Street, can take Lexington Avenue Cable Cars, one block east of the Station, direct to the Hotel, or Fourth Avenue Cars direct to Astor Place or Bond Street, one block in front.

LYNCHED FOR LYING.

RUSSIAN BILL TOLD THE TRUTH AT LAST, BUT TOO LATE.

With His Swagger and Bluff He Had Convinced Grant County That He Was One of the Rustlers—He Was a Russian Nobleman, but Nobody Would Believe Him.

"I don't care what you say, gentlemen," and the young Texan looked around in triumph on the little group. "I never heard or knew of a man lynched but for crime, and crime of which any jury would have found him guilty, and don't you forget it."

"I once knew of a man who was lynched down in my territory for lyin," quietly broke in the ex-sheriff from New Mexico, "an that's not much of a crime anyway. The necktie party came off in Grant county when I was a deputy under Harvey H. Whitehill.

"It happened in this wise: It was in 1882 an all the people in the southwestern part of the territory were in an ugly temper. The Lincoln county war, that left hundreds of honest settlers without the homes that they had lawfully taken up in the Pecos valley, had ended in the killin of 'Billy the Kid' by Sheriff Pat Garrett, but the rustlers were still in possession of the San Simon valley an were stealin the stock of the people on both sides of the line an reapin a rich harvest. They would steal horses an mules an run 'em over to the Mexican side into Chihuahua an Sonora an then steal Mexican cattle an run 'em over to our side. There was a fine market for stock on our side with the government contractors for the San Carlos an Muscalero Indian agencies, not to speak of the military posts. On the other hand, the Mexicans never looked the gift American horse too close in the mouth or were particular in the matter of a bill of sale. The rustlers had powerful friends in two Mexican states an two United States territories, so a man that didn't want his hide filled too full of bullets to skin 'lowed that he had better lay low.

"'Curly' Bill was the leader of the San Simon gang an his lieutenant was Johnny Price, 'Johnny Over the Fence.' Then there was 'Cactus' Bill an a kid of 16, Johnny Hughes, known along the Gila valley as 'the Kid of the San Simon.' There was about 20 in all in the gang, but the others didn't have any record to blow on.

"The town of Shakespeare—why it was ever called Shakespeare I never could make out except that it was a little Hamlet—is within easy reach of the San Simon, an it was to it the gang came at intervals to blow themselves in an paint the town red. They raised hades an spent their stuff freely enough round the saloons, but they never left without payin a visit to O. R. Smyth's or some of the other big corrals an runnin off more stock than they had left the value of behind.

"About this time Bill Tetterburn turned up at Shakespeare. He was a fine lookin fellow. He stood 6 feet in his socks, built in proportion an with features clear cut as a marble statue. He wore his hair, that was jet black, long an fallin over his shoulders in the old frontier fashion. He was a regular dude too. Outside Charley Utter, who was Wild Bill's pard up in Wyoming, I never saw a chap put on more style—$5 goldpieces for buttons for his buckskins, Mexican sombrero covered with silver work an two silver plated an ivory handled six shooters an all that kind. He hailed from Wyoming, too—leastwise he said he did—an when it was found out that he was a Russian born the boys gave him the name of Russian Bill to distinguish him from the other Bills.

"Well, Russian Bill always had plenty of money, an spent it freely. The boys wondered where he got it. He didn't prospect an had no minin claims to sell or bond, an all that stood to his name on the recorder's books was a ranch location in the Animas valley, yet he was always flush. He used to go away for weeks at a time an always come back with money to burn. When Curly or his crowd was in town, he would make a point of goin around swaggerin with them, an in Rocksey's saloon he'd drop hints when half loaded of bein one of the gang an talk of successful raids among the Mexican ranches up Janos way. Then he was handy with his six shooter, an used to show the boys some trick shots. They'd give him taffy to liquor at his expense, an when he was jollied as bein quick on the draw he'd give it to be understood that he had dropped his man more nor once.

"About this time things were gettin worse than ever around Shakespeare, an what Mr. Seth Low would call 'the better element' was gettin desperate. So one night when Sandy King, a suspected horse thief, came to town with a kid of 15, they were both arrested an lodged in the calaboose on a warrant from old Judge Graves.

"An hour after a mob took them out an up to Smyth's corral. On their way they met Russian Bill an took him also along. Judge Lynch 'lowed that Sandy had lived long enough for the good of the community, an that on his own confession it was about time for Bill to stack his chips an quit, as he couldn't play a square game.

"Sandy took his medicine like a little man. Only asked for a drink an a cigarette. When he had finished smokin, he threw away the end an was swung up to a cross beam in the corral. It wasn't so with poor Bill. He fell on his knees an swore by the eternal that he had never killed a man in his life anywhere an had never stolen a horse nor a horse blanket. He said that his money came from his home in Riga, Russia; that he was a nobleman, an that his mother was a countess. He begged them for the love of God not to string him up until he could write to Porter an Crawford, the Silver City bankers, where his money was. They didn't believe a word he said an spurned him for a white livered cuss not fit to live anyway. Judge Lynch couldn't wait, an kickin an howlin for mercy he was strung up after Sandy.

"His story was true all right. Three months after the lynchin a letter came to Harvey Whitehill, sheriff of the county, from some Russian countess. I disremember her name, but it ended in 'offsky,' like all of them, inquirin about her son, last heard of in Grant county, N. M."

"And the kid?"

"They let him off with a sound whipping with a Mexican quirt. He died a few months after over to Tombstone of smallpox."—New York Sun.

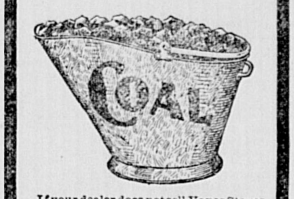

A Talleyrand Message.

In the irony of social exchange, I wonder if invitations are ever written in the spirit of Talleyrand's message to the lord who had offended him? Few can wield the scorpion lash of such politeness as this:

DEAR LORD BLANK—Will you oblige me with your company on Wednesday next at 8 o'clock? I have invited a number of exceedingly clever people and do not like to be the only fool among them.

—Stuart Rand, the young son of Mr. Avery L. Rand of Centre street, was climbing an apple tree in his father's orchard, Monday afternoon, when he missed his footing and fell to the ground. His arm was dislocated at the elbow joint, and broken in two places. He was picked up by members of the family and removed to his home.

—The Fourth of July committee of the Woman's Club and Improvement Association have a fine program in preparation. The Bedford lecture on the history of the U. S. flag, day and evening fireworks, athletic sports, and a fine program in Bray hall at 11 a. m., with the Waltham Watch Co. band, morning and evening, will give a day full of enjoyment. The evening fireworks on the lake will afford a splendid scene. All Newton will be there.

—Last Friday afternoon, Patrolman Johnson of the mounted squad arrested Frank Haradon of Boston, on the charge of illegally transporting liquor. The arrest was made on Boylston street, in the Oak hill district, near the Brookline line. At the same time the contents of Haradon's wagon, belonging to the Elmwood brewery and comprising 20 cases and 3 kegs of beer, were seized. In court, Saturday morning, Haradon entered a plea of guilty to the charge of illegally transporting liquor, and paid a fine of $50.

—One of Newton Centre's prettiest June brides this season was Miss Marion Ward Rising, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Rising, who was married Wednesday evening to Mr. William Mark Noble, also of Newton Centre. The ceremony took place in the First Congregational church at 7.30 o'clock, and was performed by Rev. E. M. Noyes, the pastor, assisted by Rev. Edwin L. Noble of Brockton, brother of the groom. The interior of the edifice was elaborately decorated with a profusion of daisies. On the platform was a large bank of palms and ferns, while on the front of the pews were festoons of rhododendrons and peonies. The bride was beautifully gowned in peau de soie, trimmed with mouseline de soie, and pearl passementerie. She wore a tulle veil caught up with a spray of orange blossoms. She carried bride roses. Miss Margaret Burnham of Boston was maid of honor, wore white muslin trimmed with pink, and carried pink roses. The bridesmaids, Miss Clara O. Bond of Newton Centre, and Miss Margaret Sutermeister of Blue Hill, Milton, were gowned in white muslin over pink and carried daisies. The best man was Mr. Arthur S. Davis of Wyoming, Mass., and the ushers Messrs. Fred C. and William D. Rising, brothers of the bride, William D. Grueby of Chelsea, G. F. Wales, Appleton W. Smith, and A. Farley Brewer of this place. Following the marriage ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Beacon street, which was attended only by the relatives and immediate friends. Mr. and Mrs. Noble were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Rising, and Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Noble.

—The late Hon. J. F. C. Hyde left his sick room, and as was his custom, superintended the planting of peas, in the early spring, on a favored spot of ground with a southern exposure, and we hear that Mrs. Hyde had green peas on her dinner table the 14th of June.

—Rev. T. W. Bishop will preach at the Methodist church next Sunday morning. In the evening at 7.30 there will be a service of special interest. Dean Alfred A. Wright, D. D., will speak, and the quartet will be assisted by the distinguished soloist, Mr. Geo. W. Shepard, who will sing as a solo "Jesus Lover of my soul," and possibly "The Holy City." Young people are especially welcome.

—Bunker Hill Day was considered by the management of the Working Boys' Home as a most appropriate date for a flag raising and so, precisely at 1 o'clock, "old glory" was unfurled from the tower of the building by Rev. J. J. Farrelly, superintendent of the establishment, to the strains of the "Star Spangled Banner" from the members of the brass band and fife and drum corps of the home, and amidst the cheers of the boys who were gathered below in front of the main entrance. It was both a picturesque and patriotic scene. The musicians were stationed in the tower balcony. The band played all the patriotic airs incidental to such occasions, and in addition sang the national anthem. It was a very creditable observance. The musical rendition was very praiseworthy and reflected great credit both on the youthful performers and their painstaking instructor, and would have elicted commendation from even the most fastidious critics.

He lived for twenty years at Honolulu, and spoke in the highest terms of the American residents in the islands. They are men of high Christian character, and are acting in the best interests of the native population. Mr. Gilman paid a high tribute to the work of missionaries in Hawaii and to their children who are today among the foremost citizens of Honolulu.

—A concert was given under the auspices and for the benefit of the Epworth League at the Methodist church, on Thursday evening, at which a choice program was presented, consisting of piano solos by Miss Copeland, vocal selections by the church quartet, Miss Cooke soprano, Miss Warren alto, Mr. Wm. E. Moore tenor, and Mr. G B. Warren bass. Instrumental music by Mr. Charles Farnham and Mr. Elisha Clark, with the mandolin, and Mr. Harold Shaw with guitar. Mrs. E. M. Ryder was the accompanist at the piano, also readings by Miss A. M. Bartlett of Newtonville. The delightful June evening, the choice floral decoration, and the fine rendering of the musical selections and readings combined, made an entertainment to call forth the highest commendation of the audience.

SOUGHT DEATH BY DROWNING.

SUICIDE OF MRS. CHARLES J. BROWN OF NEWTON CENTRE—HER REMAINS FOUND IN CRYSTAL LAKE AFTER A NIGHT'S SEARCH.

While a score of anxious friends, aided by the police, were making a diligent search that they might locate her whereabouts, Mrs. Charles J. Brown of Langley road, Newton Centre, had found a suicide's grave beneath the waters of Crystal Lake.

Suffering from mental aberration, and feeling that her life was entirely devoid of its bright side, she wandered aimlessly about the city all day and a portion of the night. Before the dawn of another day, however, despondency had caused her to take her own life.

About 1.30 o'clock yesterday Patrolman Richard Taffe found her dead body lying in three feet of water near the upper end of Crystal Lake. Leaving home Wednesday morning, Mrs. Brown told her friends that she was going to Boston to do some shopping. When darkness set in and she did not return, they became alarmed, and invoked the assistance of the police. Immediately an active and systematic hunt was begun.

An acquaintance was found who had met her during the afternoon at Norumbega Park. Later some one else reported having seen her alight from a car in Newton Centre square during the early evening. No further trace was obtained until Patrolman Taffe, while covering his beat on Lake avenue saw the remains of the unfortunate woman in the lake. He immediately procured a boat and brought the body to the shore. Assistant Medical Examiner Utley viewed the remains, and later they were taken to Pratt's undertaking rooms.

Mrs. Brown was 54 years old, and had lived in Newton Centre for several years. She was a sister of Mrs. Horatio Carter of Newtonville. A woman of unusual social accomplishments, and possessing a very charitable disposition, she had a large circle of friends.

For some time she had been suffering from partial paralysis. This, it is thought, may have led her to end her life.

NEWTON CLUB.

Wednesday evening the fourth in its series of promenade concerts was given by the club, and it was by far the most successful yet held, being attended by fully 1200 persons, representing the society sets of the Newtons, Chestnut Hill, Brookline, and Boston. As on previous occasions, the grounds were inclosed by high canvas screens, along which were arranged many colored electric globes. Incandescent lights were also hung about the grounds in long festoons, all centering in a blaze of light in the centre. Bunting was also used in carrying out the decorative effects. At the west side of the grounds, on a platform was seated the Boston Cadet band, which under the direction of Mr. Frank E. Partridge, rendered a fine program. During the music the canvas covered tennis courts were cleared, and dancing was enjoyed by more than 300 young people. Refreshments were served at numerous small tables about the lawns and verandas. A feature during the evening was the singing, through a megaphone, of "Annie Laurie" and other popular airs by Mr. Clarence Ashenden of Auburndale.

The Warren Memorial.

The exercises commemorating the late Levi Farwell Warren, master of the Peirce school at West Newton, will be held at 7.45 p. m., Tuesday, June 28th, in the new school building, Chestnut street, West Newton. On this occasion the Warren Memorial Hall will be dedicated. The program will include the following: Singing by a chorus from the school, under the direction of Mr. Horace W. Walton; address by Col. Thomas Wentworth Higginson. Brief addresses are expected from the mayor and other citizens. The people of Newton are invited, especially the former pupils of Mr. Warren, and their parents. The hall has been decorated and adorned with works of art. A bronze tablet on the wall bears a suitable inscription. The expense of all has been met by contributions from friends of Mr. Warren.

—A strawberry and ice cream festival will be held at the Baptist church on next Wednesday evening.

—One of the most successful social events of the season was the musicale given by the Echo Glee Club to their friends, Wednesday evening, at the home of the president, Mr. John Coward, Eliot street. The spacious rooms were artistically decorated with ferns, roses, and wild flowers, which added to the charm of the occasion. A delightful program was given by the various members of the club, consisting of choruses, quartets, and solos, assisted by Mr. Barlow, violinist. A piano solo by Miss Hildreth was the first number. The selections by Mrs. Cooper were rendered in her usual pleasing manner, the Echo Song and Angels Serenade with violin obligato, being especially beautiful. All were pleased to hear for the first time Mr. Arthur Thompson, whose fine tenor voice made the "Holy City" an impressive selection. The bass solos by Mr. E. H. Newell were heartily received, and Mr. Barlow charmed all by his fine execution of the classic "Reverie." After listening to this choice program, refreshments were served on the lawn and with Japanese lanterns and colored lights, the scene was indeed a picturesque one. Previous to the departure of the guests, the gentlemen assembled beneath the trees and gave songs which brought to a close an enjoyable evening. The club is to be congratulated on this, their first musicale and it is hoped they will continue next season.

No Cars For Three Hours.

For three hours Wednesday morning the entire system of the Newton & Boston street railway was tied up, leaving would-be passengers without means of traveling from out-of-the way places, to the centre of business.

The tieup was the result of an accident at the power station on Homer street, which for a time threatened to have more serious results. At 6.12 o'clock just as the engines were being put under full pressure for the heavy work of the morning, a steam pipe angle in the large engine blew off.

The engine room was filled with steam, and the escaping steam made another and more serious explosion imminent. This was averted by the coolness of the engineer, Patrick Pendegast, who made his way through the scalding steam, stopped the engine and drew the fires.

He escaped serious injury, but received a number of bad burns about the face and arms.

It was three hours before the damage could be repaired. In the meantime early morning cars were stopped at all points on the system, and other cars, which should have begun their trips, were detained in the car houses.

The tieup extended to the Commonwealth avenue division, the Watertown, Newton Highlands and Needham line, the Newton Centre line and the Wellesley and Boston division.

Hundreds of passengers were delayed, and ultimately obliged to walk to their destination. The trouble was most serious on the Commonwealth avenue line, where other means of location were not available.

It was 9 o'clock before power was secured again, and several hours later before cars were running again on schedule time.

The trouble extended to the Newton street railway line on Washington street, which is operated jointly with the Wellesley & Boston. Power was obtainable on only one track, and the Waltham line was reduced to running on a one-track schedule.

Nurses Graduated.

Forming one of the largest classes in the history of the institution twelve young ladies, whose faithful services and untiring patience in administering to the sick have won for them those much-coverted diplomas, were graduated as nurses from the Newton Hospital Training school, Tuesday afternoon.

The interesting exercises were held in the parlors of the Nurses Home, and many prominent ladies and gentlemen, including several physicians, witnessed the ceremony. About the rooms were elaborate floral decorations. The graduates wearing their customary muslin caps and aprons looked most attractive, and the entire scene was one to call forth remarks of praise and commendation.

The program was as follows: piano duet Miss Kelley and Miss Abbott, prayer Rev. E. M. Noyes, address Rev. G. W. Shinn, vocal solo Mr. H. P. Ayer, presentation of certificates Hon. J. R. Leeson, bestowing the badges Mrs. William I. Allen, song Mrs. Lewis R. Speare. The graduating class of '98 includes Alberta Curren, Mary McNutt, Gertrude Melick, Florence Blair, Everina Hall, Hannah Lyfe, Lottie Corbett, Ellen Hazen, Alice Sleeper, Isabelle Devereaux, Julia Smith and Mary Ann Graham.

At the close of the exercises the graduates held an informal reception, and refreshments were served.

The Training School Alumni held a meeting Wednesday afternoon and consid red plans for the coming year.

REAL ESTATE.

Several sales are reported from Waban. Mrs. J. L. G. Wiley has purchased a frame house and 17,500 feet of land on Chestnut street belonging to J. W. Heaton; Mrs. Ida E. Davidson, the frame dwelling and 12,000 feet of land on Plainfield street, owned by Henry H. Hunt, and Mrs. Meta H. Nickerson a 10-room house and 13,000 feet feet of land on Waban avenue, from the receivers of the Framingham Savings bank.

Ex-Mayor Henry E. Bothfeld has sold 8230 feet of land on Washington street, West Newton, opposite Robinson's block. It has a frontage of 103 feet, is assessed for $8000, and was purchased by Max Weiner. The latter transfers to Mr. Bothfeld the frame house of 10 rooms and 12,500 feet of land No. 50 Newtonville avenue, Newton. The property is assessed for $6000.

The choice lots on Farlow Hill are being quietly absorbed, the sales and contracts through W. S. & F. Edmands comprising, in addition to earlier sale of lot 73 to Mr. George C. Travis, lot 65 to Mr. J. H. Wheeler, jr., lot 53 to Mr. F. B. Converse, lot 72 to Mr. J. E. Hills, lot 32 to Mr. C. W. Smith of Providence, and lot 7 to Mr. W. J. Dimock, on all of which fine residences are in process of erection. Sales for future improvement are lots 36, 37, 49, and 50 to Mr. Lewis H. Farlow. Water and gas mains are laid and sewer is nearly done, rendering possible the speedy completion of streets and grading of lots. Other recent sales by the same firm are choice building tract with frontage of 450 feet on Walker street, Newtonville, from Harrington heirs to Messrs. Higgins and Nickerson, for first-class development. The Lincoln estate, Church and Main streets, Watertown, comprising house, stable, and about 3-4 acre of land to Mr. Conant, for improvement. The choice corner lot of the Geo. C. Lord estate, corner of Franklin street and Waterston road, containing 22,000 feet, to Mr. Wallace H. Foss, who will build thereon a fine colonial house for occupancy.

JOHNNIES AND YANKEES.

The Johnnies and Yankees march shoulder to shoulder,
Old Glory floats over the "grey" and the "blue,"
A strong combination those colors when blended,
They will "wash" ev'ry time and hold good as new.
But oh let us hurry and have done with battles,
God hasten the day when wars shall all cease,
When the blue and the grey and also the yellow,
Shall follow one Captain, the dear Prince of Peace.
